House Group Attacks Defense Profiteering

War Plants' Profits Ranged to 247%; Committee Splits On Union Angle

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

The House Naval Affairs Committee last night made public its long-awaited compilation of facts and figures on the "excessive and unconscionable" profits of American war production and named big corporations and organized labor among the principal beneficiaries.

By linking a sharp rise in the assets of labor unions with profiteering on the part of capital, the committee's report on a "partial" examination of naval contracts, started last April, caused a wide split among the body's membership.

Nine members of the 27-man committee refused to sign the report. Eight of them joined in a "minority view" that commended the committee's work and agreed "with most of the conclusions reached," but declared they would be unable to sign unless "there is a revision of conclusions and statements regarding labor."

Strike of Capital Cited

One member of the committee, Representative Shannon (Democrat), of Missouri, wrote a minority report of his own. He cited capital's "sit-down strike" for "excess profits as a condition of participation in the defense effort," and declared "the very existence" of profiteering by business to have been a "constant incitation to labor" to stop work.

The committee called on Congress to put an end to individual profits that, it found, have "ranged as high as 247 per cent," with many earnings of "60 per cent or more." It listed the names of 15 large corporations whose $2,342,705,137 worth of contracts represent 60.24 per cent of all contracts examined.

To demonstrate the "necessity" of Congressional action on the first recommendation of its report—that "some method of profit limitation should be adopted to eliminate profiteering"—the committee singled out for attention of the House:

Huge Profits

"The 27 per cent profit realized on a competitive-bid contract by the Cleveland Diesel Engine Division of General Motors amounting to more than 2 million dollars" and "the profits realized by the Bath Iron Works, ranging from $850,000 to $1,125,000 and all in excess of 15 per cent and in one instance as high as 29 per cent."

These firms were included on the committee's list of 15 big-business

Gas Price Boosts Will Bring Ceiling, Henderson Warns

By the Associated Press

Retail dealers in all grades of gasoline received notice from Price Administrator Henderson yesterday that their prices must remain at or below the level of last November 7, or a price ceiling will be imposed.

The warning was contained in a general letter to producers, refiners and marketers of petroleum products clarifying price questions on petroleum and a list of specified petroleum products which temporarily are pegged at the November 7 level.

While gasoline sold at service stations, curbside pumps, marine service stations and other retail outlets was not formally included in the list of affected products, Henderson's letter said:

"It must be understood, however, that these prices should remain substantially at or below November 7 levels. If they do not, a formal ceiling order will be promulgated placing them under full control."

Republicans Gain Connecticut Seat

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 20 (INS).—Election of Joseph E. Talbot, a Republican, as a Congressman to represent Connecticut's Fifth District was conceded tonight by his Democratic rival, John S. Monagan.

With returns lacking from only five small towns, all normally Republican, Talbot had a plurality of about 3100, and Monagan admitted defeat. Talbot will succeed Congressman J. Joseph Smith (Democrat), who has been appointed a Federal district court judge.

'Strong Counter Measures'

Axis Subs Attack More Ships In Atlantic; Navy Strikes Back

U-Boats Extend Forays Against Shipping From Cape Hatteras to Newfoundland

The Navy announced last night that the Axis submarines raiding shipping along the Atlantic seaboard have attacked other vessels.

And hinting that its patrol craft have already retaliated for the three Allied tankers sunk and one damaged, the Navy Department cryptically added:

"Strong countermeasures are being taken by units of the Navy's East Coastal Command."

There was no elaboration of this terse statement nor of the declaration that there have been other U-boat attacks over a wide area.

"Enemy submarine activity is continuing off the east coast of North America from Cape Hatteras to Newfoundland," Navy communique No. 31 reported.

"The sinkings of the tankers Norness, Coimbra and Allan Jackson have been accompanied by attacks on other vessels within the territorial limits of the United States." the term "territorial limits" was not to be taken in its strict legal meaning as denoting that the attacks were within the three or 12 mile limits. They have been very close in, however, it is understood.

It was explained informally that Announcement of the results of the "strong countermeasures" taken by American patrol ships and planes against the coastal raiders is prohibited under a policy fixed by the Government several months ago.

Individual sinkings of enemy subs will not be announced, it was decided, in order to keep the Axis guessing and thus weaken the morale of their undersea service. From time to time, however, totals of U-boats destroyed will be disclosed without referring to specific cases.

Secretary of the Navy Knox announced last month that the United States Navy had accounted for 14 enemy submarines to date, and it is expected that the first word of the results of the present warfare will come in this way later.

Nelson Orders Car Production To Halt Feb. 1

Some Plants May Stay Open 10 Days Longer to Fill January Quotas

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Supported by a blanket Presidential approval of his plans for a vast shakeup of the war production program, Donald M. Nelson last night gave a foretaste of two-fisted acton to follow by ordering the complete stoppage of further passenger car and light truck production, effective February 1.

In his first order since his appointment as chairman of the War Productions Board, Nelson made a final end to the bitter controversy over the huge industry's future that has raged since last spring, when curtailment of automobile output was first suggested.

The order will end production of passenger cars and light trucks, either for civilian, military or export purposes, thus freeing its facilities for expanded production of tanks, planes and guns.

The only exception to last night's regulation was a provision allowing manufacturers to obtain permission for 10 days' continued operation after the February 1 deadline, only if this is necessary to complete previously allotted quotas for January. This permission is contingent, however, on a showing that the continued production "does not interfere with conversion of the factory to military production."

Meantime, the cars now being produced—a limit of 204,848 passenger cars and 24,169 light trucks for the entire country during January—will be "frozen" in a stockpile.

Goldsborough Will Not Try Viereck Case

Agrees to Let Another Judge Preside, Gives U. S. Additional Time

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Faced with action by the United States Court of Appeals here, District Court Justice T. Alan Goldsborough yesterday no longer insisted that he be the judge to try the German agent, George Sylvester Viereck.

Goldsborough agreed to let another judge take the case and gave the Government the time it asked to get ready for trial.

Special prosecutors of the Department of Justice propaganda squad demanded, on Monday, that Goldsborough disqualify himself, filing sworn charges that the judge "has a personal bias or prejudice against the Government of the United States."

Prosecutors Seek Writs

Goldsborough glanced over the charges, called them "insufficient" and false, and refused to give way. With Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., refusing to take part, Goldsborough went on to hear several defense motions, which he overruled.

Viereck was indicted October 7 on five charges of concealing his Nazi propaganda activities on Capitol Hill in his registration under the Foreign Agent Act. Goldsborough later dismissed two of the charges and the other three were set for trial before Justice F. Dickinson Letts. The trial was put off to make way for the trial of Representative Hamilton Fish's secretary,

Current for Cannon

Nation Will Move Up Clocks Hour at 2 A. M. February 9

America will go on daylight saving time February 9 to conserve electricity for the titanic war effort.

President Roosevelt signed a daylight saving bill yesterday, and at 2 a. m. February 9 the clocks will be turned ahead an hour for the duration of the war. Although the bill applies only to Interstae Commerce activities and the Federal Government, it is expected to be observed by most of the Nation.

Mr. Roosevelt advised Congress last July that the Federal power commission figured there would be a saving of 736,282,000 kilowatt hours of energy annually by putting the Nation on year-around daylight saving time.

Local kilowatt hours saving is expected to be 1 to 1½ per cent.

The bill signed yesterday was similar to that enacted during the first World War and Presidential Secretary Stephen Early said it had the same objective of "greater efficiency in our industrial war effort."

The new act will become ineffective six months after the war ends unless Senate and House adopt a resolution to terminate it at an earlier date.

The act will change the sleeping, playing, working, eating schedules of everyone from junior to grandpa and from Mary Jones the Government worker to Cy Smith the farmer.

Greatest opponents of daylight time have been the farmers. They say it's useless to go into the field at an earlier hour, because dew on the crops hinders work.

Reds Recapture Mozhaisk, Open Way for Drive AgainstSmolensk

By the United Press

London (Wednesday), Jan. 21.—Russian troops, battling in a 25-below-zero blizzard, have recaptured Mozhaisk and Ostashevo, crumpling the Moscow battle line of more than 100,000 German troops and opening the way for an offensive against Vyazma and Smolensk, it was announced from Moscow last night.

The Germans routed from Mozhaisk, 57 miles west of Moscow, were fleeing west toward Vyazma, 80 miles away, along the old "Napoleon" road of retreat, leaving behind "enormous" numbers of dead and a large amount of war materials and guns, a communique broadcast from Moscow said.

Double Pincer Movement Forecast

As Russian troops continued to press the retreating Germans westward, the communique said, other troops planted the Red army flag in Ostashevo, 105 miles west of Kalinin, former northern anchor point of the Moscow battle line.

Ostashevo is 180 miles almost due north of Smolensk and military observers here believed the Russians would launch a double pincer movement from this point, one enveloping the German forces in the Leningrad area, the other sweeping toward Smolensk, 230 miles southwest of Moscow, where Adolf Hitler established winter headquarters a few weeks ago. He since was reported to have moved it.

Mozhaisk, on the broad highway to Minsk, had been captured by the Germans October 14 and since then it had become one of the most battle-scarred and bloodiest battlegrounds in all history. It apparently had been destroyed in the final Russian assaults, as yesterday's Moscow dispatches reported it burning from end to end.

Strong Defense System

The Moscow communique said that after inflicting serious defeats on the enemy at Dorokhovo, a few miles west of Mozhaisk, Russian units encircled the approaches to Mozhaisk, "cunningly executed a turning maneuver," broke through the Germans' strong defense lines, and finally reached the city itself.

Here the Russians found an extrememely strong defensive region extending from half a mile to 2 miles east of the city and including a staggered number of firing

'Suicide' Crew Sinks 5000-Ton Enemy Vessel In Philippines

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

In one of the most daring feats of the war, an American naval lieutenant, John D. Bulkeley, commanding a little motor torpedo boat, has penetrated enemy defenses in a Philippines harbor and torpedoed a 5000-ton Japanese ship.

Announcement of this exploit was made by the Navy last night only a few hours after the Army disclosed that six of its bombers had attacked and sunk a Jap cruiser in the China Sea. The hard-hitting planes bombed a large enmy tanker at the same time, the War Department said, and left it in flames.

The tiny torpedo boat, one of the Navy's fleet of "suicide" ships slipped into Binanga Bay, which is inside the entrance to Subic Bay, under the cover of darkness. It ran the gauntlet of enemy shore battery and machine-gun fire, loosed its deadly cargo and got away.

Intended to Aid MacArthur

Apparently the audacious attack was intended to support Gen. Douglas MacArthur's beleaguered troops in Bataan Province. The mountainous peninsula which forms Bataan is bounded on the northwest by Subic Bay.

Heavy pressure was reported yesterday on MacArthur's lines in the northern part of the peninsula. The War Department said that enemy ground and air forces had renewed their attack and were putting particularly hard pressure on the center of the American-Filipino front.

Gen. MacArthur reported that "sharp fighting" also was underway between Philippine troops and enemy forces on the Island of Mindanao. This report, the first news of action in this southernmost main island of the Philippines in several weeks, said the fighting was taking place about 35 miles north of Davao.

Japs Lose Three Planes

The War Department communique said that three Japanese planes had been shot down by American forces in the last 24 hours, presumably by troops in Bataan. There was no

British Base Heavily Bombed By Nipponese; 50 Civilians Killed

Bulletin

London (Wednesday), Jan. 21 (U.P.).—The Daily Mail said today that Japanese-controlled radio stations announced that three 30,000-ton battleships were sighted in the Straits of Malacca, between Malaya and Sumatra, by a Japanese reconnaissance plane. The pilot could not determine whether the ships were American or British, the newspaper said.

By the Associated Press

Singapore, Jan. 20.—The Japanese advanced today to within 60 miles of Singapore in western Malaya, where their blows were falling hard along a 30-mile sector stretching from the Muar River down to the vicinity of Batu Baphat.

On the eastern front enemy patrols penetrated to the area of Endau, about 75 miles above this base.

While the invader's pressure was rising, particularly against the heroic and outnumbered Australians on the west, Japanese warplanes were in heavy action, loosing over Singapore bombs which fell on military and residential areas alike.

200 Civilian Casualties

Civilian casualties in the morning air raids on Singapore were estimated at about 50 killed and 150 injured.

The R. A. F. was casting out its fighter craft in offensive sweeps centered about the Muar, and British bombers were in action against enemy bases, but not even these and the presence of United States bombers striking behind the Japanese lines appeared to have overturned the invader's aerial superiority.

(The Japanese news agency, Domei, claimed that Japanese advance units had reached a point only 18 miles short of the causeway across Johore Strait to Singapore Island. Nevertheless, present Japanese activity was described in Tokyo as that of consolidation and mopping-up in preparation for "the general offensive against the island.")

Grenades Used Against Tanks

It was the region of the Muar which of all was most critical—an area where the Australians had been slowly pushed back for two or three days in wild fighting from artillery and tank action to the most elemental sort of sniping in the jungle.

One Australian force survived an encirclement, formed by the enemy's infiltrations, and fought off much heavier forces until relief arrived, in some instances using hand grenades thrown point blank to knock out enemy tanks which could not be reached by antitank guns. Japanese crews crawling from their wounded vehicles were killed

Argentina Stands Firm On Axis Ties

Our Position Will Not Undergo Any Change, Acting President Says

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, Jan. 20.—Argentina's position at the Rio de Janeiro conference—where she is reported unwilling to support proposals to break relations with the Axis—"will not undergo any change," Acting President Ramon S. Castillo declared tonight.

(Stripped to its essentials, this statement places Argentina in the position of refusing to sever diplomatic relations with Germany, Japan and Italy.)

Castillo, in an interview at his summer home in nearby Martinez, declared that Argentina had not veered from her position of neutrality toward all warring nations, except the United States, which has been declared a nonbelligerent.

"Our position is final," Castillo said; "it will not undergo any change."

By holding the United States nonbelligerent the government opened its ports to unlimited stays by United States warships.

The acting President's declaration came in the midst of reports that Argentina might join other American republics to put up a solid hemispheric front against the Axis as proposed at the current Pan American conference of foreign ministers at Rio de Janeiro.

Castillo asserted that Argentina's position "is open, frank and loyal and represents, right or wrong, the opinion of the country."

Argentina's position, he said, "has been misinterpreted to the point

Aid Is on Way To Far East, President Says

Pacific Not Neglected While Hitting Nazis, He Tells Reporters

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday reported that very excellent progress is being made in getting reinforcements to Allied positions in the southwest Pacific.

He told his press conference that no one need have any fear that the United States will neglect the Far Eastern war zone while it is striking at the Rome-Berlin end of the Axis.

At the same time, a high Dutch official now in Washington for staff talks, Lieut. Gov. Gen. Hubertus Van Mook, of the Netherlands East Indies, told reporters after a conference with President Roosevelt that he had been given "a lot of good news."

Van Mook, who saw both the President and Secretary of State Hull yesterday, said he was confident the American Government was fully aware of the importance of the Pacific war theater.

His statement followed expressions of concern in some Chinese and Australian circles for fear that the United States and Britain would concentrate their power on defeat of Hitler to the exclusion of effective defense of vital positions in the Far East.

Some of these expressions of anxiety have been attributed to a speech made here last week by Secretary of the Navy Knox, before the conference of mayors, in which

Japs Rule the Air, So—

Defenders of Philippines Master Art of Camouflage

By Clark Lee
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the U. S. A. F. F. E. on Bataan Peninsula, Jan. 19 (Delayed).—Filipino and American artillerymen are more than holding their own in bitter day and night death-dueling with Japanese gunners, despite severe handicaps and hardships imposed by lack of aerial support.

The Japanese have an edge on experience and aerial observation, plus the powerful weapons of air bombing and strafing.

But the defenders of these islands have offset these disadvantages by courage and resourcefulness.

Equipment on both sides appears about equal. Both the Filipino and American defenders and the Japanese are using 75-mm. guns at close range and 155s against more distant targets.

The Japanese also are equipped with 105s, believed to be a German make.

American 75s mounted on "half-tracks" have proven extremely effective.

Most of the artillery action at Bataan is taking place along the American right flank where United States guns last week checked Japanese attempts at a break-through, and paved the way for a successful infantry counterattack.

Tracer Bullets Point Out U. S. Positions

Japanese observation planes fly over almost incessantly. When they discover an American position they summon dive-bombers and use tracer bullets to point out U. S. gun positions. At the same time they direct Japanese counterbattery fire. Then the Americans catch hell for a while.

Camouflage is the American's only defense against detection, and they have become masters at it.

I stood within 20 yards of a battery of big guns of a U. S. A. F. F. E. artillery unit today and didn't spot the guns until they opened up with earth-shaking blasts.

The target was a large concentration of Japanese troops having a midday meal in a clearing 6 miles away. This was a definite objective

Ship Torpedoed, Winner Risks Life for $80, Gets It, Drowns

By Gerald G. Cross
Post Staff Writer

How a fellow crew member sold his life for $80 was told last night by six men of the torpedoed tanker Allan Jackson, which a submarine sent flaming to the bottom off the North Carolina coast early Sunday.

The sextet had an hour's stopover at Washington National Airport, en route from Norfolk, Va., to Newark, N. J., where they report today to Standard Oil Co. for new assignments—at sea.

"We're playing poker on deck, being off duty," said rawboned Jeremiah Donovan, who describes himself as a 'Brooklyn Irishman.' "When the torpedo struck, that ended the game and we made for a lifeboat. That is, all of us, except one."

Donovan was about to give the seaman's name when Aracelio Lopez, who also had held a stud hand, said, no, please, maybe the dead man's wife wouldn't like it told.

"Well, so this fellow yells that he's got $80 in his locker below and he's going after it," Donovan continued. "When they pulled his body out of the water the 80 bucks was intact, not even burned a little, along with the five-spot that he'd taken from the poker game. All of us other players were saved."

Rolf Clausen, boatswain, who had charge of the single lifeboat that got away from the shattered, burning 6635-ton tanker, laughed:

"I guess the unhappiest was the

Straight-Spitting Army Could Save Heap of Rubber

If the Army could learn to spit straight and true, approximately a ton and a half of precious rubber might be saved, a Michigan manufacturer declares.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, brought the problem to the attention of the Senate yesterday when he said he had received a letter from Frank C. Morse, of the Brown-Morse Co., Muskegon, Mich., stating that the War Department sought open bids on 1000 rubber cuspidor mats.

Morse's letter suggested that "perhaps a little drilling of the officers in straight spitting might be a good suggestion."

Enemy Planes Raid New Britain, Which Is in Bismarck Group

By the Associated Press

Melbourne, Australia, Jan. 20.—Planes from a Japanese aircraft carrier took the war today to the island of New Britain, strategically situated nearly 500 miles northeast of the Australian mainland on the United Nations' route of supply from the East.

Both bombers and fighters struck in force at the air base of Rebaul, the main city on the Australian-mandated island. Air Minister A. S. Drakeford, reporting the midday assault, said the meager information available indicated that some military damage was caused.

In Bismarck Archipelago.

New Britain is in the Bismarck Archipelago, nearly 3500 miles east of Singapore, about 4000 miles southwest of Honolulu and about 2500 miles west of the United States Samoan Islands. The aircraft carrier may have been based on the Japanese-mandated Carolines to the north.

Meantime, raids were reported on Sabang, on the Island of We, 5 miles off the northern tip of Sumatra, and—by a single bomber—on Siebolga, on the Sumatra west coast.

Only slight damage was done in both attacks, but the 40-minute raid on Sabang killed two persons and wounded 40. One person was killed and two were wounded at Siebolga.

Dutch naval planes, continuing the aerial counteroffensive in which United States bombers have participated, twice raided the Japanese-held airport at Kuchin, capital of occupied Sarawak, starting fires and damaging the field.

The Australian war cabinet, in the meantime, put into practical effect conscription of all civilian male labor, while New Zealand called up the first married men yet to be summoned to the colors in that dominion. The New Zealanders will be trained for territorial service only.

Labor Utilized

Under the Australian decision labor departments of various states will be the sole channels for employment of men by either government or private employer. The departments will compile a national service register of available manpower.

The war cabinet prepared for another two years of war after a review of plans for munitions, supply and general production.

Army Minister Francis Forde said Australian factories were expected to reach their capacity in munitions and war supplies about June. New goals for production were set and many industries were instructed to expand until June, 1943.

Prime Minister John Curtin expressed hope that combined representations of China and Australia "will result in the British government becoming aware of the intense gravity of the Pacific situation."

He has repeatedly expressed fear that Britain's preoccupation with the war in Europe and Africa would minimize western Pacific reinforcements until too late. Today he called attention to a statement by Sun Fo, son of Sun Yat-sen, founder of the Chinese Republic, to effect that China might be forced to make a separate peace with Japan unless positive help were forthcoming. Curtin added:

"If China sued for a separate peace it would completely end our chances of Russian participation in the Pacific."

Won't Make Separate Peace, Chinese Envoy Says

Minneapolis, Jan. 20 (AP).—Dr. Huh Shih, Chinese Ambassador, declared in an interview today that it was inconceivable that China might make a separate peace with Japan.

The ambassador labeled the statement by the Australian premier "impatient and impetuous." Dissatisfied voices in China over the defensive type of war being fought by the Allies in the Far East are but the natural reaction of a people who have been fighting for five years, he added, and "do not reflect any unfriendliness."

Open Season on Japs

Topeka, Kans., Jan. 20 (AP).—Charles E. Holman, Shawnee County clerk, offered Jap-hunting licenses for sale at 10 cents each.

The license states the open season was declared December 7, 1941, with "no limit." A 10-cent defense stamp is attached to each license.

Tokyo Talk

18 Miles From Singapore, Japs Claim

Tokyo, Jan. 20 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A.P.).—Advance Japanese forces were claimed to be within 18 miles of the causeway connecting the Malay Peninsula with Singapore Island tonight, while farther up the peninsula 20,000 Australians were reported cut off.

However, the news agency Domei, reporting these developments, waved aside the prospect of any immediate offensive against Singapore, asserting the Japanese first would concentrate on crushing opposition on the Malay mainland and consolidating their new-won positions in Johore state facing Singapore.

(A report by the German-controlled Paris radio, heard in London by Exchange Telegraph, said that Japanese artillery had started shelling Singapore and that British heavy guns were replying. This report, unsubstantiated from Tokyo, was similar to other exaggerated claims put out by the Paris radio.)

The Domei account said the Australians were trapped in the Segamat sector, some 95 miles north of Singapore, by Japanese columns in a flanking movement along the east and west coasts. Japanese artillery, it added, is playing a prominent part in "inclosing operations."

At Singapore itself, the news agency said, fuel depots fired by Japanese air raiders still were ablaze. In aerial operations there and elsewhere imperial headquarters reported 27 British planes were downed Sunday and Monday.

one by one by Australian infantrymen.

This morning's bombing of Singapore caused damage to some military installations.

One Japanese navy "O" type plane and one enemy bomber were shot down in this raid, while another enemy bomber was probably destroyed, the British communique reported.

(This official mention of Japanese naval planes in action against Singapore raised the possibility that a Japanese aircraft carrier was in action. Planes from a Jap aircraft carrier today bombed the island of New Britain, 500 miles northeast of the Australian mainland.)

From yesterday through today a total of at least six Japanese planes were destroyed and enemy craft shot down to date in Malaya were thus brought to an aggregate of 41 for certain and an additoinal 16 "probables."

INDIES GOVERNOR AT WHITE HOUSE—Dr. Hubertus Van Mook (left), Governor General of the Netherlands East Indies, conferred yesterday with President Roosevelt. He was accompanied to the White House by Dr. Alexander Loudon, Netherlands Minister to the United States

Roosevelt Says Aid Is Going to Far East

he asserted that, once Nazi Germany is defeated, "the whole Axis fabric will collapse" and "the finishing off of Hitler's satellites will be easy by contrast."

Officials here contend that the Knox speech has been distorted by Axis propagandists in the hope of driving a wedge between Britain and American and their Far Eastern allies.

In an effort to counter this propaganda, it was disclosed yesterday, Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, former head of the Foreign Relations Committee, has delivered a short-wave radio speech to China asserting that the United States "will withhold nothing to crush Japan and to assist China."

He pointed out that the Knox speech emphasized that the Navy is at work night and day in the Pacific convoying supplies of "the numberless things our friends need everywhere."

President Roosevelt told reporters he wished he could describe in detail the steps the United States is taking to strengthen the Allied positions in the Far East, but for obvious reasons that was impossible.

He said that the staff talks which have been and are being held in Washington and other Allied capitals cover offense, defense, all the continents, each of the seven seas, and the movement of things, ships and human beings from one part of the world to another.

When a reporter asked if the President had given a "corrective" statement to Dr. Hu Shih, the Chinese Ambassador here, in regard to Chinese apprehensions over America's war policy, the President said he had received no expression of concern from Dr. Hu and was sure that the envoy understood the situation.

Van Mook, after his meeting with the President, said he was "more optimistic after this and other conversations that a really big effort is being made to get th necessary tools of war and forces" to the Pacific battle area.

He said the Netherlands East Indies will "hold out all right." Their chief need is more planes, he added.

Van Mook was accompanied on his calls at the White House and State Department by Dr. A. Loudon, Dutch Minister.

Senator George, in his short-wave message to the Chinese people, asserted that Tokyo and Berlin are "delighted" over what he called the "misunderstanding" of America's war policy in the Pacific.

Axis agents "are doing their best to capitalize on it, sewing seeds of mistrust through their radio propaganda as much as they can," he said.

George cited President Roosevelt's statement before Congress two weeks ago that the United Nations will not fight "isolated wars," but will "so dispose our forces that we can strike at the common enemy wherever the greatest damage can be done."

"Developments will demonstrate," he concluded, "that England and the United States propose to give all possible assistance, in conjunction with China, in the war in the middle and southern Pacific area."

STREAMLINING: Up the front stairs of the White House and into the President's study yesterday stalked the Congressional big four: Vice President Wallace, Speaker Rayburn, Senator Barkley and Representative McCormack—caboosed by Congressman Mansfield, chairman of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee. From 10:30 a. m. until an hour and some later the group scissored nonessentials from the rivers and harbors bill.

FROM LITTLE SHRUBS: . . . Whistling over to his office, Mr. Roosevelt received Francisco Gaxiola, Mexican national economic minister, squired by Ambassador Najera. From Don Francisco the President heard that Mexico would send more and more materials needed by United States wartime production—among them fibers and metals—but most important a little shrub named guayule which may help combat the rubber shortage.

"WELL, . . . WE GOT THERE:" Just before the regular lunch hour British Charge d'Affaires Sir Ronald Campbell and Bermuda Governor Lord Knollys came in to talk over the United States naval bases in the islands, laugh a little over some of Churchill anecdotes . . . best of which centered around the recent flood of newspaper pictures taken of Churchill and cigar "at the controls on his flight from somewhere in Florida to Bermuda. In answer to a question as to whether or not the Prime Minister was a good pilot, Lord Knollys replied with a grin "well—we got there."

MIXED GRILL: Lunch and Supreme Court Associate Justice Jimmy Byrnes were a high-noon mixed grill for the President—along with a light lunch Mr. Roosevelt got the latest reports on Justice Byrnes' progress with some extracuricular work on the American war program—assigned to him by the Boss.

"ALL I CAN SAY . . .:" Looking somewhat more rested and spruce in a midnight blue business suit, black tie and mourning band, the President greeted the alimmed ranks of White House correspondents with a sample of the old shine and a few fast jibes. With no announcements o. news suitable for wartime print, the conference shifted quickly into questions and answers. Of answers there were few.

LATE: Right after dinner, the President dug into dictation, staff studies and the mountain or other work still looming at the end of every Presidential day since Pearl Harbor.

U. S. Mosquito Boat Sinks Jap Vessel

mention of any renewal of the aerial assaults on Corregidor or the other fortifications of Manila Bay.

Scene of the Army bombing attack on the Jap cruiser and tanker was placed between the Philippines and the Dutch East Indies, about 100 miles off the Island of Jolo, in the Sulu group.

The Navy communique gave no details of the torpedo boat's foray into Subic Bay. It said, however, that Lieut. Bulkeley had been commended for "executing his mission successfully."

Bulkeley, 30, is a native of New York City. He was appointed to the Naval Academy in 1929, and appointed an ensign in 1934, a year after his graduation.

After serving aboard cruisers and an aircraft carrier, he was assigned to the new "mosquito" fleet service a year ago. He was named commander of Motor Torpedo Boat Division 15 in August.

The little boats of the "suicide" fleet are craft of from 70 to 77 feet, with tremendous speed. They have made better than 50 knots in rough water tests and as high as 70 knots in more favorable conditions. Three V-12 Packard motors propel the boats.

Main armament of the vessels are four 12-inch torpedo tubes, while 50-caliber machine guns are carried for defense. Built of mahogany, with double bottoms, they cost about $250,000 each.

U. S. Sinks 54 Ships

In the attack in Binanga Bay, Lieut. Bulkeley's little ship was under the fire of 3-inch shore batteries as well as machineguns, the Navy said. The communique said that the vessel torpedoed was not identified and did not say whether or not it was sunk.

Counting only the Japanese cruiser as definitely sunk, the day's communiques brought the toll of enemy ships of all types taken by the American Army and Navy to at least 54.

This includes 11 Jap ships sunk by the Army—a battleship, a cruiser, two destroyers, one submarine and six transports. The Navy's official record is 29 Japanese ships in the Pacific and 14 announced Axis U-boats destroyed in the Atlantic, some of them probably before Pearl Harbor.

The Pacific total includes a light cruiser, gunboat, four destroyers and submarines sunk by the Marines at Wake, two submarines and a captured small U-boat at Pearl Harbor, eight transports, a minesweeper, a supply ship, five cargo vessels, a big liner, and three vessels only identified as merchant vessels.

Texts of the day's communiques follow:

War Department Communique No. 67.

"1. Philippine theater: The enemy has renewed the attack on the American and Philippine troops on Bataan Peninsula. Japanese pressure is particularly heavy at the center of the line. The attack is supported by aircraft. Three enemy airplanes were shot down during the past 24 hours.

"Gen. MacArthur has received a report from Mindanao telling of sharp fighting now in progress between Philippine troops and a Japanese force about 35 miles north of Davao.

"Six American Army bombers attacked a Japanese cruiser and a large tanker 100 miles off Jolo. Several direct hits were scored, sinking the cruiser and leaving the tanker in flames.

"2. There is nothing to report from other areas."

Navy Communique No. 31

"Far East: A motor torpedo boat under Admiral Hart's Far Eastern command entered Binanga Bay, inside the entrance to Subic Bay, Philippine Islands, and torpedoed an unidentified enemy vessel of 5000 tons in a night attack. This small boat carried out its difficult task while under fire of machine guns and 3-inch shore batteries. Lieut. John D. Bulkeley has been commended for executing his mission successfully.

"Atlantic area: Enemy submarine activity is continuing off the east coast of North America from Cape Hatteras to Newfoundland. The sinkings of the tankers Norness, Coimbra and Allan Jackson have been accompanied by attacks on other vessels within the territorial limits of the United States. Strong countermeasures are being taken by units of the Navy's east coastal command.

"There is nothing to report from other areas."

Wife Is "Very Pleased"

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—"I'm very pleased" was all Mrs. Hilda Alice Bulkeley, 29, could say tonight when she learned that her husband, Lieut. John Bulkeley, 30, had won Navy commendation for his part in torpedoing a large Japanese ship in a daring night raid in Philippine waters.

Mrs. Bulkeley last saw her husband in August when he left home on secret Navy Orders. In the last letter she received from him, written from the Cavite Naval Base near Manila a week before the Pearl Harbor attack, he said the Navy was prepared "for anything."

Lieut. Bulkeley met his wife, the daughter of the British port captain at Swatow, at a party aboard a British destroyer there. They were married in Shanghai three years ago and have a 16-month-old daughter, Joan Isabel. Still a British subject, Mrs. Bulkeley applied for second citizenship papers a few days ago.

RAF Raids Sicily, Starts Big Fires

Cairo, Jan. 20 (INS).—While land fighting in Libya continued to lag the Middle East command announced tonight that heavy R. A. F. raids on Catania and Comiso, Sicily, had started big fires and caused other serious damage to airdromes, destroying German and Italian planes on the ground.

An earlier communique said imperial mobile columns "were continuing activities east of El Agheila" in the central Libyan desert where Nazi Gen. Erwin Rommel's forces have taken up strong positions.

Mass. State Senator Asks 'MacArthur Day'

Boston, Jan. 20 (AP).—Designation of January 26 as "Gen. Douglas MacArthur day" in honor of his valiant defense of the Philippines was sought in a petition filed today with the clerk of the Massachusetts Senate.

Senator Chester A. Dolan, of Boston, Democratic minority leader, said he had in mind "the happy coincidence of the General Court being called into special session on the birthday of this great American general" in asking Gov. Saltonstall to include the recommendation in his message to the Legislature next Monday.

Amercian Prefers Grave to Living Longer inGermany

Johnson City, Tenn., Jan. 20 (U.P.).—A local woman—whose name was withheld for obvious reason—received a letter from a former resident here who married a German and moved to his country.

The letter was censored to meaningless scattered words except the last sentence:

"We are all happy here, but would be happier in Monte Vista," it read.

This sentence obviously outwitted the censor. Monte Vista is a local cemetery.

Avoids Maneuver

Churchill Promises War Debate Soon

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 20.—Winston Churchill put down today an effort to force an immediate parliamentary discussion of British reverses in the Pacific, promised Commons a three-day debate soon on the whole pattern of the war and announced that if any challenge to his government then arose he would call for a vote of confidence.

Appearing before the House for the first time since his return from his momentous conferences in the United States with President Roosevelt, the prime minister declared vigorously:

"I propose myself to open (the forthcoming) debate and if necessary to wind it up."

As to criticism of the British position in the Orient, he easily avoided an attempt to require him to speak at once. For when the Liberal National member, Edgar Granville, moved a parliamentary maneuver by which such a discussion would have followed at once no member supported him and the speaker refused to hear the motion.

"I naturally share the anxieties that are felt on the war in the Far East," the prime minister said.

"But I also share a growing confidence, which I think might also be justified, in the eventual outcome of this struggle."

Japs Direct Attack By Siamese North Of Moulmein Port

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 20.—Thai troops, presumably under direction of the Japanese who have occupied their country, were reported by the Reuters news agency tonight to have attacked southern Burma 60 miles northeast of the important port of Moulmein.

The Indian radio at Madras said the invasion started near Myaweddi on the Burma-Thai frontier at the northern extremity of the 400-mile Burmese panhandle bordering the puppet country.

The blow followed closely a Japanese success of yesterday when the invaders bisected the narrow appendage, seizing the coastal port of Tavoy and its airport.

Forces of the United Nations, including perhaps Chinese troops which have been sent to aid the defense of Burma and prepare a counter blow against Japanese-held territory, fought the Thai forces. Before reaching Moulmein, the invaders would have to cross a difficult 2000-foot mountain range and rugged jungle terrain.

Using possibly the conquered airfield at Tavoy, Japanese bombers roared to an assault on both Moulmein and Rangoon, across the Gulf of Maratan. But fliers of the United Nations also were active, sweeping over enemy-occupied territory in Thailand on scouting missions.

This was the first report of Thai troops in action. The country capitulated with scarcely a shot fired when the Japanese appeared at her frontier.

Survivors of Torpedoed Tanker Stop Off Here

A newsman asked Seaman Ross F. Terrell if he didn't think it was unlucky, being one of 13 crew members rescued.

"Oh, no, not when I think of the 22 who weren't," he replied soberly.

Terrell, Clausen, Donovan, Lopez, O. M. May and T. F. Burke were the six who came through last night. Together with two others, they succeeded in launching the lifeboat. When, after six hours adrift, the craft reached the side of a rescue vessel, a ninth man was aboard. He was the tanker's radio operator, who had been fished out of the Atlantic.

The other four men saved spent two or more hours before being picked up. Donovan said that Capt. F. W. Kretchmer was afloat the longest, about seven hours.

May, a Florida former athlete, carried Lopez on his back down the ship's ladder. Burke also is a Floridan. Lopez, Donovan and Clausen are New Yorkers, while Terrell is from Jersey City.

All six were in the best of spirits last night, eager to get back to sea. It will be a few weeks, probably, before they can be accommodated, since all lost their shipping papers—along with everything else but the clothes on their backs—when the Allan Jackson went down.

"It was the closest call I had," said Donovan, talking between bites from a chicken sandwich in the airport restaurant, "since a submarine popped a torpedo at my ship off Freetown, Africa, a couple of months ago.

"Only that time the sub missed."

Vast Defenses Ring Panama Canal Area

By Chandler Diehl
Associated Press Staff Writer

Balboa, Canal Zone, Jan. 20.—The tight defense thrown around the Panama Canal now has been extended to almost all Panama.

Airfields, a generous scattering of them basing combat planes "ready for business," dot the coastland and the interior. New defenses have been thrown up against possible seaborne invasion of Panama.

A group of news correspondents has just seen this and much more on an air tour which took us almost to Costa Rica.

The flat lowland of Panama's Pacific Coast, much of its naturally forbidding to unwanted visitors because of its swampiness and volcanic roughness, has become far more hostile with installation of the new defenses.

Where sandy beaches give way to swamps on the shoreline there is a strong defense facing the sea and in support are many attack bases as well as defense positions. The Panama Canal Department is determined to build up a striking force which can annihilate any invading group.

The air bases are all sizes and all types, from tiny dust-blown pastures commanded by lieutenants to full-scale airdromes of mightiy fighting force.

Pilots and their crews sleep beside scattered planes, ready for almost instantaneous take-off. A three-minute getaway is considered about par.

All the bases have their own defense forces to protect them against surprise attack from any direction.

Machine-gun nests and emplacements pockmark the open fields and fill unsuspected nooks and crannies.

There are antiaircraft guns, trenches and revetments—surprises of all kinds.

The men may go shirtless in some of the sun-baked camps, but all are always fully armed. All officers wear sidearms.

The crew of our transport plane strapped on their pistols at every landing. It was apparent all were determined that any surprise hereafter will be at the expense of the enemies of the United States.

Spirits were high even at the bases in the remotest interior where comforts and means of recreation are few.

U. S., Mexico Study Common Defense

Agua Caliente, Mex., Jan. 20 (AP).—The United States was pledged the fullest cooperation from all of Mexico today by Gen. Lazaro Cardenas, former Mexican president, in a conference with Lieut. Gen. John L. DeWitt, commanding general of the Western Defense Command and Fourth Army.

"We interpret the sentiments of our Governments in the common cause of our peoples," Gen. Cardenas told Gen. Dewitt. They conversed for more than two hours through the medium of interpreters.

Gen. Dewitt and his staff were met at the border by Gen. de Brigada Juan Felipe Rico Islaz, commander of the second military zone, Baja Calif., and escorted through Tipuana to Caliente. There, Gen. Cardenas, Mexico's commander of the military region of the Pacific, received his guests.

The meeting of the two generals was the initial announced conference of military leaders of the two countries on the Pacific Coast since the simultaneous announcements, issued in Mexico City and Washington, January 12, notifying the world that they would defend jointly their respective territories from foreign ttack.

The announcements stated that, by action of President Roosevelt and President Camacho, a joint Mexican-United States defense commission would function somewhat after the manner of the joint Canadian-United States defense board created in 1940.

Mexico's action for joint defense followed her previous action of severing diplomatic relations with the Axis powers shortly after the Axis declaration of war against the United States.

2 Appointments Made By OPA Accounting Unit

The Office of Price Administration yesterday announced two appointments to its Division of Accounting, Analysis and Review:

Gustav C. Hertz, Falls Church, Va., appointed to rent section, and William E. Posey, of Washington, appointed to lumber and building materials section.

Japanese Army Carbon Copy Of Der Fuehrer's War Machine

Japan's army was described yesterday in a survey of weapons used by the Western Pacific invaders as "almost a poll-parrot copy of Der Fuehrer's hordes."

In the semiofficial Infantry Journal, Lieut. John Scofield declared that "man for man, the Jap fighters are probably as efficient as the average in Europe."

"The Japanese army is well fed, cleanly uniformed and about as completely equipped as that of any belligerent today," he asserted.

"Much of its materiel is old-fashioned, but what it lacks in improvements is balanced by plentiful quantities. For the most part the Japs stuck to a few consistent models and this eased the problem of supply.

"Many Japanese weapons and more than a few Japanese concepts of how to fight hark back to earlier German thought. Rifles, automatic pistols and artillery, as well as organization and tactical doctrines reflect the influence of German advisers imported before the first World War."

The favorite Japanese army rifle was said by Scofield to be the 1905 model Arisaka, which fires a cartridge of only .256 caliber.

"One of the things most difficult for the Occidental mind is the emphasis placed on use of bayonets and swords by the Japanese," Scofield observed. "They consider the bayonet an essential weapon and are taught to indulge in bayonet sticking whenever they can."

The Nambu 22½-pound machine gun," the weapon that has done the heavy work in the Japanese infantry attacks in China," was said to be remarkably easy to shoot and as easy to load.

Scofield, associate editor of the American Rifleman, reported further:

Their "trickiest arm" is a light hand grenade thrower which may be handled by one or two men.

Japanese tanks closely resemble American types. Heavy tanks which rumble along at 15 miles an hour have seen action in China. Antitank guns are relatively untried, as are antiaircraft weapons. Field artillery is largely German in type.

and the battery kept up constant fire as Mister Moto's observation planes kept pottering overhead.

Capt. Lawrence Meade, of Redwood City, Calif., commander of one of the batteries, said of the shelling, "These are to say 'hello' to Tojo (Japanese premier)."

Tojo, however, talked back a few minutes later with a series of rounds from 75s and 105s which spattered our fox holes with shrapnel and made more deep bomb shell holes around the guns but caused no damage or casualties.

The Japanese fired twice the number of shells we had sent over, and Col. Alexander Quintard, regimental commander, explained, "That's what we call retaliatory fire. It looks like Tojo got a little riled, which means we probably got our target. We like it when we make him waste so many shells."

Col. Quintard praised highly the conduct of American officers and Filipino troops.

"All are taking it and handing it back in fine style although our work would be more effective with assistance of a little aerial spotting of targets and observation of results," he said.

Throughout the Japanese shelling the Filipino troops calmly stuck to their telephones and lookout stations, noting results. After 30 minutes, other U. S. batteries opened fire and "neutralized" Japanese guns, which meant they either hit the guns or dropped shells so close the gunners had to seek shelter.

While the Japanese were firing, Col. Quintard kept track of the shells, calling "Here they come" as the whistle was heard, followed shortly by the explosion, the whirr of shrapnel, and then the distant boom of guns.

When the shooting stopped we brushed the dirt away but discovered no one was hurt. And Quintard quoted the old gag about the futility or ducking since if a shell has your name on it it will get you.

Nazis Blasted From Mozhaisk

points 150 to 325 feet from each other. In addition, there was a strongly defended earthwork system, with criss-crossing trenches protected by rows of barbed wire.

Soviet infantry, the communique said, heroically overcame these lines with "mighty blows" and the Germans suffered "enormous losses" of man power and war machines at these approaches.

On the road to the city, the Russians found a number of German graveyards, damaged tanks, motor cars and guns.

Despite continuous German trench mortar fire, the communique said, Soviet infantry penetrated the southwestern outskirts of the town and occupied a railroad station. At the same time, another unit reached the northern outskirts and wiped out German occupants of blockaded houses.

A unit commanded by Second Lieut. Kozinkov was the first to enter the city, the communique said. Thereafter, Soviet infantry quickly advanced to the town's center, breaking the resistance of German gunners on houses and rooftops.

Taking over the city, Soviet forces seized a large amount of war booty and liberated 100 wounded Red army prisoners.

Stockholm dispatches said tonight that the Germans might make a stand at Borodino, 10 miles west of Mozhaisk, where Napoleon won his big battle in Russia, but that Gen. Grigori K. Zhukov's thrusts to the north and south of the Mozhaisk salient were becoming such a menace that a Borodino stand was doubtful.

The Berlin correspondent of the Stockholm newspaper Allehanda was quoted as saying that the Russians were steadily gaining strenth. The Berlin radio was heard here broadcasting that the Russians were making strong attacks east and south of Kharkov and that they had broken through the southern front at one place.

The London Daily Mail said masses of new Soviet troops, trained in Siberia and the rals, and held in reserve back of the central front, were now appearing at many points in the battle line. It said they were superbly equipped and had tractors and sleighs.

Stepping Stone to Moscow

The loss of Mozhaisk deprived the Germans of their one remaining toehold close to the Russian capital and shattered the middle of their winter defense line. It was estimated that 100,000 Germans were established in Mozhaisk and another 100,000 immediately west of it, in portable or make-shift shelters.

They were said to have hoped to hold the position at all costs, and to use it as a stepping stone in a drive on Moscow during the planned spring offensive.

The battle line now will snap back to an almost straight one extending from Rzhev to Vyazma to Bryansk, experts said.

The communique said German losses yesterday included 16 airplanes and 30 tanks destroyed by Russian planes, which lost only five of their own craft.

The Russian successes were general along the whole front, according to eastern front reports, and six more key cities were imperiled. Their loss would throw the Germans back as much as 300 miles to the Dnieper River line. They were Taganrog, on the Sea of Azov; Kharkov, in the Ukraine industrial district; Kursk, Orel, Rzhev and Novgorod.

[The London radio broadcast reports that Soviet troops have recaptured Rzhev, an International News Service dispatch said.]

Nazis Claim Gain in Crimea

London, Jan. 20 (AP).—The Germans acknowledged steady "defensive battles" all along the central and northern fronts today and also in the south—apparently referring to their grim stands on the anchor points of Orel, Kursk, Kharkov and Taganrog.

Only in the Crimea did the Nazis claim a distinct gain—a push northeastward from Feodosiya which they reported yesterday had been recaptured.

The Germans also reported that "the Murmansk Railroad was cut in several points by bomb hits"—a singular claim from Berlin where it long has been asserted that German and Finnish troops occupied sections of that railway stretching into the Arctic.

A Stockholm dispatch said young German occupation troops in Norway were being sent to Russia, and that both Germany and Italy were putting pressure on Hungary to supply more troops.

Sidelights of the War

300 Johannesburg Policemen Held as Spies

London (Wednesday), Jan. 21 (INS).—Approximately 300 policemen and detectives in Johannesburg, chief city of the Union of South Africa, have been arrested in a surprise roundup on suspicion of subversive activities, a Reuters dispatch said early today.

Johannesburg and other districts of the British South African Dominion have in the past harbored centers of pro-German propaganda and other activities.

Capt. Rogers' Family Ill

London, Jan. 30.—When Capt. J. C. Kelley Rogers, who piloted Prime Minister Churchill to England, returned to his home in the New Forest area today, he found his infant daughter ill with pneumonia and his wife suffering from measles. Both are recuperating.

Nazis Can Bomb U. S.

London, Jan. 20 (AP).—The question of whether Germany possesses any warplanes capable of flying the Atlantic with a load of bombs has been answered by the crash of one such plane in northeast England.

Aviation experts said that the plane, which crashed after striking a barrage balloon cable, had a range of $4,500 miles—sufficient to enable it to bomb the United States East Coast from a base in France, but not enough to get it home again.

The plane was identified as a Dornier 217, a development of the old DO-17, which has been known here as the "flying pencil" because of its elongated fuselage.

Wanted: Million Yanks

London, Jan. 20 (AP).—If a million American troops were landed in Britain, Hitler's chances of attacking this country would be "gone with the wind," Lord Maugham told the House of Lords today.

"There is no reason to think Hitler is going to give us time to put all our defenses in order," he added. "It is certain that an attack on this country, if it ever comes at all, will come as soon as Hitler has stabilized his line in Russia—and it will come before the United States can render us any substantial assistance in the way of men and arms."

Does This Rose Smell?

New Orleans, Jan. 20 (AP).—A customer entered the shop of "Sailor Joe" Simmons, tattoo artist, and asked to have a swastika covered up.

"I told him it would cost $3 and he squawked," Joe related.

"But, I told him $3 wouldn't look like so much if the FBI got to asking questions, so he got the money."

"What did you do with the swastika?"

"Turned it into a rose," he replied with a grin.

O'Mahoney's Plan Rejected By Conferees

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Conferees on the price control bill last night neared agreement on a farm price compromise accepting dual control features of the Bankhead amendment but rejecting the O'Mahoney plan to link farm prices with industrial wages.

While leaders stressed there had been "no final, formal approval," it was learned that acceptance of the middle course farm price settlement hinged only on last-minute conference bargaining on other sections of the bill.

"We have made considerable progress toward getting together, but on one or two essential matters we are not yet in agreement," Chairman Prentiss Brown of the Senate conferees told reporters.

Chairman Henry B. Steagall of the House conferees said there is "a fair chance of agreement tomorrow."

1919-29 Parity May Be Accepted

Neither Brown nor Steagall would discuss details of the "progress," but it was learned that the farm price talks have advanced to a stage where the following compromise can be predicted:

Acceptance of the Senate's Bankhead amendment to give the Secretary of Agriculture virtual veto power over farm price orders of the price administrator, but with the President actually in control through his power of dismissal.

Rejection of Senator O'Mahoney's amendment to make industrial wages a 20 per cent factor in determination of "parity," a provision flatly opposed by the President because of inflationary implications.

Modification of the so-called Paul Brown amendment providing that no farm prices could be fixed below the average price of commodities for the years of 1919-29. Conferees were still in doubt on this amendment, but may limit application to basic commodities. Benefits in that event would be confined to cotton.

Retention of the House provision that no farm price be fixed below 110 per cent of parity.

Retention of provisions that no farm price could be established lower than the price as of last October 1 (as in the House bill) or the price prevailing on December 15 (as added by the Senate).

O'Mahoney Defends Plan

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, whose amendment apparently has been doomed by the conference committee, meanwhile, addressed a radio appeal "to the conference committee" and "to consumers, to workers and to farmers."

O'Mahoney did not mention the President by name, but he denied charges made at a recent White House press conference that his amendment would touch off an inflationary spiral.

"As the sponsor of the amendment, I want to say now that it is not inflationary. It will not cause any prices to rise. It does not require the administrator to increase the price of any commodity. It would not bring about an automatic advance in the cost of living nor a rise in the price of any farm commodity."

Leaders See President

Congressional leaders, at their regular weekly legislative conference, discussed with the President "some of the difficulties that faced the conference committee," Senate Majority Leader Barkley told reporters.

The President has been reported reluctantly ready to yield on the Bankhead amendment, although he considers the dual control principle unsound. He has been adamant in his opposition to the principle of the O'Mahoney amendment.

Only definite agrement announced yesterday by the conferees was a decision to pay the price administrator $12,000 a year, as the Senate proposed, instead of the $10,000 salary fixed by the House.

House conferees also were expected to accept the Senate requirement that dealers be licensed, but those licenses could only be revoked by the court, after violations and a warning by the administrator.

Storage Plan Under Fire

House conferees were reported battling against yielding on other provisions of their bill. Under particular fire by the House conferees were the so-called buying and selling provisions of the Senate bill, giving the Government power to buy, store or sell various commodities in an effort to control their price.

House objections also were entered against Senate provision for the President to transfer conflicting price authority of other Federal agencies to the price administrator. House conferees apparently were putting up a futile fight to retain their own bill's provision for an appeals board over the administrator.

Senator O'Mahoney in his radio speech last night declared his proposal linking industrial wages to farm prices was in harmony with Bernard Baruch's idea that "rents, wages, interest rates, commissions, fees, in short, the price for every item and service in commerce," should be subject to price controls.

Muhlenberg Says He Meant No Criticism of U. S. Policies

MUHLENBERG AND SON—Col. H. C. Kress Muhlenberg (seated) and his son, Lieut. David B. K. Muhlenberg

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 20.—Col. H. C. Kress Muhlenberg, retiring fifth corps area air officer, today informed a general court martial he had no thought of criticizing the Government policies or the United States Navy in an address here December 17.

The veteran officer was quoted by prosecution witnesses as saying the American people were the "goats" of the Pearl Harbor attack by sanctioning a policy of "sending planes all over the world instead of where they were most needed."

"If anything I said . . . be construed as a discussion of foreign and domestic policy and therefore within a ban against speaking of such matters, it certainly was not so intended by me and certainly not intended as a violation, dishonorably or otherwise, of an inhibition," he said.

"The slightest thought or intention of discussing or of criticizing the policies of the Government or reflecting in the slightest degree upon the value of our sister service, the Navy; of violating any instructions from the War Department or from headquarters, fifth corps area, was farthest from my mind or plans."

Another Judge To Try Viereck

George Hill, 45, who was convicted of two perjuries last week. Counsel agreed on February 2 for the Viereck case.

Meanwhile, Viereck's lawyers, Daniel F. Cohalen, jr., and Emil Morosini, jr., of New York, made several efforts to have the Viereck case heard by Goldsborough.

Last Thursday, a few minutes after the seven-day Hill trial concluded, Goldsborough talked to Hickey and Maloney in his chambers and told them that he had assigned himself to try Viereck and ordered them to be ready in three days. Later he gave them five days, setting the case for today.

Maloney's sworn statement said that in this interview Goldsborough said, "I don't give a —— about the Government's position. This case goes to trial not later than January 21, 1942, and I am going to try it. You might as well get it through your head once and for all that no other judge in this court can try this case except me."

This and similar statements were the basis of the affidavit of prejudice. "The law provides that when such an affidavit is filed the judge concerned "shall proceed no further."

When Goldsborough insisted on proceeding further, the Government turned to the Court of Appeals to stop him. Before Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner of the higher court, Hickey and Maloney and George A. McNulty, chief of the trial section, yesterday placed petitions for writs of prohibition and mandamus.

Justices Weigh Charges

The charges against Goldsborough were considered later in the day by six justices—the full bench of the Court of Appeals.

Meanwhile, Goldsborough sent word to the special prosecutors that he was willing to postpone the Viereck case to February 2. They sent back a reminder of their conviction that he was biased against the Government.

Goldsborough added an offer to set the case before one of the ten other justices of the District Court. The date and the different judge were all the prosecutors had sought.

So Goldsborough and the special prosecutors met in chambers and worked out details of an agreement which was confirmed in open court yesterday afternoon.

Affidavit Withdrawn

In the court session Maloney asked leave to withdraw the affidavit of bias and projudice.

Goldsborough gave his leave.

Maloney then said the Government moved to postpone the Viereck case, explaining that there were compelling reasons for the delay.

Goldsborough asked whether the special grand jury on Axis agents was not still in session.

Maloney said it was.

Goldsborough remarked that in view of this fact, and the possibility that witnesses to be heard by the grand jury might be important to the Viereck case, he thought the request reasonable and would grant it, setting February 2 as a tentative date.

Goldsborough then said that he was scheduled to hear an antitrust case on February 4 and that he would have to send the Viereck case to another judge.

Clerk Samuel Silverman whispered at the bench, pointing out that the present jury panel concludes its services on February 2 and that a new one will not be available until February 4. So the justice asked whether February 4 would be agreeable.

The lawyers said it would.

With these matters settled, the Government's applications, to the Court of Appeals expired.

Rep. Fish Moves To Aid Secretary

Representative Hamilton Fish yesterday made his first gesture in behalf of his secretary, George Hill, by asking for an appointment with Justice F. Dickinson Letts, before whom Hill was convicted of two perjuries in the District Court last week.

When Hill was indicted by the special grand jury on Axis agents, Fish declared he was "100 per cent" behind his secretary. But when Hill went to trial, Fish did not attend or take the witness stand.

Offering no defense, Hill was convicted and is in jail, liable to a prison sentence of two to 20 years.

Justice Letts told Fish that he would be glad to hear anything the Congressman wished to offer about Hill's sentence but pointed out that Hill's lawyers plan to move for a new trial and that it is not customary to discuss sentence while such motions are pending.

Group Acts on 12½ Billions In Single Day

By the Associated Press

A House Appropriations Subcommittee, with unprecedented speed, approved late yesterday a $12,525,872,474 fund for new war planes which Chairman Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, called "the largest single estimate for military equipment in the history of the Nation."

"We received the request yesterday, completed hearings today, approved the recommendations and will try to get it before the House on Friday—the earliest possible moment," Cannon said. "Such expedition I've never seen."

He reported that $9,041,373,090 would go directly to the Air Corps for plane production, with the other items allotted to Ordnance and Signal Corps equipment.

Knudsen Testifies

A long list of witnesses were heard in closed session yesterday, including Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson and William S. Knudsen, OPM director recently named a lieutenant general in charge of Army procurement.

Cannon said that the program involved the "greatest dislocation of industry and program of readjustment and conversion that we've ever attempted."

Meanwhile, without a dissenting vote, the House approved a 450 million dollar expansion of naval shore facilities—a preparation, Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, said, for a long war—and cleared the decks for consideration tomorrow of a $3,300,000,000 shipbuilding measure.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, of the Naval Committee, announced its indorsement of the new measure providing for the building of 1799 minor combatant, auxiliary and patrol vessels of various types in addition to previously authorized ship construction.

Specifications Withheld

While the bill carried no specific over-all authorization, Vinson estimated the new program would cost $3,300,000,000. To get it started, the measure authorizes the Navy to spend up to 750 million dollars for equipment, facilities and land for the construction of the vessels and their ordnance.

The expansion of shore facilities, Vinson explained, was to facilitate handling the already accelerated building program. Little new construction is contemplated, he added, and because of military considerations the location of the facilities to be built or expanded would not be made public.

Hillman Reported Advocating Labor Set-up Like Britain's

Sidney Hillman, associate director general of the OPM and director of its labor division, was reported yesterday to be seeking the creation of a war labor administration in which would be centered the problems affecting workers during the emergency.

The proposal, which would have the effect of taking the present labor division out of the new War Production Board, is said to have the active support of both the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O.

The head of the projected administration, according to the plan proposed, would occupy a position similar to that held by Ernest Bevin, British minister of labor. His organization would be charged with the problem of labor supply, training and the maintenance of labor standards in war contracts.

OPM labor division officials assert that a major reason for the establishment of an independent war labor administration is a psychological one, indicating the importance of labor's part in the war effort.

They point out that a large measure of labor's all-out participation in Britain's war work is the result of having "their own man," Bevin, as a Cabinet member actively mobilizing workers for the military program.

One of Bevin's main functions, and one which the proposed labor administration would undertake, has been the allocation of workers among those competing for their services, including different war industries and essential civilian occupations.

Meantime, Hillman announced yesterday that for the first time in many years, A. F. of L. and C. I. O. will meet in a series of regional conferences on war production. The first three meetings are scheduled for areas in Pennsylvania and Ohio in February, with other sessions planned in five other States, Hillman said.

He added that "thousands of delegates" fo union locals and State and city central bodies and industrial councils will meet with Government officials and university and college leaders with the objective of bringing labor organizations into the war effort on their home grounds.

New Command Is Reported Given Von Bock

By the United Press

London (Wednesday), Jan. 21.—A German D. N. B. broadcast from Berlin said today that Field Marshal Fedor von Bock, returning from sick leave, had conferred with Adolf Hitler preparatory to taking over the command of a new sector on the eastern front.

The official German announcement coincided with Berlin dispatches to neutral countries saying that Bock, former commander of the central sector on the eastern front, had succeeded the late Field Marshal Walther von Reichenau as southern commander.

The broadcast also confirmed reports long current in neutral countries that Bock was taken ill shortly after Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch was replaced by Hitler as supreme commander of the German armies and had to retire from his central front assignment.

(Norwegian newspapers printed Berlin reports indicating that Gen. Ewald Von Kleist had taken over Bock's central command while Gen. Gerd Van Runstedt, Gen. Wilhelm List and Gen. Heinz Guderian presently were without commands.)

(Bock has recovered from stomach trouble for which he was treated in a Berlin hospital, these reports said.)

HERE'S A NEW wrinkle the progressive advertiser will want to investigate and use.

For years you may have had a favorable eye on Transportation Advertising. If you have been a car or bus rider you have seen these colorful cards daily and may have learned of the excellent results this type of advertising has produced.

Now, definitely, is the time when more than ever, this medium should become a part of your advertising set-up—for there are important new factors that have combined to make Transportation Advertising more than doubly attractive—especially in the last few months. Each of these factors carries an extra "wallop" to put behind your particular sales campaign.

Yes, the medium itself, has had many vital improvements in the last few years—circulation has gone up tremendously, while costs are still based on the lowest rate per thousand of any medium sold today. As a natural result this advertising is even more effective now than it has been in the past.

NOW, however, an added factor here in Washington increases that selling efficiency. We can offer you the additional opportunity of distributing to interested prospects all over this city folders which completely describe your products or service. This distribution is voluntary—taken by people who want to read it!

If you're a retailer, you can illustrate, and price, the many items you have for sale.

If you are a producer of trade mark products, you can illustrate and describe them.

If you offer premiums with your products, you can tell the whole story—or, if it's a service you're selling, as complete a description of that service as is necessary can be offered.

All you do . . . is set your complete story down in folder form not exceeding 7" in height by 3¼" in width . . . supply them to us and for handling and distribution we charge you $1.50 per thousand. They are distributed by means of the several Take One boxes which appear in every streetcar and bus here in Washington, and are within easy reach of the audience you want to sell.

Just think what this can mean to your business . . . ! Just think how many prospects of yours can be persuaded with this added urge to buy. Become a Transit Advertiser and use it as others are now doing . . . to their own great satisfaction . . . !

Congress Clears Way to Tide Over Workers

By the United Press

Congress cleared the way last night for speedy action on President Roosevelt's request for 300 million dollars in emergency funds to aid thousands of workers left temporarily unemployed while industry changes over to war production.

The necessity for speed was emphasized by Mr. Roosevelt himself. He told the lawmakers that thousands already have been thrown out of work by the curtailment of civilian production.

While these men eventually will be re-absored in war industries, he said, the interim will bring "widespread distress unless the Federal Government takes appropriate action to cope with the situation which is directly attributable to the war program."

His request was made in a letter to Speaker Sam Rayburn. He asked for authority to control expenditure of the funds in conjunction with the Social Security Board.

Not Intended for Dole

The program is not intended to be a dole. Its benefits would be extended only to jobless workers willing to take special steps to equip themselves for positions in war production.

Mr. Roosevelt proposed to give dislocated workers weekly compensation amounting to 60 per cent of their regular earnings, but in no case more than $24 a week for 26 weeks. In States which have unemployment compensation benefits, the Federal Government would pay the difference between State aid and the 60 per cent figure.

The program also would extend aid to workers not covered by State or Territorial unemployment laws, either because they are employed by small businesses or for other reasons.

The President would prescribe by executive order the "amount, duration and other substantive conditions" for granting benefits.

Uniform System Proposed

Mr. Roosevelt said the best solution to the problem would be a "uniform national system" extending the present Social Security laws. But this, he said, would require more time than the emergency will allow.

Likewise, he pointed out, relief by State governments "cannot be depended on," since only 13 regular or special State Legislatures are scheduled to meet this year.

"I recommend that the appropriation act indicate that this is temporary and emergency legislation covering at most the balance of the present calendar year," he wrote.

The State acutely affected by industrial dislocations is Michigan, whose numerous automobile factories are switching to war production with resultant unemployment of a large percentage of workers.

Ration Increased For Lifeboats

Women's Auxiliary Corps Backed by War Department

STUDY PLAN TO ENLIST WOMEN—Mrs. William P. Hobby, chief of the women's interest section of the War Department's public relations branch, and Lieut. Col. Ira Swift study provisions of a bill proposed to recruit 12,200 volunteers to form a women's Army auxiliary corps. They appeared yesterday before the House Military Affairs Committee

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

The War Department yesterday asked the House Military Affairs Committee for a "yes" vote on the bill to establish a Women's Army Auxiliary Corps which would take over probably 150,000 noncombatant jobs of types now held by soldiers and by civilian volunteers not subject to discipline.

Lieut. Col. Ira Swift, speaking for the department, said plans included calling up 12,200 women as soon as possible and assigning 9700 of them to filter and information centers for the air corps.

He estimated the cost of this venture at possibly ten million dollars a year and based the department's plea for it on the assertion women can do the jobs intended for them more efficiently than men.

"The Army is not short of man power," he declared, "and does not advocate creation of an Amazon division. However, there are a great many duties that can be performed better by women than by men."

Representative May (Democrat), of Kentucky, chairman of the committee, read a letter from Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, who praised the bill as "sound and practical."

"I think it can be assumed," Gen. Marshall wrote the committee, "that all of our available manpower and womanpower will be required to win the war . . . Efficient use of women for noncombatant services will require training and command such as the Army can give."

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, who introduced the measure last May, told the committee she was actuated by the belief that women serving with the Army forces should be subject to military discipline and that many women who would like to serve the country cannot undertake fulltime jobs without some kind of compensation.

Col. Swift said 6000 women volunteers already are serving at filter and information centers in 28 regions throughout the country. They are doing a good job, he said, but pointed out there are two weaknesses in a volunteer system. Sometimes volunteers do not show up for work and sometimes they decide to quit their jobs after they have been trained for them.

Married Women Eligible

Women joining up with the W. A. A. C. would enroll for one year, which would be extended "for the duration" plus six months, he said, declaring the 6000 volunteers already on the job would be the nucleus for the new auxiliary.

Questions by committee members brought out these facts about the bill as it now stands:

Married women could enlist.

Women could serve abroad, as well as in this country.

Enrollees would get their jobs back just as men drafted into the Army have been promised them, and would get the same moratorium on debts.

The "Waacs" would not be subject to court-martial, but could be given dishonorable discharges. Col. Swift declared the Army does not want the power of court-martial over the women and said that crimes such as sabotage would be subject to civil court jurisdiction.

The women would not participate in war risk insurance benefits.

They would share in medical treatment and hospitalization benefits, however.

If captured by a foreign force they would be prisoners of war.

An officers' training school would be set up to furnish the first officers. Afterward, advancements would be made from the ranks.

Director of the W. A. A. C. would have a rank qual to that of a major.

Hearings will be continued at 10:30 o'clock this morning. Other witnesses scheduled include: Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, director of the Women's Interest Division of the War Department, Col. D. M. Crawford of the Signal Corps and Lieut. Col. R. W. Berry.

Navy Cross Given Marine for Saving Lieutenant's Life

The Navy Department announced last night that President Roosevelt had awarded the Navy Cross to Marine Corps Private Joseph L. Brandon, of Jonesville, N. C., for rescuing Second Lieut. William W. Dean, of Hopkins, Minn., from a burning airplane in which they crashed at Quantico, Va., October 20, 1941.

Lieut. Dean was knocked unconscious when the plane he was piloting during a routine night takeoff crashed into a clump of trees and burst into flames on the railroad tracks.

Although severely burned himself, Brandon struggled from the rear cockpit, reentered the flaming plane when he realized the lieutenant was trapped in the front cockpit, and carried the officer to safety. The gasoline tanks blew up a few moments later.

The President's citation accompanying the Navy Cross said:

"For extraordinary heroism in the line of his profession. Private Brandon's action on this occasion was above and beyond the call of duty and reflects great credit upon the Naval service."

Both men are back on duty with their squadron.

where they say Argentina is not going to collaborate in the foreign ministers' conference."

"But Argentina, which defends the thesis that it believes best for America, will collaborate," the acting President went on.

By this he apparently meant collaboration on all hemisphere matters excluding a unanimous break with the Axis.

Castillo said the foreign office might make an official statement later.

Foreign Minister Enrique Ruiz Guinazu, chief of the Argentine delegation at Rio de Janeiro, is "carrying out instructions given him by the cabinet," the acting President declared.

Argentina Delays Break With Axis

By Percy Forster
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 20.—Though Argentina has decided not to break off diplomatic relations with the Axis powers "at the present time," according to information received tonight from Buenos Aires, other powers at the Inter-American Conference of Foreign Ministers were undeterred in their plan to go ahead Thursday with a vote on the resolution calling for a joint rupture of relations with Germany, Italy and Japan.

All other republics represented are expected to approve the resolution introduced by Colombia, Venezuela and Mexico.

Preparation for such action by Argentina had been laid earlier tonight by Ezequiel Padilla, Mexican foreign minister. He reportedly prepared a proposal that the remaining 20 nations go ahead with adoption of the severance plan and approve an accompanying resolution that it was their conviction that the action of the Argentine government in refusing to subscribe to the joint action did not represent the conviction or will of the Argentine populace.

The final decision of Argentina was based largely on internal political considerations involving issues in forthcoming elections, according to informed observers here. The Argentines had tried to persuade other delegations to modify the Colombian resolution so that it would subscribe in principle to the rupture of relations with the Axis, but leave the question of the time of such action up to each nation.

This proposal met no support elsewhere.

Action by Argentina was forced during the afternoon when the other delegations, impatient with the delay, demanded prompt action.

After Chile had reportedly advised the Argentine Foreign Minister Ruiz Guinazu that it would no longer oppose wishes of the 19 other nations represented, the Argentine diplomat literally rushed to his embassy where he was believed to have communicated the news to his government and asked for final instructions.

This action followed an afternoon conference among United States Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles and the foreign ministers of Colombia, Mexico and Venezuela, which Dr. Ruiz Guinazu attended briefly. Some observers believe that sponsors of the joint rupture of relations resolution—Colombia, Mexico and Venezuela—are prepared to demand immediate action on it and register its adoption—with or without the approval of Argentina.

Draft to Call 1Bs and 4Fs, Hershey Says

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Jan. 20.—Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey declared today that a lowering of physical standards would be necessary to draw man power needed for the Nation's armed forces from such deferred draft classifications as 1B and 4F.

The national director of Selective Service asserted rehabilitation of those with minor physical defects would be carried on within the Army as well as by local draft boards and by the registrants themselves. He said "guinea pigging" along this line already was under way in Maryland and Virginia.

Gen. Hershey told the American Legion's national rehabilitation committee at its annual meeting that the greatest problem facing the United States was "the orientation, training or retraining of men and women, and perhaps the children, to where they will fit best in the national war program."

Earlier, Legion Commander Lynn U. Staubaugh, of Fargo, N. Dak., told the more than 250 legionnaires from all parts of the Nation that "as a result of recent conferences in Washington concerning civilian defense," he had "every hope that in the very near future the American Legion will be assigned a definite task to do, bigger than any job we have yet undertaken."

General Hershey declared it would be necessary in the near future to bring into class 1A, fit for immediate service, those immediately below that class.

A project was underway, he said, to utilize, with or without rehabilitation, those with slight physical defects, such as flat feet or bad teeth, in antiaircraft defenses to free the fitter men for more active service. He added that others could be used in clerical and similar work.

Representative John E. Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, chairman of the World War Veterans' Committee of the House, declared all possible aid should be sent at once to Gen. Douglas MacArthur and "those brave men who are upholding our flag in the Philippines" and to the men holding Singapore.

Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veteran affairs, said he would oppose a rumored move to shift the Veterans' Administration out of Washington. He stated that of 47,000 employes of the administration, only 6000 were situated in the Capital.

Penalties Urged For Auto Dealers Ignoring Orders

Chicago, Jan. 20 (AP).—Criminal penalties for dealers who ignore the Government's automobile freezing and rationing order were recommended today in a legislative program submitted to the National Automobile Dealers Association convention by the organization's general counsel, Charles W. Bishop, of Washington.

Bishop said that the suggested legislative program, if adopted by Congress, would "answer most of the major problems facing the dealers."

Declaring that the Vinson Act, under which the freezing order was issued, lacks "teeth," since the only penalty provided for violation is the shutting off of the supply of priority materials, Bishop said that amendment was needed for "the protection of the great majority of the dealers who are complying with the order."

Some dealers, he said, are selling new cars openly "right now."

Censors Restore Use of Codes

By the Associated Press

The Office of Censorship announced last night that the use of nine commercial codes henceforth would be permitted in international cable and radio messages. The use of codes and cable addresses was banned with the outbreak of the war.

Those 548 Critics Select 'Filmdom's Famous Fives'

Gary Cooper Top Actor by 3-to-1 Vote; Ruth Hussey Passing Through to Lynchburg; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

SINCE THE 548 MOTION PICTURE CRITICS, columnists, commentators, etc., in addition to nominating the "Ten Best Pictures of the Year," in the Film Daily's twentieth annual poll, made nominations in ten new classifications besides, we hereby fulfill yesterday's promise, or threat, or whatever it was, to set forth the results. Publisher Jack Alicoate and Editor Chester B. Bahn, of the Film Daily, designate these various winners as "Filmdom's Famous Fives." Listings are in order of respective ratings.

GARY COOPER

Best male performances: GARY COOPER in "Sergeant York," Orson Welles in "Citizen Kane," Clark Gable in "G. W. T. W." Charles Chaplin in "The Great Dictator," Spencer Tracy in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

Best feminine performances: VIVIEN LEIGH in "G. W. T. W.," Bette Davis in "The Little Foxes," Katharine Hepburn in "The Philadelphia Story," Greer Garson in "Blossoms in the Dust," Ginger Rogers in "Kitty Foyle."

Best supporting actors: JAMES GLEASON in "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," Walter Brennan in "Sergeant York," Jack Oakie in "The Great Dictator," Walter Brennan in "Meet John Doe," Walter Brennan in "The Westerner."

Best supporting actresses: OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND in "G. W. T. W.," Margaret Wycherly in "Sergeant York," Hattie McDaniel in "G. W. T. W.," Mary Astor in "The Great Lie," Patricia Collinge in "Little Foxes."

Best juvenile actors: MICKEY ROONEY in "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary," Mickey Rooney in "Men of Boys' Town," Roddy McDowell in "Man Hunt," Dickie Moore in "Sergeant York," Bobs Watson in "Men of Boys' Town."

Best juvenile actresses: VIRGINIA WEIDLER in "Philadelphia Story," Carolyn Lee in "Virginia," Theresa Wright in "Little Foxes," Kathryn Grayson in "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary," Deanna Durbin in "It Started With Eve."

On the Mechanical and Technical Side

Best directors: VICTOR FLEMING for "G. W. T. W.," Orson Welles for "Citizen Kane," Howard Hawks for "Sergeant York," John Ford for "The Long Voyage Home," Frank Capra for "Meet John Doe."

Outstanding screenplays: "HERE COMES MR. JORDAN," by Seton I. Miller and Sidney Buchman; "Citizen Kane," "Sergeant York," "G. W. T. W.," "The Philadelphia Story."

Outstanding photography: "CITIZEN KANE," photographed by Gregg Toland; "G. W. T. W.," "The Long Voyage Home" (Toland), "Northwest Mounted Police," "The Thief of Bagdad."

"Finds" of the year: GENE TIERNEY, Theresa Wright, Joan Leslie, Orson Welles, Veronica Lake.

It is interesting that the balloting disclosed that only one vote's difference determined the alignment of third, fourth and fifth positions, as between Jack Oakie and Walter Brennan in the "best supporting actors" poll—with Brennan already firmly established as second. Also, in the "best juvenile actors" classification, after having capped first and second, Mickey Rooney also would have been sixth and seventh, had the listing been carried that far. In the "best male performance" ratings, Gary Cooper in "Sergeant York" led his closest rival by a 3-to-1 margin.

And how did this column come out in all this? Well, let me see. We had Gary Cooper, Virginia Weidler, Victor Fleming and Gregg Toland among the winners; Walter Brennan and Margaret Wycherly, seconds; Dickie Moore, among the juvenile actors, and "G. W. T. W.," among the screenplays, fourths, and lost out on the rest. So what? So that's what I want to know.

Ruth Hussey, costar with Robert Young and Hedy Lamarr In "H. M. Pulham, Esq.," the M-G-M Boxoffice Award winner for December, is a last minute stellar addition to the list of celebrities who will take part in the two-day festival at Lynchburg, Va., tomorrow and Friday, to mark the world premiere of "The Vanishing Virginian." The announcement says Miss Hussey will reach Lynchburg via Washington, which we hope is true—provided she can find time to alight here from her train, or plane, or motor car, or whatever.

When John Golden's production of Rose Franken's "Claudia" rings down the curtain on tonight's performance, it will become the 103d stage piece in the history of the New York theater to attain a run of 400 consecutive performances on Broadway. Out of this total number, Mr. Golden can boast five. And "Claudia" is the one of which he was so fearful when it opened at the National here a year ago that he would have closed it Saturday night had the local reviews not been what they were. No fooling.

And-They-Shoot-Men-Like-Lincoln Note

When Mr. Offutt, of The Post art department, was called upon to undo a handsome layout by reason of a popular orchestra conductor's sudden illness, his poisonous comment was, "Oh Shaw, there ain't no Artie!" Now I ask you!

PEGGY DRAKE

gazes pensively into the Hollywood moonlight and presumably discerns a bright future, or something. Miss Drake makes her screen debut as the romantic interest opposite Jon Hall, with Charles Laughton in RKO-Radio's production of "The Tuttles of Tahiti." Mr. Laughton, as the title makes clear enough, returns to the South Seas in this one. So does Mr. Hall

HEDDA HOPPER

Moss Covered Welles!

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 20.—You gotta get up early in the morning to beat Orson Welles. You know what he's gone and done now? I'll be durned if he hasn't taken his partner, Jack Moss, who is just about one of the best business men in this or any other town (he'd have to be, because he got all those cushy deals for Gary Cooper over a period of years), and turned him into an actor. Jack plays a killer in "Journey Into Fear." Then, too, Orson's making everybody double in brass. The secretaries, press department, his radio actors will all be in his picture. Jack Moss got Orson a weekly salary for every job he does—acting, directing and writing. When Moss first talked about it, Orson said, "I don't get a salary—I get a percentage." Jack replied, "Where is it? Haven't seen it. A salary in hand is worth twenty percentages."

DOLORES DEL RIO

But I don't think it's quite kosher for Dolores del Rio, who's been off the screen for two and a half years, to get top billing with Joe Cotten in same picture. One reason that Dolores got the part was that Michele Morgan wanted too much dough.

Here's the latest reporting on the Errol Flynn-Lili Damita divorce. Errol claims he doesn't want it. But it seems that when Lili Damita found out he wanted Doris Duke, she didn't want it. I'd hate to be around town the day he goes into court and tries to get it himself.

Director Irving Cummings wrote a blackout dinner sequence for "My Gal Sal," which is not only entertaining but instructive, and will give the housewife some pointers.

E. H. Griffith and his wife, America, are motoring through Nevada and Arizona and will return only when "Frenchmen's Creek" is ready for shooting . . . When Mary Astor's daughter, Marilyn, found "Made in Japan" on a tissue paper novelty, she started throwing it away, changed her mind and said, "What the heck! It won't last any longer than the Japs."

Director Al Santell recovered from the flu, is back testing for "Pearl of Paradise" and background shots will be taken at Catalina. They'll fly the troupe over . . . Rudy Vallee came out of the last war a lieut. commander, now begins all over by going into evacuation brigade as buck private.

I have a hunch the Cagneys will sign up their own unit at Warners. After all, they haven't done badly there. And with this new shuffle of producers, and Hal Wallis making only a few top pictures, I hope it means that boys like Bob Fellows and some of the others who have been doing yeoman work for years will get the credit they deserve. After all, it was Bob who suggested and put through "Knute Rockne."

So many reasons have been given for the Priscilla Lane-John Barry split-up. The real reason is that Priscilla, who never cared much about acting before, has gone overboard on being a career girl now that she's worked for Frank Capra and Alfred Hitchcock. And for the moment, pictures are her career—not matrimony.

LEONARD LYONS

Nobody Took Offense!

New York, Jan. 20.

Ruth Gordon has returned to New York, after the Boston and Philadelphia try-outs of her show, "Portrait of a Lady." The authors now are rewriting the script . . . In Boston, Miss Gordon's home town, Mayor Tobin presented the star with a gold key-to-the-city . . . Ruth received an inquiry from Orson Welles concerning the Boston run. "Tell me everything that happened," Orson asked . . . "This, in brief, is the full report," Ruth Gordon replied. "The mayor gave me the key to the city—and the general public gave me the gate."

When Thelma Schnee, of "The Corn is Green," receives her salary she places the bills in her stocking before appearing on-stage—rather than risk leaving the money in her dressing room. This week, during the third act, Miss Schnee discovered that she had lost her salary—that the bills dropped from her stocking and had fallen on the stage . . . "Don't worry," Ethel Barrymore assured her, "I'll get it for you" . . . Miss Barrymore made her entrance onstage, turned her back to the audience, picked up the money and continued with her lines. "That's the first time," said Ethel later, "that a Barrymore ever stooped to get money."

The United States Army soon will announce its newest auxiliary—dogs trained for some guard duty . . . Eddy Duchin, who will begin a cross-country tour soon, will double from all theaters into Army camps in the vicinity. He started yesterday, doubling from the Brooklyn Strand to Fort Hamilton and the Navy Yard . . . Bob Christenberry will lead a mass delegation of Manhattan lobbyists to Washington, to lobby for moving more Federal offices to New York City.

Dorothy Gish and Louis Calhern now are touring the Southland in their road company of "Life With Father." They've brought that play to many towns which never before had witnessed live shows . . . In Natchez, Miss., their company played to full capacity and standing room—except for the first four rows in the orchestra. No matter how reassuring were the ads, the movie-minded folk of Natchez refused to buy any seats so far front, for fear that the lights would hurt their eyes and that from those front rows the view would be distorted.

Mr. and Mrs. George Jessel will revitalize Fefe's Monte Carlo when they start their engagement there shortly. This will provide Jessel with his fourth concurrent job—starring in "High Kickers" and on his own radio program, together with a series of appearances he will make on the Fred Allen program, being the other three ways George has of idling away his time . . . This booking was made by Paul Small, who has opened new offices at the Ambassador . . . Groucho Marx describes his new income tax book, "Many Happy Returns," as "The Ides of Marx" . . . Aben Kandel, who wrote the book and movie, "City for Conquest," has completed his newest novel. Thursday night Greta Garbo suddenly decided that she wanted to dance. Dr. Gaylord Hauser escorted her to the Pierre, where they refused to be seated, preferring, instead, to stand in the rear of the Cotillion Room—watching one couple dancing on the floor. The couple pivoted, stamped their feet, grimaced at each other, twirled in expert fashion. They were Rosario and Antonio, featured dancers of "Sons of Fun," who are doubling at the Cotillion Room . . . When the couple left the floor Hauser invited Garbo to dance. "No, no. We'll dance when we go back to Hollywood," said Garbo. "I don't feel like dancing in New York anymore."

'Tobacco Road,' Holdovers on Incoming Bills

Capitol

"THE BUGLE SOUNDS." Latest in the Wallace Beery-Marjorie Main series of romantic interludes, this timely new feature also stars Lewis Stone and George Bancroft. The story is built around the United States cavalry sergeant who does all he can to discourage mechanized equipment. Henry O'Neill, William Lundigan, Donna Reed and Guinn Williams are in the cast. The Capitol's new stage show is headed by Cross and Dunn and Paul Gerrits, the roller-skating comedian. Opens tomorrow morning.

Robert Benchley, Allyn Joslyn, Eve Arden and Helen Westley are featured. Sammy Kaye and his Swing and Sway orchestra are the incoming stage attraction, offering their famed feature, "So You Want to Lead a Band." All the Kaye vocalists will be along. Follows "Sergeant York."

Share Autos To Save Tires, YoungSuggests

A voluntary "share your auto" plan, designed as a combined traffic-relief and tire conservation measure, was announced last night by Commissioner John Russell Young.

He named a five-man committee to study ways and means of promoting the idea among "patriotic" citizens. When perfected, the plan will call for car owners to carry capacity loads of neighbors to and from work.

Inspiration for Young's announcement was a letter received from Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, suggesting greater use of individual autos.

One Proposal Disapproved

Young, however, frowned on one of Delano's proposals: "That no car, public, private or official, shall be permitted to enter or leave Zone 1 which does not carry at least three passengers."

"That is perhaps a little too stringent," said Young, "but I feel certain Washingtonians will rally to the plan of sharing their cars with friends and neighbors on a voluntary basis."

Under Young's instructions, the special committee will explore possibilities of utilizing air-raid wardens in the various zones to organize "riding parties" in communities throughout the city.

Young commented that the wardens "know everybody within a two-block radius" of their stations and would be the proper ones to supervise the voluntary program. Persons who normally drive to work alone will be asked to pick up enough persons to comfortably fill their cars for trips to and from the downtown section.

Committee Appointed

The committee named by Young to study the plan includes Whitney Leary, chairman of the Tire Rationing Board; Chief Air-Raid Warden Clement Murphy, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the District club of the American Automobile Association, and George Keneip, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club.

Car owners, under Young's proposal, would rotate in the use of their vehicles to the extent that possibly an individual auto would be driven only one day a week.

Incendiary Bombs Individual Worry, Wardens Told

In an air raid it is every citizen's duty "to cope with his own incendiary bombs," A. H. Le Cheminant, of the British Purchasing Commission, told Montgomery County air-raid wardens at a meeting last night in the Woodside Methodist Church, Silver Spring.

Le Cheminant urged home owners to provide themselves with buckets of dry sand and to be sure their attics were clear of inflammable articles. He also emphasized the importance of a basic knowledge of first aid. Civilians, he said, "should at least have a knowledge of the pressure points for the stoppage of arterial bleeding."

Christenberry Wins Senate Approval

By the Associated Press

The Senate yesterday confirmed the appointment of Herbert W. Christenberry as United States attorney at New Orleans, accepting without debate the unanimous recommendation of a judiciary subcommittee.

The Louisiana Association for Clean Government had opposed Christenberry's appointment on accusations growing out of his associations with the late Senator Huey P. Long, but the committee dismissed the charges as "based upon conclusions and inferences, rather than upon fact."

War Production Board Members Meet With Chief

The committee made as its second recommendation, the enactment of "suitable legislation requiring "all labor unions (along with other special interest groups) to register with a suitable governmental body and to furnish pertinent information concerning their officers, members and financial condition at periodic intervals." It prefaced its recommendation with this declaration:

"The tremendous financial gains made by labor organizations during the period of the defense effort and the vast amount of funds and assets in their treasuries present an astounding picture of concentration of wealth, a situation heretofore usually associated only with industry and finance."

The committee told the House it has tabulated answers to questionnaires returned by 117 organizations, most of them affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations, having a total membership of 6,085,832.

14.85 Per Cent Gain in Assets

At the start of World War II in 1939, the report stated, these organizations "showed a total balance in assets of $71,915,665." By the end of last Mar h, the same organizations had increased their assets by $10,679,294, or a total gain of 14.85 per cent.

The A. F. of L. showed a percentage gain in assets of 14.74, while in the same period the C. I. O. gained 69.63 per cent, the committee reported.

One of the large independent unions covered by the report—the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers—disclosed a gain in net assets of $1,254,492.

"These vast tax-exempt funds reposing in the treasuries of labor organizations, many of which by strikes and work stoppages have delayed and even obstructed the defense program, presents a problem which the committee feels should well be considered by Congress," the report declared.

Since the committee, headed by Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, started its investigation, some Navy contractors, of their own volition, have offered to refund a portion of their profits to the Government. Although in some instances the refunds are to be deducted from future contracts, returns through renegotiation of contracts will save the Navy Department a total of $27,436,101.

In the case of the Bethlehem Steel Co. the committee made it clear that in making a $750,000 refund the concern was not being overly generous. It cited its profits as running between 25.41 and 27.03 per cent on more than $18,300,000 in ship repair or conversion contracts before refund. After refund, it said, these percentages would be 25.65 and 20.75 per cent.

Renegotiation of 12 General Motors contracts, the committee reported, has saved 5 per cent, or $4,592,225.

Bendix Profit 27 Per Cent

Bendix Aviation—27 per cent on a $1,378,445 contract, and 30.8 per cent on a $730,629 contract; Brewster Aeronautical—18 per cent on $1,493,721; Bridgeport Brass—16 to 26 per cent on four contracts, each in excess of $500,000; Maryland Drydock—44.5 per cent on $1,493,286; Todd Seattle Drydocks—more than 21 per cent on more than 5½ millions; the George Pollock Co.—44 per cent on a $2,556,590 breakwater contract; Erie Forge Co.—149.9 per cent on $534,574; Western Electrical Instrument Co.—247 per cent on $1,033.

The committee considered "worthy of note" contracts held by Albert Kahn, Inc., of Detroit, and Robert & Co., Atlanta. These companies, said the report, hold the largest number of Navy engineering and architectural contracts. Lawrence W. "Chip" Robert, former secretary of the Democratic National Committee, is identified with the Atlanta firm.

Leading the list of 15 dominant Navy contractors in total business was the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., with $470,812,000 in contracts on which profits of $46,202,200 are anticipated. The Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. reported $360,677,838 in contracts for a profit of $23,538,934, the committee reported.

The majority report which included in its recommendations legislation safeguarding competitive bidding, prior investigation of contractors by the Navy and standardization of cost-accounting, was signed by Representatives Vinson, Drewry, of Virginia; Schuetz of Illinois; Rivers, of South Carolina, Democrats, and Maas, of Minnesota; Mott, of Oregon; Cole, of New York; Bates, of Massachusetts; Hess, of Ohio; Jenks, of New Hampshire; Anderson, of California; Wolfenden, of Pennsylvania; Blackney, of Michigan; Wheat, of Illinois, and Johnson, of California, Republicans.

Signers of the minority opinion on labor were all Democrats—Jacobsen, of Iowa; Imhoff, of Ohio; Izac, of California; Flaherty, of Massachusetts; Heffernan, of New York; Bradley, of Pennsylvania; Sasscer, of Maryland, and Sutphin, of New Jersey.

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Japanese Planes May Play Part In Burma Fight

Chungking, Jan. 20 (U.P.)—A Chinese military spokesman today referred to large scale military operations in Burma as "imminent," and predicted that an important part would be played by Japanese planes from a new air base near Yenbai. This is in northern French Indo-China, about 85 miles northwest of Hanoi.

The airdrome, he said, will accommodate 300 Japanese bombers and is about 230 miles east of the nearest point on the Burmese border.

The spokesman said intelligence reports credited the Japanese with occupying 30 airfields in Malaya, leaving only 4 in British hands.

Five thousand wounded Japanese solders from Malaya are in hospitals in Saigon, French Indo-China, he said, and the arrival of several thousand urns containing the ashes of Japanese killed in Malaya has been reported from the same place.

probably not to be released for at least one year, and then only to "eligible" buyers under a rationing program announced on New Year's Day. Nelson said that the "frozen" order created a stockpile "from which all foreseeable military demands for such vehicles could be satisfied."

President Roosevelt's approval of Nelson's reorganization plans was received by the new supply director during a White House visit of more than an hour yesterday afternoon. Wilson carried a large, rolled-up diagram under his arm when he left the President's office, and admitted to reporters that it was his reorganization blueprint.

Organization "Stream-Lined"

Aides declared that the Chief Executive had not changed an item from the plan as presented.

Asked whether the plan would result in a "whole new organization," the production chief replied:

"Well, it's stream-lined to get action."

He will disclose it at a press conference today. It is understood to abolish the OPM, lifting its sections directly to the office of Nelson himself, as chairman of the War Production Board, and to call for the merging of some divisions and the shifting of most of the OPM personnel to jobs under the WPB but closely coordinated with the Army and Navy and Army and Navy Munitions Board.

Production Board Meets

The WPB, reconstituted from the former Supply Priorities and Allocations Board, but restricted by executive order to a merely advisory function, held its first meeting yesterday. According to its first announcement, it recommended the auto curtailment order, and Nelson approved it.

The action, drastic as it was, was viewed as an encouraging sign indicating an end to the uncertainty that has clouded the auto industry's future for half a year. Even though no authorization had been given to the industry for production of passenger cars beyond the end of this month, rumors persisted up until this week that a "soft" attitude would prevail and that further civilian motor vehicle manufacture would be allowed.

Finkenstaedt To LeadSymphony Funds Campaign

Edward R. Finkenstaedt, 3028 N Street Northwest, yesterday was named chairman of the National Symphony Orchestra's twelfth campaign to raise funds to maintain the symphony's 1942-43 season. The campaign will get under way April 15 and will continue through April 25, Corcoran Thom, president of the orchestra's board of directors, said in naming Finkenstaedt to the post.

Finkenstaedt, who has been active in affairs of the orchestra since its founding in 1931, was elected to the board of directors a year ago and was named assistant treasurer of the orchestra association.

In accepting the chairmanship, Finkenstaedt said that the existence of the National Symphony is more vital to the people of Washington now that we are at war than ever before.

"Even if air raids should come," he said, "music must go on here just as it has in England."

OCD Funds To Be Spent For Equipment

The Office of Civilian Defense explained yesterday that none of the 100 million dollars authorized for it by Congress will go in money to any municipality or State.

The full amount will be spent for equipment needed in various protective services of OCD, particularly for firefighting tools. An initial order of five million gas masks also is scheduled.

This equipment will be allotted on the basis of vulnerability of an area and will remain Federal property. Central storage stations for repair will be set up in perhaps a half-dozen locations, it was announced.

Local defense councils were urged to acquire as much equipment as they can from municipal storehouse or other sources without waiting for a possible OCD allotment. There will not be enough of everything to go around.

WPA in War Work Urged

A program for conversion of the Works Project Administration into a war agency was submitted yesterday to Administrator Howard Hunter by WPA Local No. 1, United Federal Workers, C. I. O.

"The WPA already has given evidence of its ability to adopt its program to the most pressing demands of the Nation," the UFW proposal states, "but it still falls short of being adequate in the present situation."

The program proposed placing of all WPA workers on war or essential civilian projects, such as airport and road construction, air-raid shelter building, collection of various scrap materials. Also suggested was retraining of unemployed and displaced workers for war industries and expansion of civilian defense facilities.

Women Are Called

Volunteers for courses training them to be members of a women's land army can register Friday at headquarters of the American Women's Voluntary Services, 2170 Florida Avenue. A registrar from the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office will be in charge of the enrollment.

Two groups of classes are planned. One will start February 9 at the University of Maryland. Others will start the middle of February in the high schools of Herndon and Fairfax County, Va. Fundamentals of gardening, poultry care and dairying will be taught, and possibly the operation of farm machinery.

New Classes Ready

Registration for new classes at the Women's Defense Training School will be held today, tomorrow and Friday at the Church of the Covenant, 1229 Connecticut Avenue Northwest. Hours will be from 9 a. m. until 1 p. m. and from 7 to 10 p. m. daily. A total of 200 pupils will be accepted, 100 for day and 100 for evening courses.

First graduates of the school will receive diplomas at exercises held January 29 at 8:30 p. m. in the Shoreham Hotel ballroom, it was announced yesterday by Lieut. Glenn Russell, commandant.

D. C. to Order Air-Operated Raid Sirens

If Washington's example is being followed by the rest of the country, a lot of cities and towns may find themselves with air raid sirens, horns, etc., on their hands which are inefficient, if not useless.

Commissioner John Russell Young, District Defense Coordinator, yesterday revealed that orders will be placed at once for 11 compressed air horns and eight steam whistles. These are in addition to the 41 electric sirens already on hand and some of which have proved rather ineffective.

Simultaneously, the Bureau of Standards disclosed that it is still testing horns, sirens, whistles and public address systems. In the near future a rating report is to be submitted to the Office of Civilian Defense, which requested the examinations.

It is probable that OCD, when all performance scores are in, will pass on the information to the country at large to guide local communities in their selection of signals.

But the Capital's are already being installed or, as revealed yesterday by Young about to be purchased.

The unearthly sounds which thousands of northwest section residents heard yesterday morning emanated from a horn being tested at the Bureau of Standards. The blasts alternated between a basso profundo and a mezzo soprano.

Only reason the experimental warnings did not contine into the afternoon was that the device blew a bearing. Today it is scheduled to be restored to use, operating on compressed air. It can also be steam-powered.

This particular signal, unlike a siren, does not sound its warning with a steadily rising pitch but blurts it all at once—boomph! If the number of inquiries which The Post received, particularly from Cleveland Park and lower Chevy Chase residents, is any criterion, the horn is pretty effective.

The Bureau of Standards is testing sirens, air horns, steam whistles, electric horns and public address systems, various types of each class and all submitted by manufacturers. OCD isn't planning to buy any itself, but to gather expert opinion on the devices for the benefit of towns and cities planning to buy them.

Nanking School Official Heads Disciples Rally

Emphasizing that Christianity has survived through 20 centuries of war and other evils, Dr. Searle Bates last night called for renewed faith in the mission enterprise.

Dr. Bates, vice president of the University of Nanking, China, now among the "refugee" institutions in sanctury near the Burma Road west of Chungking, addressed a rally of disciples of Christ members from the District, Maryland and Virginia at Ninth Street Christian Church, Ninth and D Streets Northeast. It was an observance of "disciples day."

Dr. Bates from 1930 to 1937 was a member of the Nanking University faculty, and when the Sino-Japanese war broke out, he became vice president.

Sharing last night's program were Dr. Robert M. Hopkins, president of the international missionary body of the Disciples' denomination; Mrs. O. S. Murphy, national secretary of the World Call, its missionary publication; the Rev. Ralph W. Frame, pastor of the Alexandria Disciples' Church, and the Rev. J. Lloyd Black, executive secretary of the Christian (Disciples of Christ) Church Council of Washington and vicinity. Mr. Black presided.

A fellowship supper preceded the service.

Drs. Hopkins and Bates and Mrs. Murphy are members of a "team" of Disciples' workers which is addressing various "Disciples' Day" programs in this area. They will speak today in Hagerstown, Md. The Disciples' role in the United Christian Advance in Christian Education—a project in which 20 denominations are cooperating—is being stressed.

Mr. Black, in a message yesterday, outlined the work of his Christian Church Council, a liaison office between newcomers to the city, especially members of the Disciples of Christ, and the local Disciples' churches.

The Rev. Dr. Carroll C. Roberts was host pastor to the rally.

Women Finish Police Work Friday Night

Come Friday night, Washington gets its first crop of trained auxiliary women policemen.

At that time these women will conclude their final training class in the dining room of the House of Detention, a tiny building adjoining the Police Women's Bureau at Fifth and M Streets Northwest. The structure was formerly used as a garage for the charity ambulance and is sometimes referred to as "a wart on the side of the house."

Capt. Rhoda Millikin, head of the Women's Bureau, told The Post of the new police yesterday in an interview and seemed very proud of the 25 women who will be added to her force. The rookie female cops will be sent on a three-hour assignment twice a week, the captain said, with a regular member to get experience.

Get Practical Experience

However, Capt. Millikin warned, this procedure will last only long enough for them to get experience. "We are responsible for these people," she said, "and when we take them out we don't want anything to happen to them. They are volunteers, and if we get some hefty drunk who swats out left and right giving the woman a black eye, we can't do anything to compensate her for it."

Capt. Millikin—a tall, thin, brown-haired woman with a friendly smile and a ready laugh—said 110 auxiliaries have been authorized. At the present time, she declared, there are 50 in training, including 92 who have been sworn in and completed their medical examination. In all, 115 women have been registered.

Even though her quota has been reached in this respect, she is continuing registration. This is because a number of her students are Government employes working in agencies due to be transferred from the city. All women applicants at the present time must first report to Capt. Millikin for a personal interview.

She attempts to find their "attitude toward the situation" in this talk, as well as their occupation and marital status. This is followed by fingerprinting and "mugging" at police headquarters and a character investigation. Finishing this, Capt. Millikin continued, they are ready for school.

Course Lasts 28 Hours

The entire course lasts 28 hours with 10 hours of this time devoted to first aid, 5 hours to identification of bombs and gases, 5 hours to traffic and barricading and 8 hours to the laws of arrest, rules of evidence and the handling, searching and registering of prisoners.

The captain believes the average age of the students is about 32 years. At the conclusion of the training course, women showing particular aptitude for the work will be selected for promotion. There will be one captain, two lieutenants and four sergeants, it was said.

During an "alert" the women policemen will probably wear a uniform consisting of a tin hat, a white visibility belt, an armband, and a raincoat, "if its raining," the captain added. The women's auxiliary police corps is divided into three sections, emergency services, clerical services and motor services.

An availability file is kept at the Women's Bureau with the name, address and telephone number of all members of the auxiliary typed on a colored card showing when she is able to report for duty. White and yellow cards by day and blue by night.

Iron Works Head Denies Charges

Bath, Me., Jan. 20 (AP).—President William S. Newell, of the Bath Iron Works Corporation, characterized tonight as a "gross lie" the House Naval Affairs Committee's report that his concern had made as much as 29 per cent profit on destroyer construction.

On one destroyer, Newell said, his concern made a profit of 20 per cent, but some of the other ships delivered to the Navy yielded "absolutely nothing."

Red Cross Fund For District At $176,670

The District Red Cross War Fund yesterday reached $176,670.27 toward its goal of $750,000.

Officials announced that a gift of $1162 was received from employes of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., bringing the total from that group up to $10,484. There are 4500 persons employed by the company and its gift yesterday places it far in the lead in the utility group.

Other gifts yesterday were $1000 from S. H. Hines Co. and $125 from the Washington Loan & Trust Co. An organization gift of $25 from the Daughters of Isabella also was received.

Meanwhile, the national organization announced that recruiting of trained personnel to serve with American forces abroad is under way. Chairman Norman H. Davis said six units have been formed and eight others are being organized. Each unit will be subject to immediate call and members will perform the normal Red Cross welfare duties with the soldiers.

The administrative staff of each unit will be a field director, with one or more assistants; a medical social worker, a woman recreation worker for convalescents, and a recreation worker for able-bodied soldiers.

Similar groups are being attached to the armed forces in Iceland, Alaska, Newfoundland, Trinidad, Canal Zone, Puerto Rico, Bermuda, Hawaii and the Philippines, Davis said.

It was pointed out that persons with heavy domestic responsibilities are not encouraged to volunteer for this service.

Petworth Group Discusses Bomb

Fighting of bombs was discussed last night at the Petworth Citizens Association by Harmon A. Chapman, a zone warden and retired battalion chief of the fire department.

The association, meeting at Petworth School, adopted two resolutions, one reaffirming its position in favor of a second crosstown bus line over Military Road and another reaffirming its stand favoring the sale of three bus tokens for a quarter.

Joseph A. Walker, first vice commander of Fort Stevens American Legion Post, explained the program of the post. Invocation was by the Rev. James P. Rodgers, pastor of the Petworth Baptist Church. A men's quartet from the church sang.

SHORT ACCOUNTANCY COURSE FOR WOMEN

Opportunities for women in accountancy are increasing in a proportion greater than the number of women accounting students. The war, with resulting expansion of business and government coupled with the induction of many men into the army, has increased this demand.

To meet this need we offer a short coordinated accounting and business law program which may be completed in one year in the day division or may be taken in evening classes. Basic Accountancy Certificate awarded at end of course may be applied toward requirements for B.C.S. degree.

Receipt of a $500 contribution from Lord and Lady Halifax was revealed yesterday by the United Service Organizations of the District.

In making the contribution, Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, wrote that the sum represented in part the fee he received for publication rights of a speech, and also a contribution from the British Embassy staff.

Sidney A. Taliaferro, chairman of the District USO funds campaign, in acknowledging the contribution, said it "typifies the spirit of good will and unity of purpose which characterize our two nations at this momentous time."

Nazis Catapult Planes to Stiffen Aerial Defenses

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Jan. 20.—The Nazi Luftwaffe was reported tonight to have begun using a new rocket launching device for its fighter planes as part of a program to strengthen its defenses against the cross-channel sweeps of the Royal Air Force.

British authorities pointed out that the catapult method of launching fighter planes was commonplace in the fleet air arm, where it was used of necessity because of the absence of a satisfactory runway. It was estimated that only a few seconds might possibly be saved by some form of rocket launching.

Claims in the German press that the device can throw up fighters to a height of several thousand feet at a speed of nearly 400 miles an hour were discounted here.

DeGaule Urges Link With Soviet

London, Jan. 20 (AP)—Gen. Charles DeGaulle, leader of the Free French, declared in a broadcast tonight that France was "going to link her ressecent effort to the effort of the Soviet Union."

"For centuries past," DeGaulle said in a B. B. C. broadcast directed primarily at France, "a Franco-Russian alliance too often was thwarted or counteracted by intrigue or lack of comprehension. It nevertheless remains a necessity which appears anew at every turning point in history."

Withholding Tax Weighed By Treasury

The Treasury was reported last night to be considering the application of the withholding tax principle as a means of collecting individual income taxes on a monthly rather than on an annual basis.

Although the withholding tax principle was not formally advanced in recent informal schedules submitted as a basis for preliminary tax studies, it was learned that the Treasury is giving serious study to the method, primarily as a collection medium.

Daily Conferences Held

Indications were that the Treasury would be ready to present its recommendations on the new seven-billion-dollar tax program about February 1.

Daily conferences, meanwhile, are in progress between Treasury tax officials and experts of the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue. Plan is to lay a working basis for the program in these early talks so there will be a minimum conflict between the administrative and legislative branches when Congressional taxmakers get under way.

A withholding tax in various forms figured increasingly along with a general manufacturers excise tax among new methods of taxation discussed individually by members of the House and Senate committees.

George for Withholding Tax

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, has advocated a low flat rate imposed as a withholding tax on all personal income, in addition to the annual income tax assessments.

Representative Crowther (Republican), of New York, a ranking minority member of the House Ways and Means Committee has indirectly indorsed a 10 per cent withholding tax on condition that part of the sums collected go back to the taxpayer in defense bonds.

Young Mother Wins Protest Over Rent

Washington landlords last night were warned by Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell that henceforth "lockout" methods against tenants behind in their rent payments will not be tolerated.

He further warned that infractions of his order may result in fines or imprisonment. In the past, roomers have had no recourse when they found themselves locked out for failure to keep up rent payments.

Under the Rent Control Act, said Cogswell, roomers are now classified as "tenants" and are entitled to all benefits under the laws. Evictions, he added, may be authorized only by court order.

Cogswell's order followed the case of a young mother and her 4-year-old child who were refused access to their rooms and were forced to spend the night with friends. The mother had declined to pay her rent until the landlady agreed to make certain electrical repairs.

The landlady was told she could not lawfully evict the pair until a court order had been issued and the mother and child were permitted to regain possession of their living quarters.

An investigator for the Rent Administration also found that the young mother had been paying excessive rent and the landlady was instructed to make restitution to the amount in effect on January 1, 1941—the day rents here were "frozen."

2 Boys Missing From Local Home

Two boys, one the son of a former German Embassy employe, were missing from their home last night.

Police were asked to search for Robert Zeisler, 16, son of Mrs. Christine Zeisler, a stenographer with the German Embassy here and now living in Greenbrier, Va., where the staff was taken following outbreak of war with Germany, and Walter Hess, 15, of 3427 Thirteenth Street Northwest.

13 Perish as Flames Devour 5-Story House in Lynn, Mass.

By the Associated Press

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 20.—Thirteen persons died today as an early morning fire howled through Melvin Hall, five-story brick apartment and rooming house in downtown Lynn.

The first firemen arrived at 1:45 a. m. to hear the screams of those who clung to window ledges and the moans of other who had plunged frantically to the ground. Some of the approximately 70 tenants of the building died with aid almost within their grasp.

Among the dead were the aged and infirm who had little chance of escaping ahead of the swift moving flames.

Others reached upper floor windows; then fell back in the blaze before help could reach them.

At least two died as they took their chances in jumping to the street. About 10 who waited were caught safely in life nets.

One man plunged 40 feet to the ground as he tried to lower himself on a rope of bed sheets.

One three-year-old lad was found dead, clasped in his mother's arms.

Twenty-two men and women who were burned or injured lay in Lynn and nearby hospitals—some of them firemen from 12 nearby communities.

Mayor Albert T. Cole said he would demand a State probe to determine why fire escapes were not available.

There were countless stories of heroism.

Howard Webster, who lived on the top floor, aroused several families on the floor below, and then returned upstairs to save his mother, Maude. Both died in the flames before help could reach them.

William J. Day, an infantile paralysis victim, shouted and hurled his crutches from a window to attract attention, with the heat so intense that he could hardly stand on the floor, even with his shoes on.

And his mother stood beside him, barefooted.

"I don't see how she could stand it," Day said, "but she remained cool and wrapped wet towels around our faces."

And the firemen finally reached them.

Lucky me—I got my man at last!

IT took a Post Want Ad to make Jim see the light. For weeks he'd been wondering what to do about those lovely brass andirons his uncle left him. "I could buy a fireplace," he said. But I felt he should be saving instead of spending. My advice—sell the andirons! But Jim was afraid . . . "I'd only get a fraction of their worth—and they're worth plenty!" Me: "Not if you put a Want Ad in The Post—the paper almost all the better paid, and better paying, people read! I know. Once sold an attic*ful* of things through an inexpensive Post 'Miscellaneous for Sale' Want Ad. And Jim, I cleaned up! Why don't you try it?"

Jim did try it—and a few days later he asked me to marry him . . . "Because you're too darned smart to be running around loose!" You see, his Post Want Ad got such grand results—Jim got his price. And I got my man, lucky me!

It pays to put a Want Ad in The Post

Up To Mrs. Roosevelt

In her many years of public service Mrs. Roosevelt has established a considerable reputation because of her friendly, direct approach. The other day, when asked by reporters whether she intended to remain as assistant director of the Office of Civilian Defense, she upheld that reputation with customary frankness. She said she would remain "if they want me." The First Lady naturally had no intention of embarrassing her colleagues. But her remark puts them very much on the spot. With unsparing energy, Mrs. Roosevelt has helped the civilian defense program through the difficult and often heart-breaking preliminary stages. Now that the OCD is called upon for effective and prompt action, it may seem a poor return, indeed, to tell her that she is no longer wanted. Certainly her colleagues cannot be expected to take such a stand.

Yet the issue is very clear. Running the OCD is a tough job which can be done satisfactorily only by a single head, supported by full-time assistants whose position and prestige in no way compromise the authority of the director. On several occasions this newspaper has taken the view that Mrs. Roosevelt—and, of course, Mayor LaGuardia—should for the good of the OCD program retire from its administration. Their obligations elsewhere are exacting. By attempting to administer the OCD as well as to discharge those other obligations they divide their energies and lay themselves open to public criticism which, justifiably, will not down. We think Mrs. Roosevelt, in her own interest as well as to promote a vitally important program, should exercise her usual discretion and good sense and take the lead in relieving an undeniably unfortunate situation.

Japan's Trade Policies

Japanese trade relations with other countries of the Far East is a timely topic about which very little is known. But it is a subject on which every American should be informed, for it helps to explain what the war in the Pacific is about. Dr. Henry Chalmers of the Department of Commerce has contributed heavily to an understanding of Japan's predatory trade methods by an article in the current issue of Foreign Commerce Weekly.

Under the resounding title of the "Greater East Asia Co-Prosperity Sphere" Japan has been striving to create a more self-sufficient regional economic bloc under Japanese direction. Eventually she expects this bloc to cover a larger part of Eastern Asia. For some years, it appears, the movement of goods into and out of Manchuria and occupied China has been strictly controlled by a system of licenses and exchange restrictions. Imports into these areas have been supplied, in so far as possible, from areas within the so-called "yen bloc," comprising the Japanese Empire, Manchuria, and North China. Exports have gone for the most part to Japan, where they have been disposed of on terms extremely disadvantageous to the people of the occupied areas. The foreign trade of occupied China, moreover, has been increasingly shifted into the hands of Japanese concerns at the expense of western trading firms.

The commercial agreement concluded between French Indo-China and Japan last May is a typical example of one-sided bargaining. Dr. Chalmers points to the close resemblance of this pact to German methods of economic penetration on the European continent. Indo-China, for example, agreed to send Japan its entire rice surplus and also to ship specified quantities of other foods and raw materials to Japan. In exchange, the Japanese agreed to deliver specified quantities of textiles and other manufactures to Indo-China. But the amounts delivered were quite inadequate to cover payment of the shipments from Indo-China, as was doubtless foreseen. Later on, the Indo-Chinese government nevertheless prohibited all exports without a special license, except to Japan. This inequitable trade pact, it should be noted, was made when Japan presumably still respected the territorial and economic integrity of the colony. Since its occupation by Japanese military forces, no information is available as to the extent of Japanese control over the colony's trade and internal economic activities.

The evidence assembled by Dr. Chalmers makes it doubly plain that Japanese political domination of the Far East would be only a prelude to systematic economic exploitation of the people after the Nazi fashion, even if they were to remain nominally independent. Japan's conception of a "Co-Prosperity Sphere" appears to coincide with the German idea of prosperity for Germans at the expense of all other people.

Goldsborough Incident

The shocking performance of Justice Goldsborough in the Viereck case was smoothed over yesterday. In place of an attitude which William Power Maloney, special assistant to the Attorney General, described as "arbitrary, tyrannical and unreasonable," the judge was subdued and cooperative. That, of course, is to his credit. He had taken an utterly untenable position from which a complete retreat offered the only hope of escaping serious consequences. But the charge brought by Mr. Maloney against Judge Goldsborough was so grave that it will not be erased from the public mind either by his withdrawal from the Viereck case or by the charge being withdrawn from the record after he agreed to back down.

At the direction of the Attorney General, Mr. Maloney filed an affidavit of personal bias and prejudice against Judge Goldsborough. Not infrequently it happens that some judge is prejudiced against some defendant and therefore eliminates himself from a case before the court. But in this instance Judge Goldsborough was accused of prejudice against the United States Government in its prosecution of a known Nazi agent—the representative of a country with which we are at war. That is the gravest sort of a charge. But even after it was made on Monday, Judge Goldsborough failed either to refute it or to step aside. His later withdrawal came just in time, apparently, to avert intervention by the Court of Appeals.

Mr. Maloney quotes Judge Goldsborough as saying: "I don't give a —— —— about the Government's position. This case goes to trial not later than Wednesday, January 21, 1942, and I am going to try it. You might as well get through your head once and for all that no other judge in this court can try this case except me, and the trial will start on Wednesday, whether the Government is ready or not." There had been previous indications that counsel for the Nazi agent preferred to have Judge Goldsborough preside at the trial, and he had been anything but coy about taking the case over from Justice Letts.

Regardless of the general desire to give a judge the benefit of the doubt, this sort of conduct cannot be ignored. It tends to bring the court itself into disrepute. What is equally serious, it tends to undermine the confidence of the public in the quality of justice which Judge Goldsborough is prepared to mete out.

Remedies for such gross indiscretion on the bench are difficult to find once the judge has taken his seat. But this disgraceful incident could easily have been avoided back in 1939 when Judge Goldsborough's appointment was made. He was transferred to the bench from Congress as a political reward. When the President so misuses his power over the judiciary no one should be surprised that the courts are sometimes humiliated by their own members. The President should be the last to expect a high quality of justice from politicians sent to the bench solely to gratify their ambition or because it is deemed necessary to "take care" of them.

Japanese Broadcasts

The Japanese, perhaps under German tutelage, seem to have hit on the one sure way to build up an audience in this country for their propaganda broadcasts. From time to time the Tokyo radio sends out purported information about American war prisoners. So far, anyway, the broadcasts are all of a pattern. Americans captured at Guam and Wake are allegedly well treated and in good spirit. Even transcriptions, supposed to be authentic, of statements by American prisoners reflect an optimistic note. The intent, of course, is to trade on American sentiment, which the Japanese and the Nazis despise, and consequently to soften morale and fighting will here at home.

The Japanese are perhaps better equipped than is generally realized to carry on this particular brand of psychological warfare. Many of their radio technicians and announcers have been educated and trained in this country and are thoroughly familiar with all the professional aspects of "audience appeal." Long before the war began some were being used in government propaganda broadcasts directed to the Japanese in Hawaii. Then, as now, the prevailing tone was an almost saccharine friendliness. Instead of putting American prisoners on the air, however, the broadcasters feature guest appearances of returned Japanese who tell of the glories of the New Order.

We should not underestimate the effectiveness of the present broadcasts. Through them Americans have learned details which had been kept secret by the Navy Department. Several days ago, for example, the Japanese revealed the names of officers and civilians taken at Wake. They broadcast what they claimed was an electrical transcription of a statement by Commander Winfield Scott Cunningham, in charge of naval operations at Wake. Commander Cunningham's name had not appeared in the Navy's official account of the action at Wake; yet soon after the Japanese broadcast the Navy acknowledged that he was indeed the Wake commander.

Obviously such tactics on the part of the Japanese place the Navy in a difficult position. As an antidote, a more relaxed policy governing the release of prisoners' names might seem to be called for—though relaxation of official policy is exactly what the Japanese are fishing for. Not to make any change, however, is to permit the psychological initiative to remain with the Japanese. If, as is undoubtedly the case, the Japanese are aware of the considerable feeling here against the withholding of lists of casualties and missing persons, they may be depended on to continue exploiting the situation for their own purposes.

Battle Of Attrition

The sinking of a Japanese cruiser by six American Army bombers off the Island of Jolo in the Sulu Archipelago brings to 40 the total of Japanese war craft and other vessels sent to the bottom by our armed forces. An additional 22 Japanese ships have been sunk by our Allies. Since December 7 Japan has lost one battleship, three cruisers, seven destroyers and nine submarines. Thus the initial naval advantage gained by the Japanese through their treacherous attack on Pearl Harbor, followed soon after by the sinking of the Prince of Wales and the Repulse, is being whittled down. The picture growing out of this war of attrition is thus somewhat brighter than the over-all situation might lead one to believe.

This fact, together with the stiffening resistance of the British in Malaya and the magnificent rear-guard action being carried out by General MacArthur in the Bataan Peninsula of Luzon, may partly account for the tone of Prime Minister Churchill's statement in Parliament yesterday. While he admitted general anxiety about operations in the Pacific, he expressed "growing confidence" in eventual victory there. Another and important consideration behind his measured and qualified optimism may be the circumstance that reinforcements are beginning to arrive in the Pacific. The exploit of the six Army bombers in the Sulu area would seem to confirm this.

The naval war between the Axis and the United Nations is not confined to any one ocean. As in the case of military operations, the whole world is the battlefield. The presence of enemy submarines off the east coast of the United States—they have already sunk three ships and damaged a fourth—shows how close as well as far ranging is our peril. Their operations may be part of a strategic move to draw American naval strength from the Pacific and from the main North Atlantic sea lanes which, during recent months, have been made reasonably safe. The submarine menace in and near American waters is another challenge we must meet. In the meantime the public can be expected to react with the same degree of restraint and common sense which has been in evidence since the war began.

Educating Soldiers

Headquarters of the Third Corps Area are introducing lectures by civilian experts in current affairs into the general instruction program for officers and enlisted men. No doubt this innovation will be received with enthusiasm. Little has been done so far to keep trainees informed as to the progress of the war or even as to the cause for which they are preparing to fight. Newspapers, magazines, and radios have been too scarce in the camps, and pay scales do not permit the men to supply their own sources of information. Free hours have been filled, moreover, with scheduled entertainment, training hours with technicalities. Our fighting men want more than this. Some months ago naval officers on a ship bringing newsmen from a war front saw an example of how eager men in the service are to obtain an understanding of what is going on in the world. Talks by the newspapermen were eagerly attended and vigorously discussed. They were considered a successful venture in boosting morale. We should never for a moment forget that ours are the armies of democracy. Forthrightness in teaching them the background of the great drama in which they are acting will not only make better soldiers; it should also help former soldiers to keep their bearing and readjust their lives to civilian pursuits when a victorious peace has been established.

DAWN

Deep are the waters of the world
And the heavens high;
High as the upthrust wing of a bird.

Who has seen the day
Come out of the ocean,
Dropping spray
From lifted hand and shoulder?

Tell then—
Out of these doorways
Lintels of steel and granite,
Passes what new-born heart
And what delight.

'Needs Clause' for Pensions

I request the introduction of legislation to provide a "needs clause" to be operative at least during the war, which "needs clause" should be the basis of the payment of pensions of our disabled and their dependents. The hundreds of millions that might be saved by withholding veteran benefits to affluent and lucratively employed veterans might, in a measure, be utilized to increase the compensation or pensions now received by disabled veterans and their dependents who have no other means of income than the veteran benefit they receive.

This suggestion would be applauded by the American people and no patriotic veteran in these perilous days would dare have the effrontery to criticize the withholding of an unneeded pension during the war. Any man knows that it is a form of stealth for a man who is wealthy or earning a good income to take an unneeded pension at this time.

The history of pensions shows that pensions were initiated by Washington to supplement a man's reduced earning capacity, i. e., his economic security. Certainly in these days no man should be extra compensated who is above this condition.

Tax For Use

Who was the prize idiot who picked up the "tax-for-use" idea and sold it to Congress, to apply to motor cars?

The few States that started this monstrosity, a few years ago, let loose more profanity than a little. After a man has paid every conceivable tax on buying the car and excessive taxes on gas, to be asked to pay another tax just to use his property is away beyond all reason.

Right now when we are speeding up everything for more production, even trying to save daylight that doesn't exist, we throw tacks on the road by such folly. This nuisance tax for use should be called a "slow-down-production" tax. It will cost more to collect than the total revenue, besides the irritation to everybody. The people will pay the billions needed, but don't make us mad over such silly taxes.

Delivery Service

I have just read the following release from OEM.: "The Bureau of Industrial Conservation and OPA today issued a joint appeal to the shopping public to carry home bundles, thus helping to conserve tires, trucks and wrapping paper."

I note it is stated that if the shopping public will carry home bundles it will help to conserve tires, trucks and wrapping paper. This is very interesting. But just whose "tires" and "trucks" will it conserve? Or does the OPM envisage that the shopping public will tote a large number of bundles home on foot? It seems to me that where a large number of bundles are to be carried it will involve their being drayed by some one, either the consumer or the merchandiser. Since the general "shopping" public is not privileged to buy tires when their own are gone, it seems to me that the drayage should be done by those who are privileged to buy tires.

The public is not complaining about doing without tires. But surely it is clear that there will be more trucking now than ever before. People will not have tires to go to stores, particularly grocery stores, to buy things and then take them home in their own cars.

The tire shortage has sounded the death knell of "park-and-shop" stores in large cities. I, for one, have shifted to a grocery store and to other stores that deliver. Many others are doing the same, and the number will increase as the consumers' tires wear out.

Women cannot struggle home on a crowded bus, most of which have standing room only, with their arms filled with bundles.

Perhaps this will turn out to be an effort on the part of merchandisers to take advantage of the shortage situation in order to save money and pile up their profits. What do you think?

Farmer's Income

The farmer claims that he should get a larger income because for years he has not had a fair income. If this is so, as it may well be, it follows that the farmer has been suffering at the hands of the American people—the whole people; all the rest of us. It further follows that if farm prices had been raised on that ground a year or two ago all the people would fairly have shared the increased cost of farm products. No special group could fairly have claimed the right to be relieved from bearing its share of the common obligation.

Has the war changed the rule of fairness in any way? And does not the rule apply also to the case of war prices? The prices may have been unavoidable, or they may have been wicked, but there they are, laid on the American people. They are a common burden. Yet many labor union members and others are demanding that their standard of living shall be preserved by increasing their dollar incomes to match the rise in prices. No matter if that increases the burden on others, their precious incomes must be inviolate.

We might almost say: "Forgive them, for they know not what they do." What they are doing is really shirking, slacking. They are perpetrating treason. Evidently the simple rule should be absolute: Nobody's dollar income should be increased a single penny on account of the war-begotten rise of prices. Increases on other grounds, such as might have been fair in 1939, are not condemned by this rule.

The farm bloc, by its demand for parity prices, stands in the forefront of all the slacker-traitors. Fortunately, it seems probably that our patriotic farmers will not follow.

Naturalized Workers

Are there any "Men of Good Will" left amongst us ready to come to the defense of loyal naturalized citizens who, although possessing high qualifications and Civil Service status, are not only eliminated from Government positions but exposed to indignities from prejudiced bureaucrats?

High officials of the Department of Justice condemn discrimination in public speeches but no action has been taken to protect the rights of such individuals although the President's order barring discrimination was issued months ago. Therefore, those who are victimized feel that the Government is encouraging this injustice in its own departments while condemning it otherwise.

Is it not a danger to National Unity to deprive loyal citizens of the right to make a living while they are asked to give their sons for the defense of the country?

Is it not against our own interests to deprive the country of the valuable services of those who are only too eager to do their share?

Will not the law of retribution eventually take its course?

Regulating Aviation

Is it not high time that steps be taken for a better regulation of transcontinental and interstate airplane traffic?

Is it not the case that many, if not most, of the accidents occurring in such traffic, do so in mountainous country? Under the circumstances would not a rule be in order that no mountains be crossed, at least their highest crests or ridges, except during daylight and when the visibility is good?

In addition, should not the starting point be made sufficiently far away to enable the pilot either to correct engine or other trouble or else ground his machine before he attempts the always hazardous undertaking to rise safely above the danger zone in high altitudes?

ALEXANDER L. TINSLEY.

Voting In The District

Opposition to local self government in Washington proceeds largely from ignorance, self interest or disbelief in the American form of Government. Those who oppose it for the third reason are fortunately few. Those who are actuated by self interest are mainly politicians or others with axes to grind, but the number of persons whose opposition is due to ignorance is appallingly large. Among that number is your recent correspondent who signs himself "Bored."

For the information of this anonymous person, and of others who are equally in the dark, may I list briefly, without arguments or supporting data, a few of the main facts which controvert your correspondent's statements?

(1) The District of Columbia shares in the apportioned service. Its quota is filled, but so is that of Maryland and some other States.

(2) Federal civil service employes do not all retain voting rights "back home" when they come to Washington to live. Some States have a provision for the retention of voting privileges by nonresidents, whether or not in Federal employ. Retention of legal residence in the State to which a civil service employe is initially allocated is not necessary for continuation in the service.

(3) The number of Washington residents who retain and exercise voting privileges in the States is quite small, especially among home owners and responsible taxpayers.

(4) Quite a number of persons are born in Washington every year, some of whom continue to reside here after they attain their majority. Some of them own homes and pay taxes. A few even get Government jobs, though the cards are stacked against them.

(5) Federal civil service employes are not prohibited from holding elective offices in municipalities that have nonpartisan elections. The best municipal governments are nonpartisan.

(6) Municipal elections are held separately from State and national elections. The right to vote in municipal elections is not necessarily dependent on the right to vote in State and national elections. Residents of incorporated towns in Prince Georges County, Md., are privileged to vote in town elections, though holding State voting rights elsewhere than in Maryland.

I suggest that those who, through ignorance, oppose local self government take cognizance of the above statements, and endeavor to refute them factually, if they can.

Your campaign for modernization of the present inefficient and un-American municipal government in Washington is greatly appreciated by the voteless taxpayers.

KENNETH P. ARMSTRONG.

The Post Impressionist

Bataan Peninsula

Few of us are able to make personal feelings secondary to patriotism, and I am no exception when I consider the Bataan Peninsula. MacArthur's gallant stand there may deservedly make history, but to me comes the selfish thought that a very good hunting ground is being ruined. That jungle swarms with deer and wild pig.

These animals are making a last stand there against onrushing civilization because, except for a few timber trails and native footpaths, the jungle is impassable without use of ax and bolo. Between mountain peaks are wide valleys and swamps containing breadfruit and mangrove trees with great twisted buttresses and smaller ones of thorny wild lemon and orange, and of hairy betel nut and sago palm. Bitter raspberry and bajuka vines are woven among the smaller shubbery and this insect and snake infested mass miasmatically steams with the rains and fogs of the South China Sea.

One runs into malodorous morasses of tall canelike runo which drenches the interloper with sticky moisture. Land crabs make sucking sounds as they bury themselves in the mud and one is forced to keep his eyes almost constantly directed downward to avoid stepping on gigantic slugs whose slimy bodies make footing precarious.

A stranger would be perfectly silly to attempt to hunt there without a good native guide. Such a one I had in Cirioco. He was an Ilicano and out of his element in the Tagolog country but knew almost every deer trail and pig path, across from Corregidor, along the Marveles coast, and could habla Spanish, Tagalog, and could even sputter Negrito.

With Cirioco, clad in cotton underpants and camesa and armed with a sharp bolo, in the lead, and with me following, sweating in heavy boots, strongly knit denim trousers, sun helmet and mosquito net veil, in addition to lugging a fairly heavy rifle, a few hours usually were sufficient to learn from timber workers and Negrito huntsmen where game was running. When luck avoided us, fortified with bars of chocolate and a canteen of distilled water, we sat the night through in rudely constructed blinds beside pig paths.

It was on one of these not unpleasant nights that I made the acquaintance of Ongay, 85 pounds of Negrito chief. While we sat in our blind he came soft-footing it along the pig path with the same objective in mind that we had. He spotted us immediately and then developed a long habla between he and Cirioco concerning the weather, the moon, and their bearing on the possibility of pig.

While they talked I sized up the little fellow and became covetous. During previous hunts I had obtained a hand-forged bolo, a tobacco pouch made from the scrotum of a carabao, a bamboo fire gun, and a very good hunting bow, but I had never run across a break arrow comparable to some I had seen in other people's collections. Ongay had it. Its point was tipped with hand-forged steel. The four-inch bolt on which the head was fitted was of epal, and it was grooved into a polished bamboo shaft with scarcely a break showing. The bow end was symmetrically feathered. The cord which held the bolt and the shaft together was of abaca and had been hand-twilled with painstaking effort. I expected to pay at least two pesos for it and cautiously opened bargaining with a medio peso. Ongay sneered. He outlined the toil and loving care he had devoted to that arrow and said he would part with it for no less than the amazing amount of 10 pesos. Um-m-m. Other collectors would give me the laugh. Part of the attractiveness of collecting is the obtaining of bargains. I offered my jackknife and Ongay countered with a willingness to trade for my rifle. I offered my horsehair watch chain but Ongay wanted the watch. There seemed no middle ground.

Cirioco, anxious to be of help, presented the chief with chocolate and 'dobe cigarettes. In return the chief invited us to attend a Negrito wedding in a nearby barrio on the second day following. I accepted with the mental reservation that I would have trading material.

On Calle Rosario in Manila I found in a Chinese second-hand shop a full-dress bandsman's blouse of dark, rich blue, heavily trimmed with red and with shiny brass buttons. Ongay couldn't resist it. I got the break arrow but Ongay owned the blouse in something less than 10 minutes. I had brought along a cheap watch with a luminous dial for the groom and a Spanish comb for the bride. In less than a minute after I had given them to the couple the chief was bargaining again. He offered the blouse for both articles but crashed against sharp objection from the bride. She admired the appearance of the groom in the blouse but could see small advantage accruing to her from his sartorial splendor. She accepted appeasement when the chief promised to be godfather to her first-born. The groom wore the blouse when he made the slide down the bamboo chute, arm around the waist of the bride, thus symbolizing their start on the long journey of matrimony.

MacArthur, not being a below-the-belt fighter, will probably not avail himself of the help of these pigmy fighters. It isn't considered cricket by the English or baseball by Americans to use civilians in actual fighting, even though their opponents may use this and other unethical methods, but if I were MacArthur, I would enlist the Negritos. Their break arrows and bamboo spears would be of little avail against a modern army unit, but they have one war procedure which would prove—well, useful. They protect their retreats. They sharpen thin slivers of split bamboo to needle-like sharpness and thrust them, sharp and up, in cleverly concealed little pitfalls. If the Jap infantry constantly ran into these the echoes of their hissed curses would disturb the tranquillity of the sublimely seated "Son of Heaven" in his Tokyo retreat.

Balancing The Fronts

By Ernest Lindley

Japanese Must Be Checked Now

ALTHOUGH THE WAR in the southwestern Pacific has reached a critical stage, especially on the Malay Peninsula, high officials are not wholly pessimistic. Both British and American reinforcements have reached the theater of active war. Presumably they are mostly air reinforcements and not yet large. But the communiques reveal that small groups of American bombers are doing effective work, and the light naval forces of our Asiatic fleet seem to be hitting with increasing success at Japanese sea communications. Moreover, enough time has now elapsed since December 7 for larger reinforcements to be at or near their destinations.

LINDLEY

Although Singapore already has been made useless, at least temporarily, as a major naval base, and its installations seem destined to be badly battered by Japanese bombs, the British are determined to hold it. Their experience with Malta, still being used as a naval station after more than a year and a half of bombing raids by both Italian and German planes based on Sicily, makes them think Singapore can still be valuable even if it is surrounded by Japanese air fields. Malta must be taken by air and sea, however, while only a narrow body of water separates Singapore from the mainland.

American bombers appear to be operating from bases in the Netherlands East Indies, and it is to these and to Australia that our additional reinforcements probably will go. If the Japanese can be halted before they have reached the main southern defensive line stretching from Singapore eastward along the main line of the East Indies, a grand disaster in the Pacific can be averted. If the Japanese crash through, the war certainly will be prolonged—some estimate by a year, others by two to five years.

BUT THE JAPANESE have not yet crashed through, and one of the best-informed and most level-headed of American officials appraises the outlook in this way: "If we—the British and ourselves—do all that we are capable of doing in the next few weeks, I believe the Japanese can be halted."

As only a few high officials know what reinforcements are being sent, there is no way in which others can judge whether the last ounce of speed and ingenuity is being applied to this vitally important task. But some who are well-informed doubt that all that should be is being done, due to an Atlantic-mindedness that is perhaps excessive in the Anglo-American high command, and to a still-lingering tendency to undervalue the fighting capacity of the Japanese.

MUCH MORE is being and will be done, however, to bolster the wavering defenses of the southwestern Pacific than might be supposed from Secretary Knox's speech last week to the United States Conference of Mayors. Knox probably belittled the Pacific phase of the war more than he intended. He knows, of course, the importance of holding Singapore, the main line of the East Indies, and the supply route to China via Burma. He knew also that reinforcements were being rushed. He was intent upon answering a question which he supposed was bothering many American citizens: Why hasn't the American Navy boldly moved in to strike decisive blows.

Knox may have mistaken some of the classical strategists in the Navy for the American public. The old idea of rushing the American Navy across the Pacific in full force to seek out and engage the main Japanese battle fleet was laid aside last spring, when part of the Pacific fleet was moved to the Atlantic. After Pearl Harbor it was out of the question. But Japanese land-based air power would have made it suicidal in any event. On the question of air power, polls and other indices have shown that public opinion has been far ahead of the Army and Navy. The last few weeks have left the naval and military die-hard conservatives without a leg to stand on.

KNOX PERHAPS overstressed the Atlantic phase, also, because he thought that many American citizens were off balance on the other side. The country had been divided on the question of going to war with Europe. It was united by the Japanese attack, and it is probably still the Pacific phase, where our national honor is involved and American forces engaged in action, in which the emotions of most Americans are most deeply involved. Advisers to the President point out that many former isolationists are manifesting an interest only in the Pacific theater.

But some in the Government feel that the pendulum has swung too far. They fear that such spokesmen as Knox—and even the President himself—are giving the American public and our Pacific Allies the impression that we do not intend to put up a strong fight against Japan now. More seriously, they fear that some of our high officials still underrate the importance of checking Japan, even though the grand offensive aimed at their destruction may be wisely deferred until Hitlerism has been smashed.

House Told Researchers Can Get Rubber From Wheat, Corn

Representative Coffee (Democrat), of Nebraska, said yesterday four chemurgy research executives had worked out a process by which they believe farm products can supply the Nation with all the rubber it normally needs.

He named the men as Dr. Leo M. Christensen, of the University of Nebraska; W. K. McPherson, of Alabama Polytechnic Institute; Harry Miller, of the University of Missouri, and L. A. Underkofler, of Iowa State College.

Drs. Christensen and McPherson told a House Agriculture subcommittee, Coffee said, "that they could get 10 pounds of synthetic rubber out of a bushel of wheat or corn or any agricultural commodity with starch or sugar in it." He added:

"One hundred and twenty million bushels of corn or wheat would produce 500,000 tons of rubber which is our normal annual consumption. That would be about 5 per cent of the corn crop in the Nation.

"The rubber would be produced at a cost of 15 to 20 cents a pound, a little less than the cost of making rubber out of oil. Synthetic plants would have to be established but they could get into production about six months after they were set up."

Plenty of Cheap Rubber In Brazil, Aranha Says

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 20 (AP).—Oswaldo Aranha, Brazil's foreign minister, said in a radio interview broadcast to the United States today that 20 million rubber trees in the Amazon jungles could be tapped to produce rubber in a hurry for the war program.

"If you would pay half of the $1.20 you are paying for synthetic rubber to get our wild rubber you would start a gold rush to the Amazon and would get rubber in a hurry," he said.

At present the United States is only paying about 30 cents a pound for Amazon rubber, he said.

"When I was in Washington I tried to tell the State Department that we had everything in South America that you were getting from Asia and Africa," he added.

"Bolivia has plenty of tin but you were bringing it half way around the world from the Malayas. Ecuador has cocoa but you were getting it from Africa. Brazil has coffee and rubber but you were getting all your rubber and some coffee from Java and Singapore."

Fair Enough

New York Police

IN TIME of war and in the face of the enemy, the City of New York is contending with a situation which, in the military services, would be very seriously likened to mass desertion in the face of the enemy. Within the last month 142 policemen of the force which has been honored as the best in the United States and one of the best in the world have applied for retirement on half pay. Of these applicants 40 have served less than 21 years and 21 less than 22 years and among this group there are five bachelors and no dependents.

Of course, the entire list includes many cops of very long service, one with a clean record of 40 years. But there are many active, robust men well under 50 years among those who would now bow out in the face of air-raid emergencies and there is no legal means of holding them if they insist on exercising pension and retirement right which were lobbied through a generous and politically responsive Legislature by the agents of their pressure group.

The department is 863 men short already and unable to obtain replacements because the young recruit who is fit to become a policeman is just the sort the Army needs most. On the other hand, fit young men in their early 40's who get out on half-pay amounting to at least $1500 a year would not be drafted for some time and by the time they are reached may have acquired just enough age to put them out of reach of the draft. The figures are mixed. Some 20-year men are well up in years, having entered the department late, while some 23-year men are still under 50.

IN NOT ONE single case, however, is there a claim of physical infirmity. These are all sound men fit to continue to serve as policemen, but word has spread through the service that certain war emergency schedules would call for extra tours of duty and might eliminate vacations, but this has not yet been done in the brother service.

There are two pension-retirement plans in the police department. One requires 25 years' service and a 5 per cent contribution out of the cop's pay to the pension fund. The other permits retirement in 20 years, but calls for a 6 per cent contribution. Under the old law a minimum of 25 years was required and the applicant had to be 55 years old. The firemen gave the cops the idea, for they had long enjoyed the right to retire as old men in the prime of life after 20 years' service on pensions to which they contributed not a dime. Theirs was just a racket and a farcical imposition on the public's affection for the men who ride the red wagons and climb the ladders.

Patrick Harnedy, himself a cop and president of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, the harness cops' union so to speak, has tried to arrest the stampede with a telegram posted in all stations reminding the men that "in common with all other citizens" cops should be glad to respond without thought of hours or personal sacrifice in a serious situation. He reminded the men that the law fixes their pension rights but urged them not to exercise those rights "because of unjustified and false rumors relating to working conditions or changes in the pension law." The nature of the rumors isn't stated, but if they anticipate longer hours and loss of vacations there is no sense in pretending that they are false.

COPS, like everyone else, obviously would have to work overtime and forego vacations in case of invasion or bombing from the air and Harnedy's telegram has the sound of a plea to some of the men not to desert. Of course, the pension law could be changed, but not retroactively, so the men's rights there could not be impaired. Indeed, a cop declaring his desire to retire now and continuing to serve as a special favor to the community might still be able to claim his benefits even though convicted of misconduct after the date of his declaration. That would raise a serious problem of discipline, but the situation is a mess, anyway, thanks to a silly law which permits a man to quit on pension in the prime of life.

Under military conditions the cops would be held in service for duration and some retired men would be recalled.

There has been a good deal of malingering since the law was amended to provide full pay for men on sick report after three days. Formerly they got only half pay and, although there are surgeons to examine the ailing there has, nevertheless, been a distinct increase in the number of interesting invalids. There are usually about 500 men away.

The moral effect of this mass retirement is bad because the New York cop has come to enjoy the respect of the people who actually look to him as a protector but now see men quitting by the score when air raids threaten.

Long Hard War

By Mark Sullivan

Internal Collapse Is Only Shortener

LET US not speak in terms of years or months. Let us merely say long or short—that this will be a long war or a short war.

SULLIVAN

Anyone who thinks this war will end in a comparatively short time, must depend on one reason only. If the end of the war is to come relatively soon, it must come by one condition—by some kind of blow-up within the Axis, especially within Germany. Collapse within Italy would not be enough, for Germany would in that case simply treat Italy as an occupied country. It is collapse within Germany that alone could make the war short. If there is to be any other outcome, if the war's ending is to come through fighting, then the war will be long.

As to whether there will be a blow-up within Germany, we had best just forget it. No one knows, and there is a wide gamut of conflicting assertion. Certainly we cannot depend on it, and because we cannot depend on it, we had best ignore it. Blow-up within Germany is a thing we cannot bring about nor contribute to, except as we keep her under pressure of fighting. So we had best be on with our fighting. And we had best assume the war will be long—we cannot safely assume otherwise.

THE WAR will be long, and it will be hard. In spite of the recent successes of Russia, it is still a fact that Germany is favorably situated for a long war. As for Japan, she has only just begun to fight, in the sense of fighting England and us; and she is in the surge of an immense forward momentum.

Geographically, Germany is a compact, fighting unit. She fights within a consolidated area. Every spot she fights upon, every spot she owns or controls, or holds through her ally Italy, or holds through conquest—every spot is in contact with every other spot. She fights within a circle of solid territory.

At only one part of the circle is she under attack. And Russian attack upon Germany, by the very reason of its success, has reached a stage where further success is not more likely, but less likely. For the present situation of Germany and Russia, in relation to each other, there is a classic military analogy. The two armies, and their respective lines of supply, are like coiled springs facing each other. As Russia moves forward, as the distance of Russia's army from its base and capital increases, so does the strength become less. Conversely, as the German army is forced backward farther and farther toward its base and capital, the coils of the spring become tighter, its strength greater.

WHAT WE SEE now is the reverse of what we saw last summer. Then, it was the German army, as a released spring, that was getting farther and farther from its base and capital, thus making the spring weaker. And conversely, it was then the Russian army, forced farther and farther back upon its base and capital, that acquired increased strength, increased striking force.

Only the more optimistic are likely to hope that the present Russian advance will go on until it enters German soil. That would mean such weakening of German strength as could only arise from collapse within Germany. And collapse within Germany had best be ruled out as a factor in the military picture.

Any attack upon Germany other than Russia would need to cross water. There are but three powers able and disposed to attack Germany, and of the three only Russia has an approach by land. Not only would England and the United States need to cross water, the crossing in our case would involve an immense factor of distance. This we must take into account when we estimate our war effort. Of our total exertion, perhaps 50 per cent can be actual impact upon Germany, the other 50 per cent must be expended in getting within reach of Germany. This is the same as saying that we must make twice as great an effort as Germany—in order to be on equal terms with Germany. This is why so much of our effort must be spent upon ships. And there are good judges who believe that in order to defeat Germany (and also Japan) it will be necessary for us to devise an airplane capable of going a greater distance with a heavier load of bombs than any now in use.

WITH JAPAN, it is much the same as with Germany. Japan fights inside a circle. While not a circle of solid land, it is composed of so many islands, at such short distances from each other, as to be the equivalent. If Japan succeeds in taking the Philippines from us, and Singapore from England, then the circle within which she fights will be some 5000 miles from our mainland. And her distance from England will be greater. If we comfortably remember that outposts of England, such as Australia are close to Japan's circle, we must also remember that, for us and for the British, getting supplies to Australia is a large military effort subject to interruption by the Japanese naval and air forces.

There is no tenable course for the United States as a Nation, or for any citizen in his management of his own affairs, except to count upon a long, hard war. There are helps—the continued valor of China on Japan's flank, possibly greater success by Russia than is fair to expect. But the sure path to victory is the maximum of effort by all of us, as a Nation and as individuals.

The Story Of Rubber

By Herbert G. Moulton

(This Is the Second of a Series.)

WITH DECLINING PRICES production of wild rubber shrunk to quite nominal figures—around 30,000 tons annually—and at the present time 97 per cent of the world production is from rubber plantations, principally in the East Indies. In all there are approximately 8,900,000 acres planted to rubber trees, of which approximately eight million acres are in bearing. Three-quarters of the planted acreage is concentrated in two areas—38.8 per cent in British Malaya and 37.2 per cent in the Netherlands East Indies, the latter being made up of Dutch Borneo, 8.2 per cent; Java, 7.1 per cent, and Sumatra, 24.5 per cent. These figures stress the vital status with respect to rubber production of Singapore at the southern tip of British Malaya, with Sumatra lying just west, and guarding the gateway to Dutch Borneo and Java to the east and south.

The distribution for 1940 of the world's productive capacity and exports of crude rubber, in long tons of 2240 pounds, is shown in the following table:

Country	Capacity Tons	%	Net Exports, Tons	%
British Malaya..	633,000	37.0	540,417	38.9
Netherlands E. Indies.	705,000	41.2	536,740	38.6
Ceylon..	163,000	9.6	88,994	6.3
British India & Burma.	31,000	1.8	23,317	1.6
Brit. Borneo	22,000	1.3	17,623	1.3
Sarawak...	46,000	2.7	33,168	2.3
Thailand...	52,000	3.1	43,940	3.3
French Indo-China....	73,000	4.3	54,427	4.6
Rest of world	45,000	2.6	41,300	3.0
Total.....	1,710,000	100.0	1,391,834	100.0

The figures given for the rest of the world include Oceania, 2287; Liberia, 7223; other Africa, 10,103; South America, 17,801, and guayule rubber from Mexico, 4106 tons. A small part of the South American and African production is from recently established plantations, but most of it comes from wild trees, including about 14,000 tons from the areas in the Amazon Valley that prior to 1905 supplied nearly all of the world's rubber. The guayule rubber from Mexico is produced from a wild shrub somewhat similar to sagebrush. The export figures for the East Indies include somewhat in excess of 30,000 tons of rubber content of latex shipped for use in manufacturing operations involving direct coating or impregnation by dipping or precipitation, mostly in the United States.

In addition to the above true vegetable rubber production, there is a growing synthetic rubber industry, which will be discussed more fully later herein. The production of synthetic rubbers in 1939 is estimated at 75,000 long tons, made up of Russia, 50,000; Germany, 20,000; United States, 3000, and other countries, 2000. The United States production has been increased with a large additional productive capacity under construction and planned, and it is probable that the German and Russian production has also been increased. The synthetic rubber industry is still a relatively small one, the 75,000 tons produced in 1939 comparing with 1,005,000 tons of natural rubber.

RAPID as was the growth in demand for rubber as the ownership and use of automobiles increased, the growth in productive capacity was even greater as the newly planted rubber trees came into bearing. As indicated by the table presented earlier herein, the 1940 capacity was 21 per cent in excess of even the immense exports of that year; it was nearly 70 per cent in excess of the exports of 1934, 1937 and 1939, and approximately twice the 1935, 1936 and 1938 exports.

As productive capacity ran ahead of demand, the price of rubber sagged. Supported temporarily by World War I, it held at 72 cents average for 1913, and 60 cents for 1918, but thereafter declined to 16-17 cents in 1921-22.

Question Of Morale

By Barnet Nover

Facts And Rumors From The Reich

IS DR. GOEBBELS trying to lull the United Nations into a false sense of security by subtly spreading rumors of an imminent crack-up in the Third Reich? Or has German morale actually deteriorated to the point where the facts can no longer be hidden from the world?

NOVER

The warnings of Secretary Knox and others, that reports of serious dissensions and outbreaks in Germany must be heavily discounted arise out of the fear that the enemies of the Axis, in general, and the American people, in particular, will allow wishful thinking to guide their actions rather than unblinking realism. There is reason for this fear.

BEFORE THE FALL of France large numbers in this country were convinced that Great Britain and France would through their own efforts defeat Hitler so that there was no need for us to do more than give those countries moral support plus supplies on a cash-and-carry basis.

Later, as a result of the repulse of the German aerial blitz by the stout-hearted British, Americans hugged to their bosoms the hope that Great Britain, with the help of a trickle of lend-lease supplies from this country, would do the job.

More recently, understandable gratification over Russia's magnificent showing against the Wehrmacht has sometimes taken the dangerous form of assuming that the Red army would polish off Hitler so that there was no need of our exerting our full strength in a cause which, even before December 7, the Nation had identified as its own. And despite repeated disappointments the belief has survived that sooner or later German morale would break under an accumulation of strains, Hitler and his regime would be overthrown and the nightmare would be over.

THE POINT is that regardless of the truth or falsity of the reports of growing difficulties in the Reich it would be fantastic folly on our part to exert less than our fullest energies in the prosecution of the war.

This does not mean, however, that all the reports and rumors of grumbling, dissension, weakening of morale and other suggestions that cracks are beginning to develop in the Nazi office are untrue.

For instance, no widespread purge of German generals may have taken place, as was reported from Stockholm on January 11. Yet the resignation of Gen. von Brauchitsch and the assumption by Hitler of active command of the German armies on the Russian front certainly testifies to some kind of a shake-up in the military hierarchy.

There may have been, there probably was nothing to the rumors of an incipient revolution in Germany which the Nazis dramatically denied before the outside world heard anything about them. Yet it is impossible to believe that the German people have been unaffected by the disastrous developments on the Eastern front during the past six weeks.

The theory that Dr. Dietrich, the Nazi press chief, was engaged in a Machiavellian effort to throw dust in the eyes of Germany's enemies when he declared on January 10 that operations in Russia "have entered an extremely serious and even critical stage" does not hold water in view of the fact that this statement was printed in the German press.

THERE IS A LIMIT to what censorship and propaganda can do.

Dr. Goebbels has proved himself a man of diabolical cunning. But not even he can make the German people believe they have been winning victories when they haven't, or keep from them indefinitely the measure of the defeat they have suffered on the Eastern Front. Nor has he recently tried to do so.

What he has done, instead, is to "roll with the punch," tell the Germans the unpleasant truths they already know (since there was no way of hiding it from them anyway), and then bring home to them what the consequences would be if the tide does not turn again in Germany's favor.

There is overwhelming evidence to show that the Germans, as a whole, entered the war without enthusiasm and responded with the same lack of enthusiasm to the successive victories won by the German army in the west, in the Balkans and (until November) in Russia. This apathy never prevented the Wehrmacht from winning those victories, nor can it, of itself, produce a breakdown in the Reich.

What Goebbels has done is to change the contents of the hypodermic injections of propaganda he has been forcing into the mental blood stream of the Germans. Whereas, in the past, he emphasized the rewards of victory to keep them in line, now he is emphasizing the consequences of defeat to achieve the same purpose. It may work just as well and, for a time, even better. And since the propaganda directed by the Nazi regime to foreign countries would have no potency under existing circumstances if it attempted to paint a rosy picture of conditions in the Reich, Goebbels has done the next best thing by diluting the truth with fantastic rumors in the hope that this will confuse Germany's enemies and perhaps lead them to lower their guards.

THIS DOES NOT MEAN, however, that German morale is impregnable. It is not. But there is an enormous gap between passive acquiescence in an increasingly unpleasant situation and active revolt against it.

The former describes the German state of mind today. Continued defeats may produce the latter. We must look to military measures to crack German morale and in that way hasten the end of the war rather than depend on a weakening in German morale to bring about Hitler's military collapse.

For that reason the United Nations cannot slacken their efforts against Germany and her allies for even a moment. The French and the British did not win the war as we hoped they would in 1939. The Russians are doing better. But they still have a long way to go. It would be foolhardy to expect that the Germans will do the job for us. The United Nations must do it themselves by smashing German military power in Europe and Africa, Japan in the Far East.

The Gallup Poll

Expectancy of Long War Found Greater In the United States Than in Britain

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 20.—The typical American believes that it will take another two years, at at least, to whip the Axis enemies. That is the indication from a nation-wide poll by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

But a substantial number—more than 38 per cent—believe the war will last another three to five years or more. In general, the expectation of a long war is somewhat greater in the United States than in Britain.

The public's ideas are, of course, based purely on guesses. Their guess as to the length of the war comes from their own analysis of war events, plus what political leaders and military writers say. The average layman's view has real significance because it affects his reactions to the whole matter of reorganizing and arranging his daily life in conformity with war controls, his willingness to make sacrifices, his political ideas, and his attitude toward the speed and scope of the war production program.

The Institute survey was based on the following question:

"About how much longer do you think the war will last?"

The results are:

Less than 2 years	21%
2 years	29
3 years	16
Longer than 3 years	22
Unwilling to guess	12

Approximately one person in every 10 (12 per cent) thought the war would last five years or more. One person in every 50 (2 per cent) thought it would last 10 or more years.

In Britain, the British Institute of Public Opinion, an affiliated organization, recently completed a survey among British voters on the same general question.

The results were:

POLL IN BRITAIN ON LENGTH OF WAR

Less than 2 years	23%
2 years	29
3 years	12
Longer than 3 years	16
Unwilling to guess	4

Previous polls have shown that voters both in the United States and in Britain have in the past tended to underestimate the length of the war.

In comparing the British and American views in the above tables, it will be noted that the number who expect the war to continue for less than two years is substantially larger in Britain than in the United States. Also, more people here than in Britain think the fighting will continue for longer than three years.

An analysis of the results of the American poll by income groups shows no extensive variation between the more well-to-do and the lower economic levels, except that in general the middle and lower income groups expect a slightly longer war than the upper groups.

The Life of
Capt. Colin P. Kelly, Jr.

The Washington Post presents this series on the life of Colin P. Kelly, jr., from first-hand information given by the parents and the widow of the war hero, as well as boyhood friends and neighbors in his home town. The widow of Capt. Kelly, who has unsparingly given her services to the Red Cross, has declined all offers of remuneration as a result of her position after her husband's heroic death.

CHAPTER IV

A Christian Soldier

By Carol Frink

As told by his Parents and Widow

MADISON, Fla., January 20.—"He was a Christian soldier."

That's how the Rev. Robert H. Latham, the 75-year-old minister who baptized Colin, started his talk at the memorial services for Capt. Colin held here in the Presbyterian Church four days before Christmas.

Colin's Christian soldiering started in the primary department of the white-pillared old church across from the public square, when he was just old enough to sit in the little red chairs and listen to Bible stories told by Mrs. Daisy Smart.

Mrs. Smart has been teaching this class for 35 years, and today 20-month-old Corky Kelly, son of Capt. Kelly, is one of her young charges. She had little Colin in her spiritual care until he went into the junior class when he was 9.

"And I remember," says this gentle elderly lady, "how badly I felt when I had to promote him. Of all my children, Colin was the brightest and the sunniest."

Mrs. Smart lives at the hotel now. A year ago her home was burned to the ground and she narrowly escaped being burned with it. She was bedridden with arthritis when the fire broke out at night, and as the smoke and flames drew nearer to her bed she prayed that someone would hear her cries in time. Rescuers came and carried her, mattress and all, to the ground outside and there she saw the roof of her home collapse seconds later. Daisy Smart hasn't been very well since.

NOW she sat before the blazing fireplace in the hotel's comfortable parlor, and remembered endearing little things about the war's first American hero.

"I used to give the children attendance cards with a colored picture of a sheep in the center," she recalled. "Every Sunday they were present, I pasted a little lamb on the border of the cards. I remember Colin always had the most little lambs on his card at the end of a quarter.

"Colin had a clear, strong voice, even as a little fellow, and I could always hear him over the other children when they sang. I can close my eyes now and hear him singing:

"'Little feet be careful
Where you take me to Anywhere with Jesus,
That will do.'

"But," continued Mis' Daisy (as her Sunday School children call her) "I don't want to give you the impression that Colin was a little angel. He was as full of fun as any child I ever knew."

Mis' Daisy dabbed at her eyes with a dainty handkerchief, and then broke into a fond chuckle.

"I never will forget what he did one day when the children were meeting at the church to rehearse for the Christmas entertainment," she smiled. "We were all waiting on the church steps for the organist to come when a young couple drove up and asked me where the minister was.

"I sent one of the little boys to fetch him—I had just seen him heading toward the postoffice—and told the young couple they could wait in the church.

REV. ROBERT LATHAM

"Well, before I had even missed him, little Colin had gone into the Sunday School room and found the piece of chalk I used to write the 'Golden Rule' on the blackboard. He was too little to write, but he could print. And, in big, shaky letters, he printed on the back of the couple's car: 'Just Married.'

"Of course I scolded him for doing it, but he said:

"'Well, Mis' Daisy, I reckon they will be just married when they come out of church.'

"One thing about Colin, though," Mis' Daisy concluded. "He was a child you could always depend on when there was any work to be done around the church, or any errand to be run. And if he was to speak a piece, or sing a song, he had it learned when the time came."

IT was Mrs. H. C. Harper, Colin's Sunday School teacher in the junior department, who dug up one of the most precious early mementos that has come to light since Capt. Kelly's heroic death.

Mrs. Harper—she was Miss Ella Armstrong in the days when she was the Kellys' closest neighbor and Colin's teacher—brought me Colin's Sunday School exercise book. It is a small, blue paper-covered notebook in which the children were required to write the lesson for the following Sunday. On the fly-leaf Colin wrote the necessary data:

"Stories of Moses and his times.

"April, May, June, 1927."

And below that:

"Presberyterion S. S.

"Junior Dept.

"Teacher Miss Ella Armstrong."

Then, at the lower right-hand corner, his signature appears:

"Colin Kelly

"Age 11 yrs. of age.

"Madison, Fla."

On the following page 11-year-old Colin starts the first lesson of the quarter. It is titled "Boyhood and youth of Moses," and Colin has added: "Date: Before I was born."

AT THE AGE OF 11, Colin P. Kelly, jr., is shown in this snapshot on a vacation trip in Cuba with his mother and sister, Emmie

The lesson for May 8 tells, in Colin's own words, how the children of Israel were "Brought out of Egypt, out of the house of bondage." A scrawled quotation from the Scriptures could have served as his text as the grown-up Christian soldier blasted the Japanese warship Haruna to the bottom of the sea.

"Thy right hand, O Lord, is become glorious in power," Colin wrote. "Thy right hand, O Lord, hath dashed in pieces the enemy.

"Thou didst blow with thy wind, the sea covered them, they sank as lead in the mighty waters."

THE lesson of June 5, 1927, also contains a thought to sustain a young soldier. Here is how Colin wrote it that long ago spring day:

"Memory Text: And Caleb stilled the people before Moses, and said, 'Let us go up at once and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it.' Num. 13:30 B. And lower on the page this line appears: "Num: 14:9—The Lord is with us: Fear them not."

But, most revealing of all, is the lesson for May 22, 1927, in which Colin, required to write out the Ten Commandments, gives his own telescoped version, saving time and space but losing nothing of the meaning. Colin's amazing condensation follows:

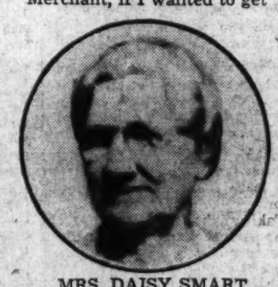
"Memory Text: If Ye love me, keep my commandments: John 14:15.

"Keep to the Ten Commandments:

"1. One God. 2. No Image 3. Holy Name. 4 Holy Day. 5 Honor Parents. 6 Kill not. 7. Be pure. 8 Steal not. 9. Speak truth. 10. Covet not."

"Yes," Miss Ella says, turning the pages of the junior notebook, "Colin always had his Sunday School lesson ready. And in class, he'd hear everything you'd say, but he was so full of life, and so mischievous, he couldn't sit still.

"I had to separate Colin and his little chum, Curry Merchant, if I wanted to get on with the lesson," Miss Ella continues. "I'd put one of them on either side of me. But even then, Colin would reach behind my back and pinch Curry.



MRS. DAISY SMART

"Colin had the merriest and sweetest laugh of any boy I ever knew. And how he loved my chocolate cakes. He'd always come over to our place after school to see if we had any chocolate cake on hand.

"Even here of late years," Miss Ella said, her eyes reddening, "I'd bake a chocolate cake for him the minute I'd hear he was heading home on a furlough. And I can see him as plain, leapin' our fence, an' hollerin' in that hearty voice of his: 'Hi, Miss Ella, where's my cake?'

"The first thing his father said to me the day I ran over as soon as I heard the news of his death was, 'Well, Ella, Colin will never eat another piece of your chocolate cake.'"

WHILE Mrs. Harper was telling me these things, Mrs. Smart walked into the hotel parlor, and the two ladies recalled Colin's last few visits to Madison.

"I remember the day of the Sunday School picnic, a year ago June," Mrs. Smart said. "I hadn't figured on going because I didn't have anyone to carry me out to the grove. So I was home, working in my garden, when Colin drove up. 'C'mon, Mis' Daisy,' he called, jumping out of the car to give me a big hug, 'the picnic won't seem natural without you. We've got plenty of room for you, so hop in.'

"I told him I wasn't dressed up, and I didn't have a lunch packed. But he just brushed these objections aside. 'Mom has fixed a-plenty lunch for all,' he said. 'And I'll just sit here and wait while you run in and get yourself prettied up.'

"Yes, Colin was always so thoughtful of older folks," Mrs. Harper agreed. "My mother was an invalid the last years of her life, and Colin used to come in and sit with her when he could have been out with the boys having fun. My, how he used to get her to laughing—no matter how blue she was when Colin came, a few minutes later she'd be a-roarin' at the things he'd say.

"Colin," Mis' Ella finished, "was a most courteous little gentleman."

Easy Chair Becomes Wartime Haven

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Household Editor

IF EVER there were a need for comfortable chairs in which to sink and relax after strained hours at business in these difficult days it is now. Chairs in which to sit by an adequate lamp and read the news of the day; chairs in which to rest while hearing the latest bulletins by way of the radio; chairs in which to sit with Red Cross knitting and other sewing; chairs in which the family or guests can relax for pleasant hours of relaxation.

Winston Churchill, Prime Minister of Great Britain, whose recent visit to America was a history-making incident, inspired the design recently of an English lounge chair. Designed and made by J. L. Chase, chairmasters, from an English chair of 1821, it is as rugged as its famous namesake. Strictly a man's chair, chock full of everything that makes for solid comfort, and so ruggedly built that even heavy men don't have to "pull their punches" when sinking into its comfortable depths. It's conservative English lines will appeal to women, too, who like smart furniture styling.

A comfortable pair of chairs in which dad and mother can sit and read, listen to the radio, and exchange comments, is the pair of chairs pictured on this page in thick textured silk fabric. The mahogany table between the chairs is topped with leather, hand-tooled in gold. Concealed in the back of the table is space large enough to hold a radio and the lower shelf is a handy place on which to put a dish of candy, bowl of popcorn, or a refreshing drink.

Much in decorating favor today is the host chair. The one shown here is notable for its simple dignity. The chair has a mahogany wood frame and is upholstered in an attractive documentary print known as thrush and nest. Both the inner and outer line of the arm are emphasized with rows of dull brass nailheads.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Widely Traveled Professional Woman, Whose Work Brings Her to Washington, Finds Lodging Situation For Wage-Earners Much Worse Than Elsewhere

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read with great interest the letter from "Disgusted Landlady," published in your column of January 18, which I think you answered very well. I know something of the "roomer" situation throughout the country, as well as in Washington, and I would like to give landladies in this locality the benefit of one "roomer's" side of the story.

Like many girls whose work has brought them to Washington, I have a semi-professional rating—by which I mean that my salary is better than $1500 a year. Under normal conditions in the average American city, I have always been able to afford a small apartment on my income. However, in chronically over-populated (or under-housed) Washington—and especially now that war conditions prevail—that "standard of living" is simply out of the question for most of us.

Realizing this, I started looking, one year ago, for a "compromise" set-up. I was willing to pay for a private room. I wanted breakfast and dinner at home and some "home privileges"—such as the right to (1) ask my friends in to wait for me; (2) use the telephone when necessary, and (3) do the usual feminine "hand laundry" and press my clothes. Do you think you can find such accomodations in Washington? You can't. At least, I haven't.

Your landlady wants your money—at robber rates. She doesn't want to give meals. If she condescends to let you press your clothes at all, you must do so in your room. Laundry if forbidden. (So far as she cares, you can "go dirty.") Some of them even tell you how often you may bathe! The idea seems to be that they are doing you a favor to take you in. And my experience has been that if you accept such treatment in good spirit, doing your best to be scrupulously careful and considerate, the landlady takes you for an "easy mark" and makes things harder.

The housing situation for bachelor girls in Washington is very serious—increasingly so. I have wondered constantly, since coming here, why the Nation's Capital has no hotels of the "woman's club" type. Girls flocking in here to take Government jobs can't even get overnight lodgings at the "Y." Most of these girls come from homes like mine, of the "middle class," to which our parents always welcomed our friends, and we didn't bother "the family," because a place was assigned for our foregatherings.

When I first left home for "the big city," my family worried about me. But needlessly. I soon found a room, at $7 a week, in a small hotel where I had a semi-private bath and the privilege of entertaining friends either in my room (until 11 p. m.) or in the public reception rooms. And this was in a city reputed to be the most "cold blooded" in the world. Yet these pleasant accomodations could not have been duplicated in Washington three years ago—long before the present emergency broke.

I say to you in all sincerity that it is incumbent upon the civic minded people of Washington to realize what newcomers are up against, in coping with the terrible housing situation that exists here; and to appreciate that the majority of them will be desirable tenants, if fairly treated. Landladies, in particular, must realize that a callously calculating attitude toward "roomers" will soon leave them that kind of customer to contend with. More understanding of the situation and less insistence on making 100 per cent profit will produce better results, all around.

I speak as an "old hand" at rooming and boarding. My first experience was in a college dormitory. There were 140 girls in our building. The use of irons and candles in rooms was forbidden, because of the fire hazard. As a result, we ironed in the basement. I was made proctor—to enforce this rule; and during the whole freshman year, there was only one violation. Girls will cooperate when rightly approached; that I know.

I taught for two years in one school, away from home. During this time, I moved twice. The first time, because my landlady was too inquisitive about my comings and goings, my friends, etc. The second time, because I was leaving town. Since then, I have traveled extensively and lived in many places; but I never encountered elsewhere such forbidding conditions as Washington presents. Here, either the rental asked is impossible to meet, or the regulations imposed are utterly unreasonable.

Please, Miss Haworth, bring these remarks to the attention of "Disgusted Landlady," so that she may know what the room-hunting "other half" is suffering, too. It sometimes helps to hear the other side of a story. Meantime, I shall carry on at Washington's favorite indoor and outdoor sport—looking for a suitable and decent place in which to live.

Sincerely, BUSINESS GIRL.

Children In Wartime

This is one of a series of parents' questions answered by the Child Study Association of America.

On Being Afraid

I AM a somewhat nervous person even in normal times. Now everybody is telling us parents to keep calm. How can anybody be calm under these circumstances? I do my best to appear calm, but I am sure that my real feelings get through to my children. What can I do about it?

DON'T try to be superhuman. Of course we are all more or less alarmed. Who wouldn't be? No use pretending that there just isn't a thing to worry about. But legitimate fear need not be allowed to become jitters. Let your children know that every normal person has certain dangers to face, and that it's natural to be on guard against them. Nobody really intends that parents should deny either the dangers or the fears. But emphasize the steps that are being taken to avert or to meet these dangers. Of course if you're going to turn pale and stop everything you're doing whenever an airplane passes overhead, you are going to communicate your state of mind to the children. But having acknowledged the realities, your children will be grateful to you for going on with your usual activities and keeping your home as normal as possible. There is something very reassuring and stabilizing in the carrying out of the usual routines.

Beauty Is Its Own Excuse For Bending

By Ida Jean Kain

HOW FLEXIBLE are you? As you get along in years your joints and ligaments tend to stiffen up unless you keep them in good working order. A test of flexibility is a test of physical fitness, so let's see what you can do.

Can you go into a deep-knee bend without creaking? If you take that test the hard way, it is without shoes and with your heels on the floor as you bend your knees. But however you take it, if your knee joints creak, you are getting old before your time.

Is your waist supple enough to let you twist and turn easily—that's why nature narrowed this middle joint. Try this: Sit on the floor with legs extended, feet apart, hands clasped back of neck. Now, try to touch right elbow to right knee, then twist to touch right elbow to left knee. You should be able to do that with the greatest of ease.

Bending Test

From a standing position, how far sideward can you bend without taking your feet off the floor? Stand with feet slightly apart, one arm stretched overhead, the other hanging at the side. As you bend sideward, slide your hand down the thigh and leg. You should have no difficulty in reaching the calf.

If you cannot bend, twist and turn easily, there may be an obstruction—too much waistline. And that's what you get from not bending.

You can recover your flexibility by putting your joints through their entire range of motion every day. This is a small amount of exercise but it keeps you from getting stiff as you grow older and it gives you a heightened sense of well being through stimulation to nerve endings in the joints.

Twist the Waist

Bend your forearms back at the elbows and touch fingertips at shoulders—just flex your biceps a few times. Then rest fingers on shoulders and make backward circles, moving arms at shoulder sockets. Finally, move the entire shoulder girdle, pulling shoulder blades close together in back and drawing them down, forward and up again. That helps to take away the tension between your shoulders.

To loosen and limber your waist, place hands on hips and circle trunk at the waist in first one direction then the other.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

'I Hate to Take Your Time—'

A DRIVE against a new type of criminal—the time burglar is being undertaken by Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, noted reformer.

Mrs. DeGoofey

The intrepid president of the Do Something About It League told her press conference yesterday that her latest contribution to defense would be to hunt down and "liquidate" all "time wasting pests who made it difficult for other persons, especially women to perform their daily tasks and their defense duties.

"We hear a lot about saving paper and string and old cans and whatnot," declared Mrs. DeGoofey, "and yet nothing is being done to conserve time. And what is more precious in the world I ask you? Personally I would rather someone 'filched from me my good name' than that he—or more accurately, she—took my time."

To Post List Of Public Pests

The crusader announced she had prepared a list of "time felons" which she expected to post in all public places. She said she also would ask Congress to pass legislation to deport all convicted time thieves to a tropical island where they could function as beach combers.

"My list," she continued, "while not complete, will include the following:

"Telephone haranguers. You can always spot a telephone haranguer by the fact that he—or rather she—continues to hang on after a long pause in the conversation and thus finally drives you in sheer embarrassment into prolonging the oral torture.

"Neighbors who don't know when to go home. Usually they run in at the kitchen door to use the telephone or borrow a tack and then remain to watch you bake your cake or paint a chair.

"Couples who come over to play bridge or gossip just because they haven't anything else to do. These are the pairs who make half a dozen false starts to go home but can't quite make it until well after midnight even though the man of the house has to be at his job by 8 o'clock the next morning.

Alleged 'Friends' Who Drop By

"Out of town friends on the loose. These pests because they happen to be on vacation, assume that you are also and that it is nothing for you to leave your work and run out to cocktails or dinner with them, show them Mount Vernon or help them hunt up other friends in remote suburbs.

"Party givers. These are the dear little women who have nothing better to do than to give luncheons or teas or bridge parties for no other reason than to get a lot of other women together who don't particularly want to see each other.

"Office Visitors. These are the perpetual loafers who walk in without warning at any hour of the day and ensconse themselves at the desks of busy friends and start out by saying 'Well what do you know?'

"The man with a story to tell. This fellow has a strange mania for halting the busiest women he can find and, like the ancient mariner, holding them until he has laboriously recited every detail of his unamusing anecdote.

Wordy Women Who Say It Twice

"The repeaters. These are chiefly women who have something to say but who can't stop when they have said it and must repeat it in a dozen or so forms.

"The presiding officers and chairman of committees. These prolong club meetings into the night because they must explain over and over every item of business that comes up.

"The silly questioners. These are the women who hold up all business in groups by their apparent inability to understand even primer statements of facts.

"The extemporaneous speakers. This group includes all orators, male and female, who don't prepare their talks in advance and take twice the time allotted to them by their verbal wanderings."

Mrs. DeGoofey further announced she would institute her drive against time burglars with a mammoth mass meeting at which addresses would be made by members of Congress "famous for their filibuster oratory."

Capital Whirl

by Hope Ridings Miller

Capital society seems to be divided as to this matter of carrying on during the emergency. . . . Some high-placed members feel the partying pace should be increased if anything and that this business of being about frequently with friends is one way of sustaining morale through a trying time. . . . At the Davies party for the Litvinoffs, for example, the Supreme Court turned out almost full force; the Cabinet was represented by no less than five members, and even production czar Donald Nelson put in one of his rare appearances at an afternoon party. . . .

On the other hand, conspicuous by their absence were ranking Army and Navy officials who aren't leaving their posts these days to shake the hand of any diplomat, no matter how important. . . . Almost every service dignitary I've talked to recently seems to feel that this is no time for admirals and generals to be spreading themselves socially.

MAJ. GEN. GULLION

The Provost Marshal General, Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, for example, said the other day, "Until we do something to efface the attack on Pearl Harbor, I don't think any of us—service men, I mean—should be going about to cocktail parties." . . . I understand he's doing about a 14-hour-a-day job in his new work and has cut his entire social calendar to a minimum. . . . Incidentally, did you know that his son, Edmund A. Gullion, who has been back in town for several weeks, recently was appointed Third Secretary of the American Embassy and also American Vice Consul at London, England, and that he will take over duties in that dual capacity soon? . . . He was one hour out of San Francisco, on his way to Calcutta, where he was to be American Vice Consul, when war broke and his ship was ordered to return to port.

Going back a bit to the Davies' party—or rather to one of the guests. Leon Henderson, arriving toward the latter part of the fete, soon discovered that everybody who met him had something to say about those recent bicycle pictures in which he centered the camera's flash. . . . But the price-control administrator never wants for words and is always quick on the comeback. . . . "I admire your bicycle technique tremendously," teased a friend by way of greeting. . . . "You mean," answered Henderson with a grin, "you admire my way of getting publicity."

LEON HENDERSON

Recently arrived in South Africa, after a 31-day trip by freighter from New York, Miss Natalia Aszkenazy is now on a plane headed for Cairo. . . . From there she will go to Teheran and thence to Kuibyshev, the provisional capital of Russia, where she will serve as the first woman attache of the Polish Embassy. . . . A recent cablegram to Jan Drohojowski, Polish Counselor here, announced her arrival in South Africa and her plan for immediate departure northward. . . .

While I'm mentioning Polish pointers, here's another that is creating a flurry of interest around these parts: Maj. Stefan Dobrowolski, Assistant Military Attache of the Polish Embassy, is proudly showing friends the recently received coveted Order of the British Empire. . . . He and his attractive wife came here from London last summer.

Cupid's Dept.: It's to be an April wedding for Edith Pearson and Cully Darlington, and the date will be announced some time soon. . . . The prospective bridegroom is now working for OPM. . . . The betrothal of two popular sports scribes will hit the headlines on Sunday. . . . The bride-elect's last name is a prominent one around Washington. . . . Her fiance's parents have been identified with both this city and Pittsburgh. . . . The engagement will be celebrated at a large party Sunday afternoon.

Another Congressman Joins the Colors

Seems some of these fighting Texans who are members of Congress can't wait to get into uniform. . . . Handsome Lyndon Johnson was one of the first to ask for Congressional leave of absence so he could don his naval commander's stripes and start for California. . . . And now, equally handsome Eugene Worley has lined up with the fighting forces, has received his commission as lieutenant commander in the Naval Corps and is awaiting further orders. . . . Whether his attractive wife, the former Ann Spivey, of Bonham, Tex., will be able to accompany her husband to San Diego, his first station, nobody seems to know . . . but, anyway, both are expecting to be off from Washington before the end of the month.

MRS. EUGENE WORLEY

Mention of our fighting forces reminds of a story now making the usual taproom rounds in Washington. . . . Seems an American (maybe he was a Texan, too) decided he'd better waste no further time about getting into the war and quickly made up his mind he'd enlist with the Air Corps. En route to the War Department, he met a friend, a Britisher, and told him he had decided to go into service with our country's Air Corps.

"Why not the R. A. F.?" said the Britisher. "You'd like that better. You'd meet so many interesting people. People from all over the world. In the American Air Corps, chances are you'd meet only Americans, but in England's Royal Air Force you'd come in contact with Australians, Canadians, Indians, Norwegians, Czechs, Egyptians and the Dutch."

"But," asked the American after due thought, "would I meet any Englishmen?"

Mrs. Gillette Tells of Flight From Hawaii

"I just couldn't get him in the house when the Pearl Harbor blitz was on," says Mrs. Claude Gillette of her 10-year-old son, Tommy. "He insisted on staying out in the yard and watching the bombing."

Now visiting in Washington with her brother-in-law and his wife, Senator and Mrs. Guy Gillette, in their home on Thirty-fourth Street, Mrs. Gillette made the first trip back by convoy from embattled Hawaii. With her husband, Capt. Gillette, and her two children, Diane, 15, and Tommy, Mrs. Gillette has made her home at Pearl Harbor for the past three years while Capt. Gillette has been stationed there. Now in Washington looking for a house—Mrs. Gillette has been here since Thursday and will leave for Bath, Me., Friday. She is staying there with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Baxter, and her children.

Shortly after the attack on the Hawaiian naval base, Mrs. Gillette took her children up in the mountains of Oahu for safety during the night hours, bringing them back to the Gillette home at the base during the day. Their school, the famous Punahou School, was closed immediately and changed into the war-time function of serving as a hospital.

Their trip back on the once-luxury liner, the Lurline, now stripped of her finery and gayety, was pleasant, if rather crowded, reports Mrs. Gillette. Three ships under heavy convoy were sent out Christmas Day evacuating officer's families from the islands. Under complete blackout orders, they were required to keep their life-belts on day and night. "We slipped them off at night," admits Mrs. Gillette, "as it was rather difficult to sleep in them, but we did wear them during the day." With five in a stateroom that normally holds two, the trip was quiet and uneventful.

Mrs. Fowler Gives Party

Mrs. Raymond F. Fowler gave a party-with-a-purpose yesterday at the Army and Navy Town Club. The event, a luncheon, took place to stimulate interest in the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club campaign. Mrs. Fowler is president of the club. Blandy, wife of Admiral Blandy and chairman of the campaign.

Boyer, jr., Mrs. Dundas Heenan, Mrs. Robert Mitten, Mrs. Samuel Kerrick, Mrs. Luther Sheldon and Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, who was accompanied by her house guest, Mrs. Fenton B. Turck.

Guests at Mrs. McNary's luncheon on Monday were Mrs. Clarence Hancock, Mrs. John Taber, Mrs. Robins and Miss Elizabeth Howry.

Mrs. John Martin Guest of Honor At Many Parties

Still having quite a whirl of parties in her honor is Mrs. John Martin, who arrived here recently from Florida for a visit with her parents, Senator and Mrs. James H. Hughes.

Mrs. Frederick Richardson will entertain at a luncheon in honor of Mrs. Martin today, and Mrs. Claude Pepper will be hostess at a similar party tomorrow.

On Friday, Mrs. Pepper will entertain at a luncheon in the Senate restaurant in honor of Mrs. Elbert D. Thomas, wife of the Senator from Utah, who will be a guest speaker earlier at Mrs. O. W. McNeese's weekly lecture meetings. Mrs. McNeese will review Pearl Buck's latest book, and Mrs. Thomas will relate some of her experiences in the Far East, where she and her husband were Mormon missionaries for five years.

Doris Purchase, Lieut. Miles Wed Tonight

The outbreak of war has brought the percentage of "sudden weddings" to an all-time high recently, what with young officers being moved almost without notice from station to station, thereby eliminating any possibility of lengthy preparations for elaborate weddings.

Latest of such events to rate headlines is the wedding scheduled to take place this evening in the post chapel at Fort Bragg, N. C., when Miss Doris Purchase will become the bride of Lieut. Nelson Miles.

Lieut. Miles is the son of Brig. Gen. Sherman Miles, Acting Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2, and Mrs. Miles. Gen. and Mrs. Miles left Washington early this morning to drive down for the ceremony, which has been quickly arranged with no previous announcement of engagement or wedding plans. They will return to town tomorrow evening.

Miss Purchase is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Purchase, of Miami, Fla., and attended the University of Florida.

Lieut. Miles, who is a grandson of the late Lieut. Gen. Nelson Miles, was graduated from the Choate School and from Harvard University last year.

Workers for Wartime Education

D. C. Bryn Mawr College Club Pushes Scholarship Drive

Despite war privations, education as usual is the goal of the Washington Bryn Mawr College Club. To this end the local club is working valiantly for a 1942 District student scholarship fund.

The determination of the club to continue the scholarship was inspired by a recent address of President Marion Edwards Park, president of Bryn Mawr College, who stressed the importance of continuation of education of women in war time.

"We should prepare for sharp and immediate change," said President Park, "a readjustment of individuals to a coming demand. Each of us should find the most useful way of contributing her part to that readjustment. You who are students, because you are women and so far unprofitable, should go on with college education as seriously and as vigorously as you can because precise knowledge and skill will be useful to the country."

"Be good democrats, intelligent ones on the campus and off," she urged. "Begin to construct within the world as it is, a pattern of the world as you would have it. Make it the world of a lover of peace who hopes that never again will he have to use force to protect peace, a world of liberty, equality and fraternity."

In her talk, President Parks referred to the address which former President M. Carey Thomas made in wartime 1917 at the opening of college—a statement of especial interest now in wartime 1942.

"It is your manifest duty to go steadfastly on with your college work. Your country's need for your trained intelligence and your efficient service will be as urgent in the great reconstruction period after the war as is now its need of women to do active war service and of men to fight. It is the truest patriotism to devote yourselves to study. It is disloyal to leave college now."

In an all-out effort to raise money for the 1942 scholarship, to be awarded to a District student, the local club is sponsoring a lecture by Vincent Sheean, Saturday afternoon at the Shoreham Hotel.

Mrs. Farnham Blair is president of the Bryn Mawr Washington Club. Mrs. Donald C. Blaisdell is executive chairman of the benefit committee.

Vigil Criticized Anew at Defense Rally

"Why must teachers stay on watch in the schools at night?" This question started a mild furor last night when asked at a defense rally.

The meeting was held in the Gordon Junior High School, Thirty-fifth and S Streets Northwest and sponsored by the Gordon Junior High School Parent-Teacher Association. Col. Lemuel Bolles, District executive director of civilian defense, and Chief Air Raid Warden Clement Murphy were guest speakers.

After they had concluded talks on civilian defense matters and had been presented to the audience to answer "any and all" queries the question was asked.

Col. Bolles: "Teachers are supposed to carry out the orders of the superintendent of District schools. That is as far as I can go."

Citizen: "Haven't teachers got enough to do without this?"

Chief Murphy Aroused

Chief Murphy: "The extra hours must be born by everyone. A teacher who can't work three or four extra hours at night—well, I wish you were all men out in my drill yard. I'd tell you what I think of them!"

Woman: "Yes, but they haven't told the teachers what to do." Loud applause.

A second man echoed the woman's sentiments. Murphy told him to write down the address of the fire-training school and be there Friday night with 25 teachers who had not been told what to do. The man declined.

Col. Bolles took the forefront when another person asked a question on another subject. "No," he said, "let's get this question all thrashed out. I'm not afraid of it."

Sat With Teacher

One man, who said he was a Government engineer engaged in defense work, asserted that he had spent two nights in a school with a teacher friend. "All we did was sit there wondering what we would do if the phone rang," he declared.

Col. Bolles said the order had been issued for teachers "to be there, take any message and relay it."

Chief Murphy: "I guuess I'm just a dumb Irishman, but when my boss gives me an order I do it."

Both officials contended it was never the purpose of the plan to have women on duty at night in the schools.

Other questions debated at the meeting were whether it is better to leave the children in schools during an air raid—the system now in use—or too evacute them to their homes. One woman claimed some of the school buildings are "fire traps."

Murphy posed the question:

"Who is there in this room willing to take the responsibility of sending thousands of children out into our streets during an emergency?"

One man thought the children might be moved out if sufficient warning were given.

Don't Expect Warning

"I wouldn't count on too much warning if I were you," Col. Bolles said.

F. A. Woodward, principal of Gordon, commenting on the night watch in the schools declared: "Washington teachers have been loyal. They have questioned as all of us have. But regardless of whether we could understand the why—we did our job!" and without the use of woman teachers at night, he added.

The large turnout of citizens, who filled nearly every seat in the auditorium, watched Gordon Junior High School Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts present several demonstrations. Methods of first-aid bandaging and the carrying of wounded persons were shown by the boys while the girls told how to prepare an emergency kit of food that would last several weeks.

Ensign Freed by Grand Jury

Marion L. Robinson, 23, of Capitol Heights, Md., was indicted for manslaughter by the District grand jury yesterday in connection with the traffic death of a 20-year-old Arlington youth. Like charges brought against her escort, a Navy Yard ensign, were dismissed by the inquisitors.

The accident occurred on New Year's Day at Branch and Pennsylvania Avenues Southeast, and resulted in the death of Charles W. Finley at Gallinger Hospital the following day. Finley suffered a fractured skull and brain injuries.

Miss Robinson was driving a sedan owned by Ensign Robert R. Read, 30, police were told, when she crashed into the rear of a car in which Finley was a passenger.

Read told authorities that he and another ensign, Elmer D. Hoyt, had been at a Maryland night club with Miss Robinson, and that on the way home she had asked him to let her drive. He said that he finally allowed her to do so, acting on the understanding that she had a driver's permit, though police said the girl later admitted she did not have one.

Read added that Miss Robinson was exceeding the speed limit when she hit the car in which Finley was riding, driven by John Sams. The ensign was reported to have asserted that he would take full responsibility, but he was not held by the grand jurors.

In yesterday's return, a total of 38 indictments were handed up to Justice T. Alan Goldsborough by the grand jury.

School to Teach Traffic Control

The District will be among 120 cities in which the Department of Justice will soon open war traffic schools to train police in war emergency traffic problems and conduct, it was announced yesterday by the Department.

Baltimore and Cumberland, Md.; Norfolk, Richmond and Roanoke, Va., and Clarksburg and Huntington, W. Va., are also among cities that will have the schools, which are a part of the FBI's law enforcement officers mobilization plan for national defense started in 1939.

Scheduled to be supervised by FBI experts working in conjunction with traffic specialists, the course will last six days, and will instruct the traffic members of the police forces in such things as traffic light control during blackouts, pedestrian and auto traffic control in air raids, bombed streets and removal of bombs.

Traffic specialists aiding in the plan will meet in Washington shortly.

STAMPS FOR A SONG. Barnee of the Shoreham has launched a grand plan for national defense! He's now playing request numbers only after the requester buys defense stamps. Barnee started this innovation on Saturday with $50 worth of defense stamps in his pockets. He was sold out in no time, most request customers buying several stamps at a clip. Barnee's now carrying a stock of around $200 worth of defense stamps every night—and selling 'em. It's understood the Treasury Department plans to extend this bright selling scheme to night spots all over the country.

CARNIVAL IN LOTUS. A joyous battle of song and dance is the Lotus' new "Victory Revue." The Six Naval Cadets sing rousingly through many encores. The Dancettes prance gallantly in a fencing dance. The Howard-Paysee Dancers change unpredictably from Viennese waltz to jitter-bug steps. Then the show goes berserk, with the Cadets sprouting beards and handle-bar moustaches, the Dancettes flaunting 1890 bustles and the whole crew galloping through the dance steps of grandpa's day.

By Jerry Kluttz

Censor Will Have Staff of 10,000

Byron Price, the chief censor, will have a staff of more than 10,000 under him but that doesn't mean he'll have a censor in each newspaper and radio office. On the contrary, his newspaper and radio sections will be the smallest in his office. Not more than 20 persons, including clerks, will run both offices. But he'll have thousands of people reading foreign mail and cables. This work already is being done by the military. The Army now censors foreign mail and the Navy censors foreign cables. Price, however, plans to take over these functions.

All censor jobs are under Civil Service. The majority of the staff will be recruited by the Civil Service Commission from clerical registers. After all, nearly all the employes will read mail and cables and the average salary will be around $2000. At th most, 10 per cent of the staff will be in Washington. The remainder will be located mainly in shore cities that are communication centers. New York, San Francisco, Miami, and San Antonio are examples. The censor's offices here are located for the time being in the Apex Building.

Joe Davies, it's rumored, can have the Soviet ambassadorship again if he wants it. Gen. James Burns, the lend-leaser, was slated for the post but he's expected to be appointed executive officer of a new allied allocations board . . . SECommissioner Robert Healy is expected to remain on the job because the President asked him to reconsider his resignation . . . The Board of Tax Appeals is making space available by squeezing its employes into smaller quarters.

Budget Rides Retreads

The official car of the Budget Bureau has retreaded tires and has had them for nearly six months. Last August, when the tires on the budget car were wearing out, Budget Director Harold D. Smith ordered them retreaded. The Procurement Division, where Government purchases must be made, objected and insisted that the budget car should have new tires. But Smith was adamant and he got the retreads, probably the first on any official car. The guardian of the Nation's pocketbook saved about $25 on the deal. The three retreads cost the taxpayers $19.43 and new tires would have been $45.

Uncle Sam needs phone operators. Apply at the Civil Service Commission if you have had at least six months full-time paid experience on a large central exchange or on a branch exchange of at least 100 lines. No written test will be given. Applicants will be rated on their experience. they must be between the ages of 18 and 53. The commission is recruiting telegraph operators also. The salary is $1800. Two years' experience is required. Applicants must be able to typewrite messages at 35 words a minute.

Other Civil Service tests: Radio operator, $1800 and $1620. Applications will be accepted indefinitely . . . Communications machine operator, $1620. Six months experience required . . . Under graphotype operator, $1260, three months experience within the past 5 years required . . . Training specialist, $2600 to $5600 . . . Apprenticeship field representative, $2600 to $4600.

Board of Economic Warfare and Nelson Rockefeller's agency on Inter-American Affairs will divide up the space now occupied by the Patent Office in the Commerce Building. Rockefeller, however, will get the choice suite of offices occupied by Patent Commissioner Coe. Milo Perkins would like to have had them . . . Wage and Hour will go to New York between February 15 and March 1 . . . Wage and Hour has set up an appeals board to hear efficiency rating grievances of field employes. The board is composed of Bernard R. Mullady, James S. Schryver and Laurence Cardwell . . . UFWA has worked out a plan for the conversion of WPA into a war agency . . . Paul McNutt would like to be appointed chief of labor supply. Sidney Hillman appears to be a cinch for the job.

The Bluff Didn't Work

Valdez, Alaska.—This notice appeared on a public bulletin board: "Man who stripped my car of its tires was seen. If tires are returned no questions will be asked. Signed: Ulysses N. Owen."

The next day this ad appeared, unsigned: "The guy who saw me take those tires can have same by calling at my house. I won't ask any questions, either."

The Voice of Experience

Richmond, Va. (AP).—Scout Car Patrolmen A. A. Bricker and M. E. Caldwell, sent to investigate the report of a dangerous hole in an alley, called for a wrecking car.

"Did you find the hole, car 13?" asked the dispatcher.

"Find it?" radioed the cops. "We're in it. Please send wrecker."

House Group Hears Plight Of Hospitals

1000 More Beds Minimum Need Year Before War Started

By Charles Mercer

Post Staff Writer

To attain and hold a high health standard for war-time Washington local hospitals must expand their present bed capacities, officials of a dozen District hospitals in effect told the House District Committee yesterday.

The hearing on a bill sponsored by Chairman Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, which would give Gallinger Hospital 400 additional beds, and Glenn Dale Sanatorium 600 new beds, opened a way to a general consideration of the local hospital problem.

While the committee took no official action on the Randolph bill yesterday, its early approval of the measure is expected.

Maury Maverick, former Texas Congressman and now chief of Governmental requirements of the Office of Production Management, focused the committee's attention on the immediate need for 1000 more beds and advised the consideration of 1000 more beds in the near future.

"Minimum Year Ago"

One thousand additional beds "was a minimum necessity a year before the declaration of war," he declared.

"Washington is generally below the level of the health and hospital standards of average American cities of fair size. Venereal disease, tuberculosis, other disease rates and sanitary conditions compare unfavorably with other American cities. Slum conditions in many spots are as bad as any in the United States. I am not trying to make a spectacular statement or to blame anybody; these are the facts.

"With present conditions, and greatly increased population, the possibility of any kind of military emergency in our National Capital makes the general problem of sanitation, health and hospitalization more serious and makes intelligent preparedness more necessary."

Stating that the present population of the Washington metropolitan area is now 1,123,750, he warned that the health problem will increase with the arrival of between 150,000 and 250,000 new workers here in the coming year.

He emphasized the importance not only of charity hospitals but of institutions with pay wards—"a business proposition."

Overcrowding Cited

In a general picture of the District's health conditions Dr. George C. Ruhland, the District health officer, declared that there is an overcrowding of patients at both Glenn Dale and Gallinger. Some patients are discharged more quickly than is desirable because of the overcrowding, he said.

A concrete offer to aid the hospital problem was made by Dr. Walter Bloedorn, dean of the George Washington University School of Medicine, on behalf of the university, when he offered a large part of the block formed by Twenty-third and G Streets Northwest as a site for a hospital of from 250 to 500 beds. Construction of the hospital would be financed by Government funds, it was assumed.

Dr. David B. McCauley, dean of the Georgetown University School of Medicine, said that private as well as public hospitals need additional bed space. Privately endowed institutions are trying to the utmost of their ability to give bed space to all patients requiring it, he declared.

Need for Beds Cited

The need for beds was cited by Sister Rosa, of Providence Hospital; Mrs. C. R. Eperey, of Sibley Hospital; Clarence A. Aspinwall, president of the board of Garfield; Dr. T. Edward Jones, director in chief of Freedmen's Hospital; S. H. Rogers, president of the board of directors of Casualty; Dr. B. B. Sandidge, superintendent of Emergency; Charles G. Drayton, president of the board of Children's Hospital.

O. K. Fike, business manager of Doctors Hospital, maintained that the District hospitals would possess sufficient bed space after the addition of facilities at Gallinger and Glenn Dale.

Citing a vast increase in the number of patients at Gallinger in recent years, Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, the hospital superintendent, said that facilities should be provided to give bed space to 225 women and children under the age of 12, nursery space for 130 babies, and 200 beds for adults.

Youth Seized Few Minutes After Attempted Theater Holdup

Police in 2-Way Radio Scout Car Make Arrest

A few minutes after he had held up the assistant manager of the Metropolitan Theater, 900 block of F Street Northwest, last night, a 19-year-old youth was captured by police in a two-way radio scout car.

A youth entered the office of Jesse B. Osborne, 22, of 113 Carroll Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., posing as a collector for the Red Cross. He asked Osborne for a donation and when the former refused to comply, the youth whipped a pistol from his pocket and demanded the theater's proceeds.

$2000 in Safe

Osborne again refused to turn over the money in the safe—about $2000. At this point a noise in the lobby outside frightened the gunman and he fled from the office. Osborne and Beverly Williams, an usher, gave chase but the youth disappeared in an alley next to the theater.

Police were called and the alarm broadcast. Several scout cars sped to the scene.

Policemen J. L. Rinker and J. A. Jones, in scout car 21, picked up the radio broadcast at First Street and New York Avenue Northeast. They sped toward the theater and saw the youth run from an alley near Tenth and D Streets Northwest. Rinker jumped from the car and caught the youth, and brought him to the theater where he was identified by Osborne.

He gave his name as Joseph E. Lindbergh, said he originally came from San Francisco and had been here only a short time. He was held at First Precinct station for investigation.

Veteran on Force

The capture of the youth marked the fourth case in two weeks in which police got their man a few minutes after a lookout had been broadcast.

Rinker, a veteran on the force, served for a number of years as traffic officer at Pennsylvania Avenue and Fourteenth Street Northwest in Post Square. He was gifted with an uncanny memory for faces and automobile tag numbers. He made a number of important arrests through a novel technique. When he saw a car that was wanted by police, he threw his semaphore to "stop" just as it was about to cross the intersection. He would then tell the driver he would have to go to a precinct station and post $2 collateral for ignoring a "stop" sign. As he took the driver to the station, he charged the suspect with "investigation—suspect in a felony case."

U.S. Workers Ask Extended Parking Area

Group Aroused By 60 Tickets For 'Violations' Near Offices

A group of Government workers, vexed by a mass of tickets given for parking in the vicinity of Temporary Building D of the OPA, yesterday started a campaign to have the whole Mall area thrown open for parking.

"We want to have the grass lots incuded, too," E. J. Fox, OPA economist and spokesman for the employes, said. "We whould like to have them made into parking spaces for the duration of the war."

Immediate object of the campaign will be to have Madison Drive between Fourth and Seventh Streets Southwest opened for parking. This area, the workers say, is theoretically limited to one-hour parking now but all-day parking has been allowed there until two days ago, when 60 workers received tickets.

The workers from OPA, OPM and the War Department plan first to see park police about having areas opened for parking. If necessary, they said, they will seek assistance from Leon Henderson, OPA director.

Unless areas for parking are opened, the Government workers contend, they will have to stop driving their cars to work and take buses or taxis, further increasing the loads there.

Many of the Government workers take one or more other persons to work in their autos in a car-sharing plan adopted by them.

Keystone Aide Outlines Auto Mechanic Courses

William S. Canning, engineering director of Keystone Automobile Club, outlined last night at a dinner held by the advisory board of the Club at the Willard Hotel, plans to effect a series of elementary training courses in automobile mechanics for men and women to assist national and civilian defense.

The program which is ready to get under way in Philadelphia with the cooperation of the American Red Cross will be inaugurated in Washington as soon as possible. Canning stated that the success of the plan is largely dependent upon the extent to which the Red Cross can assist in its administration.

George E. Keneipp, secretary of the club, reviewed the accomplishments of the last year and outlined major traffic regulation problems in which the club is actively interested.

The advisory board adopted resolutions opposing compulsory physical examinations for District of Columbia drivers and the imposition now, of additional parking restrictions. Memoranda to this effect will be sent to the District Commissioners.

It was also decided to send to the Commissioners recommendations to repeal the regulations presently in force restricting taxicabs to single fares and to jitneyize cab service in Washington for the duration of the emergency such as was done during the last World War.

In order to accelerate traffic movement, the club will support an extension of time limits on one-way streets from 6:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m.

Tailor Denied Bail in Killing Of His Wife

Vincent Giovinazzo, 57-year-old retired tailor, was in District Jail last night, held for grand jury action on a charge of murder in the shooting of his wife, Mrs. Mary Giovinazzo, 45.

He was ordered held by a coroner's jury after an inquest at the District Morgue yesterday and was denied bail.

It was testified at the hearing that the defendant fired two bullets from a .32-caliber revolver at his wife at Twelfth and D Streets Northeast, shortly before noon Sunday. One of the shots pierced her head and another her right wrist. She died at Casualty Hospital.

Detective Sergt. W. D. Perry, homicide squad, told the jury that Giovinazzo, in ill health for two years, had been turned out of his wife's home, 310 Twelfth Street Northeast, New Year's Day, after he had accused her of infidelities.

The defendant, Perry stated, on several occasions attempted to affect a reconciliation, but was unsuccessful.

Sunday morning, Perry asserted, Giovinazzo met his wife while she was returning from mass at St. Joseph's Cathodic Church. He attempted to persuade her to allow him to return home and when she refused he pulled the revolver and fired.

Salesman Charged In Attack Case

Charged with rape in connection with the reported criminal assault on a 19-year-old bride of a year, Perry Paul Walders, 32, of 3524 B Street Southeast, will be arraigned at Police Court this morning.

The accusation was placed against him late yesterday despite his plea of innocence.

A house-to-house punch board salesman, the suspect was identified, police said, by the young woman as the man who entered her apartment shortly after noon Monday and assaulted her.

She was alone at her home, the young woman said, when the man came to the door selling punch boards. She had heard of him from neighbors and admitted him to the apartment.

Almost immediately, she declared, he ripped off her dressing gown and carried her to a back bedroom where he assaulted her. He left after admonishing her not to report the incident to police, she said.

According to Detectives Robert Klotz and William Greenfield, Eleventh Precinct, Walders denied attacking the woman.

Senate Votes To Confirm Judge Eicher

Iowan Becomes Chief Justice of District Court Succeeding Wheat

The Senate yesterday confirmed President Roosevelt's nomination of Edward C. Eicher, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, as chief justice of the District Court here.

Eicher, 63, succeeds Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat who retired from the bench January 1 of this year.

A native of Iowa, Eicher was admitted to the State bar in 1908 after completing his studies at the University of Chicago. For a time he was a country school teacher and later was assistant registrar at the University of Chicago.

He practiced law in Washington, Iowa, from 1919 to 1932 when he was elected to the House. He resigned in December, 1938, to take up his SEC post.

In Line for Judgeship

For the past year Eicher has been in line for a Federal circuit judgeship in the Midwest, but his appointment has been blocked by Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, whom he tried to unseat with other State Democrats in the Presidential "purge" of 1938.

Born into the Mennonite faith, Eicher does not subscribe to all of its customs. His father was founder of the sect known as the "Eichers."

The Senate Judiciary Committee reported Eicher's nomination favorably despite some objections by members of the District bar who desired a local nomination for the bench.

Purcell Heads SEC

Ganson Purcell yesterday was elected chairman of the Securities Commission, succeeding Edward C. Eicher.

Purcell, a native of San Gabriel, Calif., and later a resident of Buffalo, N. Y., is 36 and the youngest man to hold the chairmanship. He was appointed a commissioner last June after having served in various capacities with the SEC since 1934, the year it was established.

Eicher is expected to remain as a commissioner until he takes the oath as Chief Justice of the District Court.

Charles P. Taft Is Recovering

Charles P. Taft, assistant coordinator of Federal health and welfare services, is recovering from a light attack of pneumonia at Emergency Hospital, it was learned last night.

The 44-year-old administrator was taken to the hospital last Thursday. He is the brother of Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, and son of the twenty-seventh President.

Postlude

Grace Moore Pleases In Concert of Familiar Arias

By Ray C. B. Brown

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Grace Moore in a song recital Tuesday night in Constitution Hall. Assisting artist: Isaac van Grove. Program of operatic arias by Massenet, Thomas, Charpentier and Puccini, and songs by Falla, Arenski, Delibes, Beach, Clutsam, Weatherly and Malotte.

If Grace Moore's admirers, comfortably filling Constitution Hall last evening, missed the national anthem at the beginning of her recital, they discovered later on the reason for its absence. During the intermission one learned that the soprano, using an axiom of curative psychology, reasoned that it was better for an audience, assembled for enjoyment, to forget the crisis in an emotional relaxation, and then return to their homes with fresh confidence and patriotic devotion. Accordingly, she waited until the end of the program, when she asked the audience to join with her in the pledging of allegiance through "The Star-Spangled Banner."

BROWN

As had been well advertised in advance, Miss Moore's program was largely, if not entirely, composed of music which she had been asked by patrons to sing. The result was an array of familiar arias, such as "Depuis le jour," "Vissi d'arte," "Connais-tu le pays" and "Il est doux, il est bon," with Carmen's "Habanera" tossed in as an extra number. The unoperatic lyrics included Falla's "Seguidilla," Arenski's "But Lately in Dance I Embraced Thee," Delibes' "Les filles de Cadix," Amy Beach's "Ah, Love But a Day," Clutsam's "Ma Curly-Headed Babbie," Weatherly's "Danny Boy" and Malotte's setting of the Lord's Prayer.

Miss Moore's reliance upon her charm of person, her indubitable friendliness and other extra-musical qualities continues to carry her on the wave of popularity, despite her frequent vocal errancies. She can commit faults of tone production with an aplomb that makes one doubt if one has heard aright. This is unfortunate, for she has a voice of natural beauty, and that beauty shines now and then in a clear, soaring tone of admirable sonority. Such a tone is too often followed by a muffed phrase or by the constricted emission of a colorless note.

One understands that she was suffering from a cold, and that might account for some of the flaws. But a great artist, thoroughly versed in technique, can sing over a cold without allowing the auditor to realize the indisposition. Miss Moore, on previous visits here, has shown the same insouciant attitude toward finesse of phrasing, clarity of diction, firm support of the mezzo-voice and pianissimo.

Isaac van Grove, a capable and tactful accompanist, filled in a resting period for the singer with two solo numbers: Granados' "La maja y el ruisenor" and his own transcription of the camorristi dance from Wolf-Ferrari's "The Jewels of the Madonna." He has a skillful facility as well as an ingratiating tonal lyricism.

Man, Wife Foil Attack, Theft; Thug Badly Beaten by Couple

An attempt by a 32-year-old intruder to rob a Riverdale (Md.) man and attack his wife was frustrated when the prospective victims turned on their attacker and beat him so badly he had to be taken to a hospital, police reported yesterday.

According to Officer Edwin Thompson, of the Prince Georges County police, the man, booked as Frank Haywood, Negro, of Lakeland, Md., knocked on the door of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Lippert, 5318 Taylor Street, Riverdale, late Monday night.

When the door was opened by Anne Maureen, their 3-year-old daughter, Haywood forced his way into the room with his hand in his pocket as though holding a gun.

When he demanded money, Lippert handed him $15, and some change and Mrs. Lippert went into another room and got $5 more. The intruder then made Mrs. Lippert tie up her husband's hands. When he then made advances upon Mrs. Lippert, according to police, Lippert broke loose and jumped the intruder.

While the battle was going on, Mrs. Lippert waited her chance and smashed the man over the head with a heavy chair. The blow broke a leg off the chair. She thereupon picked up the chair leg and belabored the assailant about the head and face until he quit struggling. While Lippert sat on the man's head, Mrs. Lippert went to a neighbor's house and called police.

Officer Thompson said they found the intruder in such bad shape they first took him to Casualty Hospital where doctors worked over him for nearly an hour. Police were unable to find a gun. At the police station Haywood was charged with robbery, assault and attempted criminal assault.

Villar No Match, Pastor Easily Wins Bout

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

And so Rogers Hornsby made the grade. Baseball's Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N. Y., is now embellished by the bronzed plaque bearing the likeness of baseball's greatest right-handed hitter. There can be no quarrel with that choice of the Baseball Writers Association, which is in charge of the balloting. The record books testify that Hornsby belongs.

POVICH

At night, though, when the ghosts of baseball's great are reputed to cut up a few touches in the halls of their Cooperstown Valhalla, the sessions will probably be not quite so tranquil now that Hornsby is in the company. The old spade-caller was a storm center throughout his playing career and his alter ego at Cooperstown should liven things up a bit during the long winter evenings when the shades of the Hall of Famesters are wont to go townward on baseball topics.

Hornsby's elevation to the Cooperstown company could be an unintended rebuke to no less than Kenesaw Mountain Landis, lord high commissioner of the game, who let it be known that he doesn't like Hornsby. He let it be known during the World Series of 1939 at Chicago when he ordered the Rajah ejected from the press box without making an explanation, but the implication was clear enough. Landis, whatever his estimates of Hornsby as a ball player, had no use for Hornsby the man.

Rajah Defended His Horse Bets

Hornsby's crime in Landis' eyes was his habit of betting on the race horses. Horse betting is anathema to the Judge, and any connection of baseball with the galloping flea bags induces a tantrum in the commissioner's office. He ruled out Bing Crosby as a prospective buyer of the Boston Braves because Crosby is a horse owner, and one of the reasons he forbade Leo Durocher to invite George Raft as his World Series guest was because Raft also is not above betting on the horses. There is also the unverified report that Landis bounced to the ceiling at the end of the 1940 season when the owner of the Detroit Tigers presented his ball players with fancy little wallets on which was plainly stamped, in gold leaf, "saddle leather."

Landis started disliking Hornsby, officially, from the day that a Chicago bookmaker hailed the Rajah into court, claiming there was a matter of some losing race bets that Hornsby hadn't settled. For years it had been sort of acknowledged that Landis wouldn't permit Hornsby to take another big league managerial job. The minors seemed to be okay, for some reason, but Landis appeared to let it be known that Hornsby was not to return to the big leagues.

As for his horse betting, Hornsby never attempted to conceal it. "Sure I bet on the horses," he often told interviewers. "Why not? Other people like golf, or tennis or boating, but horse racing happens to be my hobby, and it should be my own business if I like it. I can have a horse bet riding and still have my mind 100 per cent in a ball game."

When the St. Louis Browns fired him during the 1937 season the announcement was made that Owner Don Barnes objected to Hornsby's betting habits. "That's bunk," Hornsby said later. "Barnes knew when he hired me that I liked to make a few bets. The day the Browns fired me I had bets on three horses and they all won. So did Buck Newsom, who was then with the Red Sox, and everybody knew it because Newsom always talks about his horse bets. But that didn't keep the Browns from trading for Newsom at the end of the season. It all depends on who's playing the horses."

Gave N. L. Pitching the Miseries

As we were saying somewhere up top, Hornsby rates as baseball's greatest righthanded hitter, and there can scarcely be any objection to that label. Even the admirers of Joe DiMaggio cannot yet rate him with a man who during a 22-year career in the majors had a lifetime batting average of .358, a figure that DiMaggio has not been able to maintain for six years. Hornsby led the league in batting seven times, including six seasons in a row from 1920 to 1925, and they're still shooting at the all-time batting mark of .424 he set for modern baseball in 1924.

It may be significant that of the National League pitchers voted into the Hall of Fame, none of them are of Hornsby's time. He contributed more to the miseries of National League pitching than any man in history. He did it, too, with the queerest batting stance ever to mark a good hitter.

Hornsby murdered pitching despite the fact that he was as far back in the corner of the batter's box as the regulations would allow. Before he swung it appeared impossible that he could protect the outside corner of the plate, but if he had a weakness outside of horse betting the pitchers never found it. He'd step a full stride toward the plate with the start of the pitch and hit from a posture that, for anybody else, would be off balance.

That might have been one of Hornsby's troubles as a manager; the fact that he tried to persuade other men to adopt his own peculiar batting stance. Nobody ever could, at least nobody ever did give it more than a brief trial. Beau Bell was probably the only man who approximated Hornsby's stance, and after one season he junked it. Fame, which was quite a feat seein' as how he was only a fair fielder. But it served the Rajah pretty well. It landed him in the Hall of with a bum throwing arm and the worst second baseman in the league on going back for a pop fly. But when Hornsby rapped for attention with his bat there was no ignoring him.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

N. Y. Considers Legalizing Bookies

New York, Jan. 20.—Good or bad, off-course horse-betting is bound to come. And it looks as if New York will set the pace for the rest of the country.

CONSIDINE

Right now up at Albany the champions of legalized horse parlors are saying that such betting would toss 25 million dollars a year into the always undernourished State treasuries. Even if that sum isn't realized, once the day comes, the boys will be quite satisfied to accept the next best amount. When New York finally kicked the bookmakers off the tracks and installed pari-mutuels two years ago, the supporters of such movement predicted that the State would make 10 million dollars out of horse parks. This year the State made a little over seven million dollars, but there were no complaints.

The figure 25 million dollars has been hit upon as the State's slice of the away-from-the-track betting business because supporters of the bill believe that about three times more betting is done away from race tracks than is done in the presence of the giddy-yaps.

Forgotten for the moment, or stuck back in the goitre-cure and Hernia ad section of the many-paged bill to legalize horse parlors is the notation that such a bill would exterminate a lot of vermin who have been feeding on horseplayers for years, as cigar store bookies, and who have never declared Uncle Sam in on their swag. The main selling point for the legislators and the public at large is that 25 million dollars.

Rest assured, if it goes through and the 25 million dollars actually is realized, the money won't reduce the tax load on New Yorkers. Nor on the citizens of other States which adopt the practice of muscling in on a racket that has belonged to low crooks and hustlers for untold years. But every little million helps these days. Morally, there is no difference between betting on a horse at Times Square or at Belmont. The question seems to be, shall be continue to place bets with seamy bums who won't cough up a part of it to Unc, and who won't give you track odds, or place the bets in shops operated on the up and up by civil servants?

It Was the Rajah's Just Due

Rogers Hornsby's in the Hall of Fame, and it couldn't happen to an abler or nicer guy. Yet it brings up the ironic fact that the Rajah can't get back into the big show, fine manager that he is, because the judge won't have obvious horse players around the premises. Nor can Babe Ruth get a big league job—nor can Ty Cobb, if the truth were known, nor Tris Speaker nor Grover Cleveland Alexander—all for varying reasons.

Here are some of the reasons Hornsby made the grade: He was the National League's most valuable player in 1925 and 1929; he made the All Star teams from 1925 until 1929; won the National League's batting championship in 1920 (.370), 1921 (.397), 1922 (.401), 1923 (.384), 1924 .424), 1925 (.403) and 1928 (.387). During his career he knocked in 1582 runs. When he batted safely in 33 games in 1922, it was a modern record. During the same year he hit for 450 bases. (Ted Williams hit for 335 bases in '41). Three years later Hornsby had a season's slugging average of .756. Six years later he hit three home runs in succession during a game, and during his lifetime he hit home runs with the bases filled a dozen times.

It might be interesting to compare his 1924 record with Ted Williams' 1941 record:

	G.	Ab.	R.	H.	Hr.	Sb.	Ave.
Hornsby	143	536	121	227	25	5	.424
Williams	143	456	135	185	37	2	.406

Baseball Fans to Get Peanuts Despite War

Atlanta, Jan. 20 (AP).—Baseball games and peanuts are not going to be separated by the war.

This good news for "goober" eating baseball fans came from W. B. Jester, secretary-treasurer of the National Peanut Council. Although millions of pounds will be precessed to produce oil for war purposes, says Jester, "we'll have our peanut oil and eat our peanuts, too."

Small Skeeters' Squad Swamps Eagles, 8-2

River Vale Scores First Victory Here

'Disorganized' Squad Led by Richards' 3 Goals; Skeeters Suddenly Fire Durno

By Jack Munhall

Wracked with "dissension" and "disorganized" by jealousy, the undermanned River Vale Skeeters could only defeat the Washington Eagles, 8-2, last night at Riverside Stadium.

With their 12-man squad further reduced by the sudden dismissal of Defenseman Don Durno between the first two periods, the Skeeters couldn't even deal the Eagles their worst defeat in history. But they didn't do badly, for after all it was the first time in history they have won a match here.

Nineteen hundred fans bore witness to Washington's humiliation at the hands of the sixth-place Skeeters, who only last week were threatening to quit their team en masse in protest of the firing of Coach Jesse Spring.

"Slow Death"

It was no quick collapse of the defense that produced this rout of the defending Eastern Amateur League champions. Oh, no, it was gradual; sort of like slow death for the loyal fans.

Playing under Jack McKinnon, the third coach in about ten days, the New Jerseyans scored twice in the firs. period, four times in the fourth and added a final two in the third period. Washington, scoreless for two periods, spoiled Goalie Mel Carey's chances for a shutout when Les Hickey tallied in 26 seconds of the third period. At 17:19 Art Thompson, of the Eagles, put in the last point of the match.

A smoldering feud of several days' standing led to Coach McKinnon's dismissal of Durno, the 215-pound defenseman Washington released to the Skeeters last month. Seen in uniform in prematch practice, Durno did not play in the first period.

Durno's Story

During the second period he paid a visit to the press box and announced that McKinnon had "fired me because I was getting too much notice in the newspapers." The 6-foot 4-inch youngster said he thought McKinnon was down on him because he was one of the players who had threatened to strike when River Vale allegedly fired Coach Spring because he was ill abed for a month.

"The first game I played for him," Durno related, "he used me only four minutes and I made a goal and an assist. The papers panned McKinnon, asking what was the matter because I usually played 40 or 45 minutes. That seemed to make him even madder and from then on he seldom used me.

"But I didn't say anything until tonight and then I really told him off. So he told me I was fired."

Durno said he had received a wire from Coach Bill Cook of Cleveland, defending champion club of the American League, offering him a job with a farm club. He also said that he might take a job with Saulte Saint Marie, of the "outlaw" Northern Michigan League.

McKinnon, asked his version of the firing, seemed at loss for an explanation. At first he denied that he had fired Durno. Then he admitted that he had, but still gave no reason, saying he was "too busy."

Richard Is Star

Leo Richard led River Vale's attack by scoring three goals and an assist. Other scorers for the Skeeters were Rudy Ahlin, Don Grivel, Gar Preston, and Joe Levandowski, who got two.

The match was unusually cleaner than most between these teams, only six penalties being levied and four of them in the third period. Odie Hallowell, one of the most easygoing of the Eagles, and Goose Hewson, of the Skeeters, were banished five minutes in the third period for fighting. Hewson opened the skirmish by cracking Hallowell's head with his stick.

Shore Banned For Argument With Referee

By the Associated Press

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 20.—Eddie Shore, playing manager of the Springfield Indians' hockey team, who was indefinitely suspended today, said it would depend on the American Hockey League president when he played again.

League President Maurice Podoloff said Shore had been suspended from any participation as player, coach or manager in Springfield games. Shore clashed with Referee Eddie Kuntz on the ice and later resumed the quarrel in the official's dressing room last Sunday night during a game with New Haven in that city.

"Naturally, I won't be on the ice tonight against Philadelphia," said Shore, who also owns the Springfield club. "Just when I will play again will be up to Podoloff. When I was talking with him he didn't say how long I would be suspended. He said a letter was on the way with the details of his decision. I'll have to wait for that before I'll know what it's all about."

Columbus Sells Bucher

Toronto, Jan. 20 (AP).—The Toronto Maple Leafs announced today the purchase of Infielder James Bucher from Columbus of the American Association. The 29-year-old second and third baseman appeared in 127 games for the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1937 and batted .253.

Rogers Hornsby Earns Niche in Hall of Fame

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 20.—Baseball's Hall of Fame at Cooperstown is slowly becoming more populous—and not with ghosts, either.

Rogers Hornsby, alive and vigorous, was added today to the group of 26 immortals who already have been enshrined in baseball's birthplace.

The Rajah, now nearing 46 years of age, completed his active career in the major leagues only four seasons ago and now is manager of Fort Worth in the Texas League.

He was named on 182 ballots in a poll of 233 baseball writers conducted by Bill Brandt, publicity director of the National League, in the first election held since 1939 and thus caught up with the honor he missed by a small margin three years ago.

A three-fourths vote was needed to elect, and although 72 different players were offered by the writers, each of whom was asked to list ten nominees, Hornsby was the only star selected.

Rajah Earned His Niche

There was no question that the greatest right-handed hitter in baseball's long history had earned the accolade. In 23 years in the majors he carved an everlasting niche for himself. He played for five different clubs and managed four of them, led the National in batting for seven seasons—six in succession from 1920 and again in 1928—hit over .400 for three different years and twice was named the most valuable player in the senior circuit.

He set many batting records that still stand for baseball's modern era, the foremost being his .424 average for the St. Louis Cardinals in 1924.

Hornsby broke into the majors with the Redbirds in 1915. Ten years later he became their manager and in 1926 he steered them to a world championship.

When he couldn't agree on a new contract he was traded to the New York Giants for Frank Frisch and a pitcher, then was shuttled to the

CrislerHopesFrosh Won't Be Needed For Varsity Ball

By the Associated Press

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 20.—Fritz Crisler, University of Michigan athletic director, said tonight he hoped it would not be necessary for the Western Conference to make freshmen eligible for varsity football during the war.

The Big Ten, however, probably will be surrounded by teams using freshmen, Crisler pointed out. The Missouri Valley Conference recently voted to permit freshmen to compete in varsity athletics. The Big Ten Conference facultycommittee is expected to rule on the matter soon.

Crisler said he opposed freshmen in varsity competition because:

It might interfere with their academic adjustment from high school to college.

College coaches would be unable to advise boys on preparations to condition themselves the summer before they entered school, thereby resulting in more injuries.

Landis Calls Meeting on Night Ball

Both Leagues Asked To View Expansion Of Nocturnal Games At New York, Feb. 3

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 20.—Kenesaw M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, tonight called a joint meeting of major league club owners at New York February 3, to consider expansion of night baseball.

The call followed a suggestion last Friday by President Roosevelt that more night games be played.

Present rules limit each club to seven games at home. However last week the National League fell in line with American League efforts to expand night games, agreeing to an increase which the National League members hoped would not exceed 14 games.

The American League had sought to have the night game schedule raised at the last two joint meetings, but was overruled, Landis siding with the National League.

Preparations Ended

Owner Phil Wrigley, of the Chicago Cubs, revealed tonight that he was in the process of equipping Wrigley Field for night baseball, but when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor, December 7, all preparations were stopped.

Wrigley said that 165 tons of steel, 35,000 feet of copper wire and other items of equipment were immediately turned over to the Government.

"We felt that this material could be more useful in lighting flying fields, munition plans or other war defense plants under construction, Wrigley said.

Might Use Comiskey Park

Wrigley declared that he might open negotiations on a rental basis to use Comiskey Park, already equipped with a splendid lighting plant, and play Cub games at night.

"It would be a blow to our pride to play elsewhere than in our own park," Wrigley added, "but we feel that under the circumstances this would be the only sane and logical thing to do."

Landis said he would preside at the joint meetings which would be held at the Roosevelt Hotel at 10 a. m. The leagues will hold separate meetings in New York the day before.

Atell Is Out As Promoter For Uline's

Boxing Promoter Johnny Atell and the Uline Arena Boxing Club came to a parting of the ways yesterday and a new arrangement at the Northeast plant will be disclosed "in about a week," it was announced by General Manager Lee J. Perrin.

In divorcing himself from the services of Atell, former matchmaker for Mike Jacobs, Perrin charged "neglect of duty" and "conflict of interests." Perrin explained that he couldn't understand why Atell could dig up only four "fast" shows in the four months since he took over the Uline boxing directorship October 20.

Further, Perrin intimated that Atell who has also promoted boxing at the New York Hippodrome and at Ridgewood Grove N. Y. was guided by other interests than those of Uline in the staging of his cards.

Perrin said that he would have nothing to say about the "new arrangement" until after the Ice-Capades has closed its two-week run at Uline on January 27. He left no doubt, however, that he would hire another boxing director.

In announcing Atell's departure Perrin issued the following formal statement:

"Uline Arena Boxing Club's interests in boxing do not embrace matches which have only casual buildups, or are the results of other boxing activities. The present interests are unable to make the matches which we consider necessary to present attractions commensurate with the arena. Therefore, the arrangement that has existed is temporarily ended and the arena itself will in all probability make other plans."

4 Hours Off Plane, Loser Tires Quickly

Spaniard Attempts To Make Fight of It With Flurries In Early Rounds

By Tony Neri

The ring cunning acquired by Bob Pastor in seven hard campaigns in the heavyweight devision, stood him in good stead last night as he gained a 10-round decision over the game Spaniard, Claudio Villar, in the main event of Promotor Joe Turner's opening show of 1942 in the W Street arena.

Pastor, recent conqueror of Booker Beckwith which catapulted him in line for another shot at Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis, fought clear of damaging wallops thrown by the Spaniard.

Villar staged a brilliant last-round battle in attempting to swing the fight his way, but he was a tired fighter. Only four hours off a plane from Miami, Villar had no reserve and the clever Pastor danced around him, content to jab and tie Villar up.

Pastor Knocked Down

After taking a lead in the first three rounds, Villar electrified the crowd in the seventh stanza when he caught the former New York University football star in his corner with a chopping right and Pastor went down, but for no count. Villar followed a hard right near the end of the round with a crushing overhand right which buckled Pastor's knees. He was unable to do further damage as the crafty Pastor danced away.

The New Yorker's body punching had its effect on the Spaniard. Pastor, once inside the long arms of Villar, played a staccato of lefts and rights which eventually wore down the brown-haired Basque from the Iberian Peninsula.

Villar opened hostilities in a manner which suggested an early exit for Pastor. In taking the first three rounds on The Post score card, Villar was connecting regularly with dynamite rights. Pastor's amazing ability to catch such blows drew the admiration of the crowd.

Villar Goes After His Man

In the third heat, Claudio landed repeatedly with hard wallops, although he was unable to put his man down. Villar had the lighter Pastor back-pedaling part of the way. This irritated the Spaniard no end. Pastor turned the tide in the fourth round.

He completely baffled the Spaniard, despite two crashing left hooks thrown by Villar. Pastor was met in the center of the ring with a Villar clout that shook him up. The New Yorker came back to take care of the situation.

In the sixth round, Pastor cleverly ducked a potent left that came within a breath of hitting Referee

Welker Cochran, Ill, Forced To Default; Reiselt Refuses

Cue Officials Deny Request for Delay, His Opponent Agrees

By International News Service

Chicago, Jan. 20.—Forthe second straight year the world three-cushion billiards tournament was interrupted by illness to a key player today when Welker Cochran, veteran San Francisco shotmaker, was forced to retire midway in his match with Otto Reiselt, of mhiladelphia, because of an acute stomach disorder.

Cochran complained of his illness at the intermission of his match last night with Ralph Greenleaf, but he continued, and eventually won a 50 to 49 thriller from the New York pocket billiards specialist. After that contest, he asked for a delay in his match today, but his request was refused by tournament officials.

With Reiselt leading, 34 to 17, in the thirty-ninth inning, Cochran notified Referee Herb Peterson that he could not continue and offered to default to his opponent. Reiselt, however, refused to accept the match by default and said he would

Wilson's Late Splurge Tops Western, 20-15; Roosevelt Wins

Riders Edge Tech After Scare, 31-28

Tie for Interhigh Lead Results; Jawish And Hillock Spark Tigers' Victory

As anticipated, the basketball boys of Western and Woodrow Wilson Highs battled on even terms right down to the final gun yesterday, the Tigers of Wilson coming out on top, 20-15, in the featured end of an interhigh series double-header at Roosevelt gym.

Roosevelt, after an impotent first half, summoned enough steam to down Tech by a 31-28 count in the opener. Thus the Riders tied Central for the league lead, each with three straight triumph, while Wilson broke a fourth-place deadlock with the Raiders and entered a third-place deadlock with Coolidge.

It was one of the lowest-scoring engagements ever played in the series, Wilson's judgment over Western. But the Tigers made it thoroughly impressive by hanging up the last six points of the game to win.

They were trailing, 15-14, after Donny Cross' midcourt basket with three and a half minutes left when Bill Pawish tore goalward and dropped in an overhand shot. For perhaps a minute the Tigers stalled the ball, but that didn't suit Don Hillock, their scoring ace. He took aim from just outside the foul circle and the ball ripped through without touching the rim. The issue was settled, but just for good measure little Johnny Coffey dribbled in for a sneak shot with only 20 seconds remaining.

Close All the Way

Until those last crucial minutes, there was as much as four points separating the teams only once. That was at the start, when Jimmy Karas and Charley Stephanson spotted the Raiders a 4-0 lead. Jawish and Hillock again were involved in the tying process, and after each ensuing period the scores were 5-5, 8-8 and 13-11, the latter favoring Western.

Hillock's nine points were high for the game as the Raiders' Karas, one of the city's highest scorers, was held to four points by the Tiger zone defense.

In suffering its third straight beating, only one by a wide margin, Tech's crew of rookies again showed the need of a little experience. They took a 8-2 jump on the defending champions midway of the first quarter, still were on top at 9-8 at the end, and trailed by only 13-11 at the half.

Redinger Is Star

The Riders were fumbling until the middle of the third session, but then Frank Redinger and Charley Howard starred in a spree that earned a 26-17 advantage going into the last quarter. That dwindled, but never quite disappeared in the final 8 minutes.

Redinger, probably the outstanding prospect in town, banged the backboard for a total of 14 points before going out on fouls late in the game. Howard, under the guarding of Bus Sithens, got only six. Clive Thompson was forced out in the third period but managed to top all Tech players with 8 points.

Ball-Hawking Helps Decide a Double Dose of Public School Basketball

Right—Dick Koester (49), of Roosevelt, appears to be surprised at getting the ball in the first game of yesterday's interhigh double-header at Roosevelt gym. Trips Canceled For Michigan Squads in Spring

By the Associated Press

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 20.—Cancellation of the University of Michigan's Southern spring tours, scheduled for the spring holidays, was announced today by Athletic Director Fritz Crisler.

The Michigan baseball, golf and tennis teams were slated to go South for competition between April 10 and 20. The university deans recently recommended shortening of the school term by elimination of the spring holidays.

Crisler said some contests in the South scheduled for weekends may be retained.

Postman Rings Wrong Bell

Pieces of Haight:

(Editor's note.—It is obvious from the contents of this letter that Haight got his envelopes mixed. This communication appears to have been meant for Art Brown, of WOL.)

Miami, Fla.

Dear Art:

I don't like to get mercenary, Loud Stuff, but I could use that two bucks you bet me that the Boss wouldn't let me come to Florida this year. When you layed it on the line you didn't reckon with the old Haight technique. You probably figured I was the same easy-going guy around the office that I am around home. Perhaps that command performance, you know when the wife said, "Walter, untrim the Christmas tree" and I did it, threw you off.

But, Art, if there is one guy I have the number of that is the Boss. I've got him figured right down to a "T." If I haven't, then why is he working his head off up there at The Post while I'm down here taking a vacation for both of us? In fact, before I left, I even had him feeling sorry for me having to sit in front of a typewriter all day trying to think up wisecracks and human interest angles.

Now don't get me wrong, Art. I'm not telling you all this just to be bragging. You've done pretty well for yourself around the station, but I just thought that some day you might want to get a certain assignment, you know something good, and you might do worse than follow the "Haight-get-away-from-the-office" system.

In the first place, I don't get overanxious. Then again, I don't play hard to get. As they say on one of those radio commercials, "These's a happy medium." I began my campaign just after Charles Town closed. The first couple of days were devoted to observati .. You know, watching the Boss out of the corner of my eye, waiting for him to get ripe. I finally caught him with the same twinkle he had in his eye just before I talked him into that California trip with the Redskins.

2 Pin Events Will Benefit Paralysis Fund

Hugh Arbaugh, president of the Washington Bowling Alley Operators Association and owner of the Silver Spring drives, announced yesterday a handicap tournament for next Sunday and Sunday, February 1, the event to be known as the "Mile of Dimes" Handicap tournament to raise funds for sufferers of infantile paralysis. In keeping with the present drive and the President's Birthday Ball, Mr. Arbaugh expects bowlers of both sexes in the city to rally to the cause, for participation in the events not only presents a chance for personal gain but a percentage of the money will go directly into the coffers of the Mile-of-Dimes committee.

The first Mile-of-Dimes event will start at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon and continue until midnight. The entry fee is only $1.50 per person, which includes the three games. Scratch for both sexes is 129, and a three-quarters handicap arrangement will be in effect.

Fifteen cents of each entry will go toward the paralysis fund, to which Mr. Arbaugh will add a like amount, making a total of 30 cents per entry. Instead of the usual 90 cents per entry going to the prize fund, 75 cents will be used for that purpose. Prizes for the Mile of Dimes Handicap Tournament will, of course, be according to the number of entrants.

Drott's 183, 400 Set Lead Duckpin Club

Bert Drott, popular scorer for several Silver Spring leagues, won the applause of his mates last night in the American League at Hugh Arbaugh's drives when he pounded out a record game of 183 which he followed with a 400 set. Willis Builders took the team honors with a record 683 game and high set of 1791, but dropped two tilts to opponents, the only sweep of the night being posted by Grotto Grill in their match with Cornelius Printing.

SILVER SPRING

Betsy Jago's 134-322 for Kenwood No. 2 in the Women's Country Club League at Silver Spring and Emily Nell's 325 set for Manor No. 1 were the leading scores for the play. Lenore Goldsmith's 116-297 sparked a sweep by Woodmont No. 1 over Army and Navy No. 1 with Manor No. 1 taking three from Congressional No. 1. Columbia No. 3 and Kenwood No. 3 each won three from opponents as Beaver Dam scored an odd-game win over Indian Spring No. 3 to remain in first place.

CLARENDON

Bill Coleman, American Drug Store, with 167—406, Raloh Gordon, McGonegal Plumbing, with 423, and Joe Freschi, A. H. Cohen, with 404, topped the Men's Major League at Clarendon with Gordon's boys posting two season records with a 660 game and 1907 set to win three tilts from C. & P. Telephone. Manning's Service, A. H. Cohen Realty and Buckingham Delicatessen scored respective sweeps over Arlington County Dairy, Sun Krisp Products and Boyer's Pharmacy.

CONVENTION HALL

Bill Duggan, of Passports, pounded out individual highs of 146—391 in the State Department League at Convention Hall to help his team post high set of 1565. Charley Hatten's 355 for Personnel sparked his mates in rolling high team game of 536 and in taking three in a row from Accounts, while a 381 by Walt Jessop aided Immigration in a sweep over DCR No. 2.

LADIES' MAJOR LEAGUE

A 137 game by Kitty Fearson, of Glebe Court Beauty Salon, and a 356 set by Vivian Nolan, of Fox Barbers, topped the Ladies' Major League at Clarendon, but the team highs were shared by Rite-Way Contractors with 540 and Monroe Pharmacy with a 1527 set. The only sweep was scored by the Ellett & Short girls, who took three from Glebe Court.

Schoolboy Scoring Lead Goes to Friends' Smith

Hillock Drops to Second Under 'Cottons' Average of 13 Per Game

A 16-point spree as Sidwell-Friends five defeated Petersburg (W. Va.) High last week earned top scholastic scoring honors for "Cotton" Smith in this week's compilation of local and nearby point making.

Smith boosted his total to 52 points in four games, an average of 13 a game, pushing Woodrow Wilson's Don Hillock from the lead into second. The latter kept up an even pace, 13 points in each of two games, to hold second with an average of 12.80.

Leader in points scored is still Jimmy Karas, Western's all-around leader who has been out front since hanging up 15 points in each of the Raiders' first two games. He now has 84 points, amassed in seven games.

An indication of their strength is furnished by the fact that Woodrow Wilson and Episcopal, of Alexandria, are the only schools represented by as many as four players with an average of 5 points per game. In addition to Hillock, the Tigers have Freddy Vinson, Bill Jawish and John Coffey. Episcopal's aces in three games have been Black, Sackett, Hamill and Burnett.

Gonzagans Easily Down Devitt, 39-22

Gonzaga High's basketers got off to a flying start and were ahead all the way yesterday as they crushed Devitt Prep five, 39-22, on the Purple floor.

By half time the hosts had built up an 18-5 lead, which proved decisive. Bernie Nolan and Al Lauck sparked an assault that was too effective for the inexperienced Preppers.

Nolan and Lauck shared the winners' scoring burden with 11 points each, one better than the total of Devitt's Glasser.

Yawkey Won't Ask Grove to Return Despite Offer

By the United Press

Georgetown, S. C., Jan. 20.—Tom Yawkey, owner of the Boston Red Sox, said today that Robert Moses (Old Man Mose) Grove has offered to return to service as a big league pitcher but added that he believed such a move would jeopardize the veteran's health and record.

"I see no reason for change in the status of Grove (who was unconditionally released by the Sox last month). He has retired with one of the greatest records of all time and I feel it would be a mistake to ask him to resume pitching duties at his age," Yawkey stated.

Grove told the United Press yesterday at his home in Maryland that he would like to pitch another year. He said he believed he could win ten games because so many youngsters were being drafted that he wouldn't have to face as stiff competition as normally.

Hoyas Favored Over Maryland At Riverside

Maryland University's sophomore club will make its only appearance of the season at Riverside Stadium tonight in an underdog role to Georgetown University's unpredictable quintet at 8:45.

The Hoyas will take a 6-2 edge in the modern series with the Terps, including a 51-34 triumph last year on the same floor. Maryland won last in 1940 in an upset at College Park.

Georgetown will meet up with three comparative strangers in Maryland's zone defense and its fast break plus Ernie Travis, the former Roosevelt High center who has hung up 139 points in seven games to date, better than 15 points a game.

Two other District college clubs have out of town engagements: George Washington an afternoon test with unbeaten Army at West Point and Catholic U. takes on its ninth Mason-Dixon Conference foe of the season Western Maryland at Westminster tonight.

C. U. Underdog

The Cadets have polished off Lafayette and Columbia without being extended and in addition to protecting their winning streak will be anxious to break the G. W.-Army series deadlock, which stands at two games each.

Catholic U., with five conference victories and three defeats against a three and one record for the Green Terrors, will be slight underdogs. Pete Scanlon, one of the leading league scorers, will take an 88-point total into the ball game.

Maryland's victory chances tonight rests with the theory that sophomores improve with every game in their first varsity season. Burt Shipley's charges have beaten three comparitively weak teams in Richmond, Va. and Washington College while they have lost a half dozen, to William and Mary and Duke in the conference, West Virginia, and C. C. N. Y., St. Johns and Seton Hall in a New York trip.

Georgetown has beaten only Western Maryland, American U. and Temple while losing to G. W., Temple, Long Island and Fordham, but with the exception of the Temple game they have looked very bad in defeat. If Marylnad could catch them on one of the off nights and get off to a good start, the sophs might pull through over the more experienced club.

Hoya Frosh Liked

Travis will be the marked man tonight. His value to the Terps is shown in the scoring column as next to his 139 points Tommy Mont trails with 53 and Heckert Horn has only 35.

G. U.'s chief scoring threat, Bill Bornheimer, has been lost to the team via the four-foul route four times in seven games this season in his overanxiety to make good. Big Bill has 67 points in seven games, while Charley Schmidli has 62 and Buddy O'Grady, the ball-handling specialist, 55.

One of the best basketball teams in the District, college, schoolboy or sandlot, will be the unbeaten Georgetown Freshmen which meet the Maryland Frosh in a prelim. Even the G. W. yearlings failed to extend the Hoya Frosh last week and Hoya Coach Ripley's wish at the moment is that the school would allow freshman athletics in competition. Frosh game time is 7:15.

Salica Receives Bantamweight Belt

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—Lou Salica, of Brooklyn, received a belt emblematic of the world bantamweight crown tonight and then won an unpopular verdict over Aaron Seltzer, New York, in the 10-round main event at the Bronx Coliseum. There were no knockdowns.

Seltzer weighed 124¾, a pound more than Salica.

Sammy Asino, 135, Clark Hills, N. Y., knocked out Bobby Orrelano, 133½, Puerto Rico, in the second round of a supporting four-rounder.

Heath, Comeback Artist, Gets Writers' Award

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Jan. 20.—Jeff Heath, who might have been a poor gamble at the waiver price a year ago, was honored tonight for one of baseball's remarkable comebacks.

The Cleveland Indians' slugging outfielder came all the way from his Puget Sound home near Seattle, Wash., to munch chicken and peas at a dinner of the local chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association. He was honored with a flock of praise words, a trophy naming him the Tribe's most valuable player of 1941, and a super de luxe set of left-handed golf clubs.

As for new bats, Jeff reckoned he didn't need any. His old ones gave him .340 in last season's American league batting race. That left him trailing only Ted Williams, who is Army-bound; Cecil Travis, already in the service, and Joe DiMaggio, who isn't expected to trade uniforms.

"If I have any luck at all I could win the batting title this time," hoped Heath. "A fellow might stand a chance if they keep on taking all those .300 hitters. Anyone can win, though, if he gets into one of those good years."

Jeff's .343 in his 1938 freshman season made him runner-up for that batting title. He then went into a two-year slump which in 1940 left him with a .219 average and great disgust. He bounced out of it last year with 199 hits—including 24 home runs, 20 triples and 32 doubles—against 78 the preceding campaign.

On hand to see him honored by the Indians' President Alva Bradley, the St. Louis Browns' Manager Luke Sewell and various other dignitaries and players was his father,

Jockey Day Injured as Jezebel II Is Defeated at Hialeah

Belle Poise Romps Home In Feature

Jockey on Favorite Strikes Right Foot On Starting Gate; Fracture Is Feared

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 20.—The Little River Purse, a mile and a furlong event for fillies and mares which featured today's program, proved disastrous for form players and Willie Day, most popular apprentice rider in this vicinity. Day, leading rider at Tropical Park with 17 winners and top apprentice at the current session to date with four victories, finished out of the picture astride J. E. Widener's favored Jezebel II and emerged from the event with a possible fracture in his right foot.

It was learned after the running that the New York lad struck the foot on the stall leaving the starting gate. Jezebel II never became a serious factor in the five-horse field.

The race was won by Belle Poise, flying the silks of John Phipps' Blenheim Farms. Under a masterful ride by Don Meade, who was scoring for the first time at the meeting, Belle Poise registered by two lengths to pay $8.30. W. C. Winfrey's One Jest was second, six lengths in advance of H. P. Headley's Pet. Jezebel II could only beat Kasidah. The time was 1:54 1-5.

It is doutful if any of the 8563 fans knew about Day's injury while the event was being waged.

Jezebel II was the last to leave the gate under her injured pilot. The boy gamely rode out the race, keeping the Widener filly close enough to hold a winning chance despite her trailing position. However, the combination was not able to come on when the important running began. Meanwhile, Meade had been nursing Belle Poise along in front while disposing of Kasidah. The winner stole a wide lead around the big bend and had plenty left with which to stave off One Jest in the run home.

The seventh race brought another accident which was more spectacular but much less harmful. As the field approached the stretch turn, Starlike, ridden by Ira Hanford, and Exploration, piloted by Don Meade, went down. However, neither jockey was hurt.

This event was on the turf course, which may have been fortunate for the riders who went down. Starlike seemed to stumble first, and fell right into the hedge which serves as the inner rail. Then Exploration tumbled. Meade arose and walked away, but Hanford was caught in the hedge. When extricated, Ira also traveled on his own steam.

Greedan, a $39.80 for $2 hazard, wore down the pacemaking Robert E. Lee in the last furlong and won the mile and three-sixteenths event by a length. Run By was beaten by two lengths for the place.

Krauser Risks Junior Heavy Rassle Crown

Bronzed Karol Krauser will lay his handsome championship belt on the line at Uline's Arena Monday night when he defends his world's junior heavyweight wrestling championship in a one-fall finish match with George Becker, Chicago and Midwestern favorite.

It will mark Krauser's first defense of his belt at Uline's, although he scored impressively over Tony Martinelli, one of his ranking contenders, in a nontitle match there prior to the New Year.

Peruvian Turf Star To Race in Florida

Miami, Fla., Jan. 20 (AP).—An outstanding Peruvian thoroughbred, Meissen, has arrived in Miami by way of California for the winter races.

Meissen is under lease to A. T. Jergens, California oil man. He was in temporary retirement last summer because of illness, but was showing up well in training trials before racing at Santa Anita was cancelled.

Ex-Show Ring Aces Happy at Ft. Myer

Charley Lewis, Shirley Payne, Carl Shilling And Roland Hartman Belong to Third Cavalry

By Anne Hagner

From tailor-made riding clothes to the somewhat uncertain fit of the Army's olive drab was a quick jump for a quartet of top-notch show ring riders, and do they like being privates in Fort Myer's Third Cavalry? At the end of that "duration," it's going to be difficult to muster them out.

Quickly adapting themselves to Army routine after the free-and-easy ways of the show circuit are Charley Lewis, Shirley Payne, Carl Schilling and Roland Hartman, some of the most able riders ever to throw a leg over a horse in the East.

Lewis, young Washington boy who was inducted from Warrenton, Va., last summer, showed locally for many years and then transferred his headquarters to Greenwich, Conn., where he managed and trained Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Untermyer's string and won two championships in as many years at Madison Square Garden.

Payne, of Purcellville, Va., has ridden ever since his pony days and gained most of his reputation as trainer of Col. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's hunters and jumpers at Berryville, Va. Inducted at Fort Knox, Ky., last September, Payne was transferred to Fort Myer a month ago and will ride the Greenhalgh entries in the President's Birthday Horse Show next Wednesday and Thursday. P. S.—He'll be back in his tailor-mades for the occasion.

Schilling, clean-cut 21-year-old Bristol (Pa.) boy, rode for four years under the colors of Dr. E. J. Laing, whose Foggy Morn and Floris Mart made an excellent record in Northern rings in 1940. Foggy Morn was jumper champion at Devon and Wilmington in quick succession, and the two won three other important titles and two blues at Madison Square Garden.

Lone Maryland representative in the group is Hartman, who hunted and showed around his Suitland home and the District until he was inducted and sent to Fort Knox last summer.

These days, Lewis is under Lieut. Fred Hughes in the remount detail, which handles the schooling of green horses for the use of enlisted men. The other three are alternating their riding with guard duty at various military posts around the city.

Bush Leagues Should Profit From the War

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Jan. 20.—War may be a disguised blessing to bush league baseball, says Owner Joe Bratcher, of the Lake Charles (La.) Skippers—both in players and attendance.

The way Bratcher sees it, the war is going to yield a golden opportunity to the very old and very young, particularly the young. They'll get a chance in baseball which they never would have had in peacetime, and attendance should be better, because rubber shortage will keep sports fans near home.

"We're in town three or four days a week, and they can walk out to the park," he told Sports Editor Elliott Chaze, of the Lake Charles American-Press.

Take the average 16-year-old player, argues Bratcher, passing on to the question of talent. Normally, he's lucky to get even a pat on the head in the Evangeline League or other minor circuits. So what?

"That youngster returns to his sandlot circuit and continues to learn a number of things, all wrong," Bratcher told Chaze. "Maybe he comes back to us in a couple of years and we have to grind all that amateur monkey business out of him before the kid is of any value to organized baseball."

Bratcher contends a boy is most impressionable and pliable between 16 and 18 years of age. On that basis, he thinks baseball can store up a bumper crop of talent during the war, enough to supply customers with thrills for the next decade.

As for the old-timers:

"Plenty of men beyond the maximum army age limit can skip around fast enough for a Class D league. You haven't seen many of them in the past, simply because they have no sale value. We've known a guy in his forties, and still in the bushes, wouldn't be a sound investment for major-loop ivory hunters."

War Returns Old Prestige To Caliente

By the Associated Press

Agua Caliente, Mexico, Jan. 20.—The war has returned to Agua Caliente a measure of prestige and affluence the border track enjoyed in its golden days of American prohibition.

With California tracks closed down under wartime ban, Caliente goes merrily on its way to new and unwanted success.

Fans have been crossing the border at Tiajuana in such large numbers that the Caliente management last week eliminated the Sabbath Public Handicap—to reduce attendance.

Closing of Santa Anita brought many top horses to the Mexican track where purses seldom exceed $1000 and average $600.

Thoroughbreds owned by John Hay Whitney, Mrs. Reginald Sinclaire, of New York and Colorado; Betty Grable, film actress; Isador Bieber, of New York, and others well known to race fans are here. Caliente has its share of class.

Roulette wheels and other forms of gambling which vied with the thoroughbreds for popularity more than a decade ago are absent. Racing is on a weekly instead of a daily basis, but more and more American dollars are being spent at the $3,000,000 plant. Caliente is operated by an American corporation.

No official attendance figures have been announced. Caliente officials are attempting to keep within the 5000 daily limit set by the United States Army as a wartime precaution, and the fact attendance went considerably over that mark prompted elimination of the public handicap.

Haight Mails Wrong Letter To Right Spot

But I didn't play my ace at this time. Instead, I used by deuce approach. You guessed it, Art—one of my light yarns.

Well, he listened, laughed a bit and reached for a pile of papers on the corner of his desk. That was the tip-off that I must wait.

The next few days I worked in my daily story, but the weather was too bad to bring up the Florida subject. By the way, the weather is important. If it is snowing and blowing outside when you pop the question, the Boss might get a little bit jealous if he thinks of you lying around on the beach while he mushes his way to a taxi.

I picked out a day when the sun was shining bright and the temperature moderate and the war news not so bad. Even with these facts working for me, I wasn't sure I was "home" until the Boss came in and didn't grunt his greeting. He smiled and gave me a mellow, "Hello, Haight," and I knew the proper moment had arrived.

I worked just like a bee buzzing around a rose. I went right up to the top of my story file and pulled out the yarn I had been saving for just this occasion. Then I let him have it. Well, he laughed so hard he started the presses. I had to slap him on the back to slow his vibration and then I was ready to get in my big play.

"How about leaving for Florida?" I asked.

"Haight, those stories of yours are killing me. Florida? Why, not, Florida? Sure," he replied.

And so you're out two bucks.

If you see anything in my letters to the boss about $10-a-day-rooms and $2 meals, just forget them. I have to do a little missionary work because of these expense accounts. I've got a nice little room three blocks from the track for $7 a week. And it isn't bad sitting on a stool in front of a counter eating when you save $1.45 a meal even if you do lose it at Hialeah.

Give my regards to Russ Hodges and everybody around the station. Write when you can, but mention my name once in a while in the morning. I'm still on the diet, are you?

Well, I've got to sign off now and dash off one of those "Dear Boss" letters. I'm supposed to meet some fellows on the beach at 11:30 and it's quarter of 11 now. I'll make it. As ever.

WALTER.

Out Fishing...

With Jack Bell

Last Sunday at West Palm Beach, the Eighth Annual Silver Sailfish Derby opened. If Derby history repeats itself for the sixth time, it will not be until the last day, February 6 that the winner will be determined. Just why the grandpop of all spindles not a waits three weeks for his turn at bat, and why the bait he finally taps is usually dangled by some Derby angler who has had only a picture acquaintance with a sailfish, is anyone's guess.

JACK BELL

The habit has spread to other sailfish events. Early in December there were 225 sailfish boated in four days of the Silver Meteor Tournament, but the eight-foot five inch winner came in the last afternoon.

Last year there were about 750 sailfish on the Derby registry during the first 20 days. Not all of these were boated, of course, since the little sails were tossed back into the Gulf Stream. Along came little Royal Shannonhouse, 11-year-old, from West Palm Beach, who had never caught a sailfish before and the Derby was over. Thirty-five minutes after the strike the skipper of the Nita was measuring off 8-feet, 4¾ inches while the mate headed for the dock at top speed. There was only an inch and a quarter to spare over the entry of Charles J. Nunn, of Cleveland, and the boys were taking no chances with shrinkage or the descrepancies of an official tape.

The man who learned about a final finish in the Derby, and learned it the hard way, was Zeke Cornelius, president of the club during the early years. Pathe cameraman had made the Derby parade of boats and a series of exceptional jumping fish sequences—all with sound, and all they needed was the trophy presentation to wind up the reel. Starting the previous Sunday, President Cornelius made the same presentation speech three times for the benefit of the mikes to three different "winners" before he could retire the side. Each time there was a difference of half an inch in length until Jack de Royter, of New York, made it 8 feet 7½ inches on the last day.

Heading the list of trophies, as usual, is the permanent Silver Sailfish trophy. Name of the contestant bringing in the longest sail during the Derby goes on its silver panel, while a replica of the famous silver sailfish leaping from an onyx wave is presented the winning competitor. The winning fish mounted by Fred C. N. Parke, is also given him, while his boat captain wins a shipshore radiophone set.

Continuing its conservation campaign, the West Palm Beach Fishing Club will again put a minimum limit on the length of sailfish eligible for any award. Despite restrictions which started at 7 feet, and were later revised to 7½ feet, the club has never been forced to forgo a daily award in the Derby because of this minimum limit.

Indiana's ninth annual Crow Control Contest, which is open to all Hoosier conservation organizations, opened last week. This contest, under which cash prizes are awarded to clubs turning in the largest number of crow feet each month, will continue for five months. The contest was originated for the purpose of reducing the horde of crows which prey on song and game birds in Indiana.

We don't understand why more gunners are not out shooting crows in nearby Virginia and Maryland. It is not difficult at this time of the year to locate a flyway used by crows on their way to roost. In the middle of the afternoon large concentrations of crows can be located, and if observed their flight can be located generally over some point of vantage to the shooter.

The birds, it will be found, use the same route every day, at the same time by a matter of only minutes. A blind can be set up, frequently decoys cut out of card board painted black help a great deal. Further it is also a good way to teach your son the rudiments of wing shooting, with a minimum of worry, because he is constantly under your surveillance.

Casey Club Holds Basketball Dinner

South American Net Players Will Soon Equal Ours—Cooke

Neighbors Improved, Star Says on Return From Good Will Tour

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Jan. 20.—In three years or less, Elwood Cooke said today, South American tennis players will be holding their own with top-ranking amateurs of the United States.

"South American tennis is improving, not only in the stroking and tactics," he said, in an interview, "but in the players' ability to get knocked down and then come back."

Cooke and his wife, the former Sarah Palfrey, the National Women's champion, are in good position to judge the progress of the game below the Equator. They toured the continent last year, and are just back from another good will trip.

"On our first trip," Elwood continued, "we found the players taking tennis as a matter of 'life and death.' This time, we found them relaxed and not nearly so nervous, and consequently, much improved.

"Francisco Segura is a good example of what can be accomplished with these players under good coaching. In a short time he's improved a great deal, just how much nobody can be really sure."

Segura, an Ecuadoran attending the University of Miami, has been the darkhorse of the winter tournaments.

Cooke credits his comely wife with the greatly increased interest of South American women in tennis. "They used to think that women tennis players were Amazons, all shoulders and no form," he said.

"Then Sarah went down there and they learned that a woman can be feminine and dainty, and still smack a tennis ball."

Industrial Index in Year Scores Record Gain

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that American industrial production rose in 1941 from 139 to 168 per cent of the 1935-39 average.

This 29-point gain was one of the largest for any year and brought the figure to the highest point in American history.

The December index of 168 was two points higher than November, but the board explained that actually December production was somewhat smaller. The index rose because the decline was less than expected normally at that season. The index is adjusted to make allowance for seasonal differences.

In its summary, the board said, "industrial activity declined less than seasonally in December and the first half of January, retail trade continued in large volume, and prices of many commodities rose further."

Senate Unit Hears Foes of Truck Load Plan

Opponents of a proposal to authorize the Interstate Commerce Commission to regulate the size and weight of trucks in interstate commerce told a Senate committee yesterday that the legislation would harm public interest by encroaching upon States rights.

The bill, designed to give the Federal Government power to make uniform various State regulations governing movement of trucks along highways, was represented by its supporters as facilitating highway transportation of defense materials.

The American Farm Bureau Federation, through its representative, Hugh F. Hall, told a Senate Interstate Commerce subcommittee that defeat of the proposed legislation would "safeguard the property interests of the States in their highways and protect the regulatory rights of the States."

James E. Lovett, Pennsylvania State representative and member of that State's legislative committee on interstate cooperation, told the committee that the bill was objectionable because it "centralized power in the Federal Government that belongs to the State government."

Railroads oppose the measure, the committee was told, by J. E. Corbett, legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, because it would further subsidize motor vehicle transportation at the expense of already burdened railroads.

U. S. Urged to Build Two Aviation Gasoline Plants

Construction of two Government-owned plants for the manufacture of 100-octane aviation gasoline was recommended to the Defense Plant Corporation yesterday by the Office of Petroleum Coordination.

The plants would be operated for the Government by the Pure Oil Co., Chicago, and the Southport Petroleum Co., Kilgore, Tex. The coordination office declined to disclose where the plants would be located or their construction cost.

Ralph K. Davies, deputy petroleum coordinator, said the coordination office believed that "wherever possible, private capital should do the job. But time is so precious and the need for 100-octane aviation gasoline is so great that some Government construction is imperative."

Secretary of Interior Ickes, the petroleum coordinator has announced that private industry and the Government would cooperate to increase the output of high-octane aviation fuel more than three-fold.

Price Ceilings Set on Livestock, Poultry Feed

The Office of Price Administration established temporary price ceilings yesterday on animal products used as feed for livestock and poultry.

OPA said prices since the outbreak of the war had gone up to about $12.50 a ton and that it was believed supplies were being held back in anticipation of further price increases.

The temporary ceilings stabilize prices for the feed at levels prevailing January 17. A permanent price schedule will be established upon completion of further OPA studies of the situation.

Fourteen different commodities, including blood meal, blood flour, meat scraps and bone meal, are covered by the ceiling.

At the same time OPA fixed temporary maximum pricees for sales by processors of fish meal, which has become one of the principal sources of high protein ingredients used in making poultry and livestock feed. This ceiling also was based on January 17 prices. During the past two months, OPA said, fish meal prices increased approximately $16 a ton.

I. B. A. Asks Nine-Member Securities Commission

The Investment Bankers Association asked Congress yesterday to expand the Securities Commission from five to nine members and extend their terms of office from five to ten years to relieve the commission's increasing work load.

John S. Fleek, Cleveland, I. B. A. president, told the House Interstate Commerce Committee that the proposals were advanced because of a rapid turnover in the SEC personnel and because the "work load of the commission is excessively heavy."

The commission has expressed opposition to such changes in the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934.

Asserting that administration of the Public Utility Holding Company Act was alone a job great enough for the full-time work of a five-man commission, Fleek told the committee:

"Since its organization in 1934 the commission has had five different chairmen. The turnover in the membership of the commission has been high. Changes in the chairmanship and in the composition of the commission itself has been disturbing to business and have, from time to time, created a feeling of uncertainty as to the course which the commission might take."

"The securities industry earnestly recommended that steps be taken by the Congress which will lead to greater continuity of office within the commission itself. . . .

"The proposal which we are making here is not intended in any way as a criticism of the commission, of its administration of the acts entrusted to it, or of the commission's staff."

Rail Industry Pledges to Meet Freight Car Goal

The railroad industry has notified the Office of Production Management that it will meet the production schedule of 36,000 freight cars by May 1 outlined for the industry by the Government earlier this month.

Members of the railroad industry advisory committee who met here Monday said achievement of the goal would require a general speed-upon freight car assembly lines and the standardization of construction.

At the same time the railroad men asked OPM to make available immediately materials to repair existing passenger and sleeping car equipment. This need is urgent, the committee said, because of increased military traffic, curtailed use of automobiles and the rationing of tires for civilian purposes.

Priorities assistance was given January 2 for the output of the 36,000 cars in February, March and April, and aid was given also for continuation of production of 926 locomotives then on order, and for all types of repairs and equipment maintenance material.

The production schedule has been estimated to require 1,413,893 tons of steel, 353,637 tons of cast iron, 19,985 tons of other metals and 570 tons of rubber.

The committee asked Andrew Stevenson, chief of the transportation and farm equipment branch of OPM, to make a new study of the railroad industry's need for steel castings, in the hope of receiving OPM assurance that this vital material would continue to be available despite war needs.

Your Federal Income Tax

By Bureau of Internal Revenue

No. 17—Earned Income Credit

The law allows, in computing the normal tax of an individual, an earned income credit of 10 per cent of the earned income, but not in excess of 10 per cent of the net income. "Earned income is defined in the law as wages, salaries, professional fees and other amounts received as compensation for personal services actually rendered. Where a taxpayer is engaged in a trade or business in which both personal services and capital are material income-producing factors, a reasonable allowance as compensation for personal services actually rendered by the taxpayer, not in excess of 20 per cent of his share of the net profits of such trade or business, is considered as earned income. "Earned net income" means the excess of the amount of the earned income over the sum of the "earned income deductions," which are the ordinary and necessary expenses properly chargeable against earned income. The entire amount of the taxpayer's net income up to and including $3000, regardless of the source, is considered earned net income. In no case is the earned net income to be considered to be more than $14,000.

Staples Buoyant In Limited Trade

Wheat at Chicago finished up ⅛ to ¼ of a cent a bushel and corn gained ⅛ to ⅜ of a cent.

Hogs at Chicago were steady to 10 cents lower and minor recessions were reported for cattle and lambs.

The Associated Press index of 35 important wholesale commodities, with 1926 as 100, touched a new 1941-42 high at 96.76 compared with 96.57 on Monday.

Delay Advised in Forced Unscrambling Of Public Utility Holding Companies

The public utility district of Kitsap County, Wash., recently made a practical contribution to national unity in wartime.

It acted in accordance with the doctrine of pulling together and postponing internal controversies for the duration of the war.

Produce Trade Opposes Plan Of 7-Day Week

By the Associated Press

Belleair, Fla., Jan. 20.—A Federal proposal to put freight car loading and unloading on a seven-day week and for restricted routing of freight movements drew the opposition of the United Fruit and Vegetable Association here today.

"Practically every market in the country is tied up with a labor union agreement that would break us if we went on a seven-day week," declared C. B. Moore, of Los Angeles, secretary-manager of the Western Growers Protective Association and a member of the organization's transportation division.

Other members of the transportation division asserted that wage and hour law requirements would make a seven-day week harmful because of the necessity for paying time and a half wages for overtime work.

The association also opposed Interstate Commerce Commission recommendations for cancellation of average demurrage agreements and intra-plant freight demurrage.

It was the first official action of the association on Federal control proposals during a convention that has been highlighted by suggestions for more Governmental regulations.

A special committee is studying a suggestion from the organization's president, Elmer Hartner, of Denver, Colo., for appointment of a Federal coordinator to help the industry cut out wasteful practices.

Earnings Report

Lehn & Fink Products Corporation, makers of drug specialties, reported for the six months ended December 31 net profit of $348,387 after Federal income taxes, equal to 87 cents a share on the common stock. This compared with $312,873 or 78 cents a share for the six months ended December 31, 1940.

Air Associates, Inc., reported net profit for the fiscal ear ended September 30, 1941, was 0456,555, equal after preferred dividends to $3.35 on each of 134,905 common shares then outstanding, compared with $409,266 or $3.50 on each of 111,618 common shares in the preceding fiscal year.

Chesapeake & Ohio Railway reported 1941 net income of $44,939,744, compared with $33,591,166 the previous 12 months. Net income for December was $5,847,197 against $2,830,678 the corresponding month in 1940.

New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. reported net income in 1941 of $9,537,564, or $7.15 a share, compared with $9,895,097, or $7.42 a share in 1940.

Lead Products' Prices Boosted

The Office of Price Administration yesterday modified its suggested price schedule on metallic lead products to bring prices into proportion with the price of primary lead, which was raised 65-100 of a cent to 6.50 cents one week ago.

Telegrams were sent to 77 producers of lead pipe, lead sheets, type metal, solder, ammunition, bearing metals and other metallic products giving them permission to add 65-100 of a cent a pound of lead content to the prices of lead products prevailing on April 1, 1941.

Earlier the manufacturers had been asked to hold prices to the levels of January 2, 1942. The prices now established are to continue in effect, OPA said, until formal price action is taken following completion of cost studies now in progress.

Ever-Normal Granary Now Pays Tidy Profit To U. S. and Cooperating Grain Producers

Chicago, Jan. 20.—The Nation's ever-normal granary, instituted in time of plenty to prevent price collapse, now is paying wartime dividends.

Due to war-stimulated demand for food, Uncle Sam and the grain producers who have cooperated in recent years in holding back from market record-breaknig supplies of grain today have stores with an estimated inventory value of at least 100 million dollars greater than the original worth. More than a billion bushels of wheat and corn are involved.

This includes grain once held in the granary but recently put into consumption channels. With prices of both corn and wheat near top levels since 1937, Uncle Sam and cooperating farmers as well have been cashing profits. The Government has sold about 25 million bushels of wheat and more than 100 million bushels of corn in recent months.

As has been the case the last two years, wheat farmers who put grain into storage, taking Government loans which, in effect, amounted to guarantees of certain prices, now are able to market their grain at prices above original rates. Much of this wheat is appearing on the market now.

At the same time, the Government lending agency, the Commodity Credit Corporation, which had to take over about 175 million bushels of 1939-1940 wheat last year in default of loans when prices were considerably below a dollar, is disposing of its stocks. Any profits from this operation, after administrative and handling expenses, may be prorated to participating producers.

Profits accruing on this back-up wheat vary. On approximately 350 million bushels of 1941 wheat stored under loans farmers can now realize prices ranging from 10 to 15 cents over the original loan rates. After payment of storage and interest charges, traders estimate the paper profits would be close to 20 million dollars.

On the 175 million bushels of CCC wheat, part of which already has been disposed of, the indicated profit per bushely is much greater because the Government acquired the grain in default of original loans which were based at only 81 cents a bushel in Chicago, or almost 50 cents below the present market. Even though the Government has offered to sell 100 million bushels as livestock feed at well below current market prices, trades estimated the inventory profit at least 25 million dollars and possibly considerably more.

The 240 million bushels of old corn held by the Government were stored under original loans of 57 to 61 cents a bushel. In recent months the Government has sold almost half of this at market prices well above original loan rates, with sales particularly heavy in recent weeks on a basis of above 80 cents in Chicago. In addition, producers had under loans almost 300 million bushels of 1938-39-40 corn, of which more than 100 million bushels have been redeemed because of more attractive prices and need for conversion into livestock at profitable feeding ratios. Appreciated value of this old corn in various positions was estimated at least at 50 million dollars.

Produce Opposes Plan Of 7-Day Week

Irrespective of the ultimate merits of public vs. private power, the county board took the view that it is preferable during the wartime emergency to use existing and available economic tools, rather than confuse the issue through reorganization.

It conditionally postponed for the duration the condemnation of the properties in its county owned by the Puget Sound Power & Light Co.

In the same spirit, if the SEC at Washington could be authorized to delay until after the war the mandatory unscrambling of public utility holding companies, which have received a death sentence, it would release power management to meet the challenge of meeting the peak wartime load.

The resolution adopted by the board in Kitsap County constitutes an important symbol of internal harmony and should be of interest to public officials and business executives throughout the land.

The resolution follows: "Whereas: The Kitsap County public utility commissioners, recognizing the seriousness of the war emergency, pledge and declare that all action to be taken during said emergency shall be in conformity with the policy of the United States Government."

Declaring that such action would obviate additional local taxes during the war against the Axis, C. Jack Jones, the chairman of the county board, explained: "The board will make no move toward the condemnation of properties owned by the Puget Sound Power & Light Co. in the county during the war period unless such actions is requested by the Federal Government."

In commenting on this action, Frank McLaughlin, president of the company involved, in a message to this column, pointed out: "In this wartime crisis, I feel that it is a tragedy of vast proportions to even contemplate condemnation proceedings, which would tear apart the unified, interconnected system of the Puget Sound Power & Light Co., which is so essential in this hour of national emergency and peril. Such procedure seems to me to be against the public interest and adequate defense. All of our energies should be devoted to national defense, winning the war and proper safeguarding of the lives and welfare of our people.

"Rather than helping to win the war, as I see it, dismemberment of this company's system would have the opposite effect. We must have real effective unity to assure the victory which must result from our country's efforts. This is the time to give our all to our country.

"It is no time for bickering over the color of kilowatts. We are Americans all, imbued with the spirit of patriotism and love of country. We want to do our part in the preservation of those things dear to the heart of every American. We are fighting to preserve democracy throughout the world. We can't, in the slightest degree, sabotage it at home."

Tunney Resigns As Distillery Head To Work for Navy

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—Lieut. Commander Gene Tunney of the United States Navy has resigned as chairman of the board of American Distilling Co. to devote all his time to physical training duties for the Navy, it was announced today.

Tunney was elected a director of the company, which owns the largest distilling plant in the country at Pekin, Ill., in 1935. He became chairman in 1938.

In his letter of resignation, Tunney said:

"In view of the fact that our country is at war and I am on a full-time job with the United States Navy, I find it necessary to relinquish all of my business interests."

Tunney has been engaged in the physical training of recruits for the Navy for some months. At present he is at the United States Naval Training Station in Cleveland.

$50,000,000 Issue Of N. Y. City Bonds Last 'for Duration'

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—A group of banks was awarded today 50 million dollars of New York City bonds, called the last for the duration of the war.

National City and the Chase National Bank headed the group, which presented the only bid made.

"Today's successful sale is the last important financing which the city will undertake for the duration of the war," Comptroller Joseph D. McGoldrick said. "We have now funded all outstanding capital commitments and no important new ones are to be anticipated until the conclusion of the national emergency."

The bonds consisted of 32 million dollars in serial 2½s and 18 million in assessment 2¼s. The bid was 100.0938, indicating an interest cost to the city of 2.43987 per cent.

Navy Honors Pontiac For Materiel Output

Pontiac, Mich., Jan. 20 (AP).—Pontiac motors division of General Motors Corporation has doubled and redoubled its production of guns for the United States Navy and is ready, Harry J. Klingler, its general manager, said today, to do much more.

Klingler made the statement in accepting from the Navy Department the traditional "E" pennant for outstanding production of Navy materiel, in the Pontiac naval ordnance plant here.

With the Navy "E" pennant also was presented the flag of the Bureau of Ordnance.

Pontiac is the first automobile manufacturer to receive the pennant.

New York, Jan. 20.—Rails took on more recovery fuel in today's stock market and, while the majority failed to go any distance, they at least helped steady the remainder of the list.

Gains ran to a point or so for favorites in the morning, with activity picking up at intervals. Extreme advances were later reduced in most cases and, at the close, numerous issues were about unchanged and minus signs were plentiful.

Tre Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 37.8. Dealings slowed after midday and transfers for the full proceedings totaled 487,330 shares, against 428,760 yesterday.

Rail Outlook Better

Carriers still had the benefit of renewed hopes of rate raises being granted and prospects traffic would mount substantially over this year. In addition, several bright earnings statements were helpful and Federal recommendation oil companies put more tank cars into service to offset ocean casualties proved a bolstering influence.

Wall Street skeptics still were in abundance, however, especially anent the critical Japanese drive on Singapore, the cloudy Philippines outlook and the menace of enemy submarines to important shipping off the Atlantic Coast. Some in the bullish ranks inclined to hold aloof pending more light on forthcoming taxes and price control legislation now engaging Congress.

Many Groups Idle

Steels, oils, motors, rubbers, coppers, utilities and aircrafts did little or nothing. Selling in the chemicals dried up to a certain extent although the majority kept in minus territory. Oils were retarded by the warning of the OPA that ceilings would be slapped on gasoline unless retail outlets maintained prices at or below the levels of last November 7.

Santa Fe touched a new 1941-42 peak, but eventually halved most of an early upturn of better than a point. Union Pacific was on top 1¼ and lesser improvement was retained by New York Central, Great Northern, Pennsylvania, Atlantic Coast Line, Anaconda, American Telephone, Westinghouse, American Can and Douglas Aircraft.

J. C. Penney Slumps

J. C. Penney was off 2½ at a new bottom for the past year. Others in arrears were Pepsi-Cola, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, Texas Co., Bethlehem Steel, Sears Roebuck, United Aircraft, Du Pont and General Electric.

Carrier bonds were better. Most commodities improved. At Chicago wheat was up ⅛ to ¼ of a cent a bushel, corn ahead ⅛ to ⅜ and hogs steady to 10 cents lower. Cotton advanced 50 to 55 cents a bale.

In a restricted Curb, Colts Patent Fire Arms, Bell Aircraft, Republic Aviation and Brewster Aero elged forward while Creole Petroleum, New Jersey Zinc and Phoenix Securities eased. Volume here was around 98,000 shares versus 96,000 Monday.

U. S. Is Declared Better Prepared In Farm Stocks

Richmond, Va., Jan. 20 (AP).—Dr. John R. Hutcheson, director of the Virginia Agricultural Extension Service, declared today that "Whether by the beneficence of Providence, or by careful planning, we are entering this war much better prepared" than was the case from an agricultural standpoint in the first World War.

"We have enough wheat already produced to last for two years," he told delegates to the annual convention of the Virginia Dairy Products Association. "We also have enough cotton for nearly two years, plus enough tobacco to last for the same period of time.

"However, if we are to win this war—and we are—we must furnish our Allies and our own people with ample supplies of poultry, dairy and pork products, along with large amounts of fats and oils."

Thompson Dividend Voted

Chicago, Jan. 20 (AP).—Directors of John R. Thompson Co., restaurant chain, today declared a dividend of 15 cents a common share, payable February 10 to stockholders of record February 2.

Lions and Eagles Won't Feel Pinch of Canadian Draft

Players on Both Clubs Either Too Young Or Too Old to Be Called for Service

Canada clamors for conscription and word is winging around that the multimillion dollar United States ice hockey industry soon will recoil to the pinch of war. Saturday the first major league iceman was summoned to colors by the Dominion, and National League officials were quoted as fearing that they might lose half their playing personnel of 105 before the season was completed.

What, then, are the prospects for the survival of lesser hockey leagues, such as the American and Eastern, in both of which there are Washington representatives?

While it is still too early to predict about most of the clubs in the American and Eastern Amateur Leagues, both the Washington Lions and the Washington Eagles appear well-fixed unless Canada drastically revises her military qualifications.

The Song Changes

Not long ago both Coach Red Mackenzie, of the Eagles, and Ching Johnson, of the Lions, were joining in an anvil chorus of calamitous cries.

"My kids are too young," moaned Mackenzie.

"My men are too old," chimed in Ching.

But now, my hearties, Messrs. Mackenzie and Johnson are gurgling a different aria, for most of Mackenzie's boys are too young for Canada's draft age of 21-25, or else they're exempted by dependents, while most of Johnson's hirelings are far over the dangerous period or else they, too, are wed.

Draft Won't Hurt

As of last night, neither club expected to lose a single player for military reasons before the end of the season, and for that reason if none other, both the Lions and Eagles may cut many a caper in their respective loops before the campaign closes. For while rivals may be weakened, their own strength should remain at least the same.

The Eagles have 16 players and not a single one appears eligible for immediate service. Eight are 20 or under and, therefore, under the draft age; 6 are married with dependents; one is single but with dependents, and the other has been deferred because of bad eyesight. Of the 20-year-old or under group, two, Odie Hallowell, 19, and Case Howell, 18, are Americans.

The Lions have 17 players, and of the 15 that can be accounted, only one is in any danger of conscription. He is Connie Tudin, 24-year-old winger on loan from Les Canadiens who is the only single Lions player of draft age. The two unaccounted for are Newcomers Tony Graboski and Erin Gibbons, who joined the club in Cleveland Saturday night and have not yet appeared here. Both are believed over 25, however.

What with 10 of the 15 "accountables" married, the Washington Lions' roster is a disturbing influence on any would-be Benedict. Besides Tudin, the bachelors are Polly Drouin, 25, Stan "Rookie" Rooke, 20, Walter Zuke, 25, and Fred Mailley, 25. Mailley has taken out his first papers for American citizenship.

St. John's Five Defeats C. U. Frosh, 28-26

The "giant killers" of St. John's High captured tneir fifth cage victory in seven games yeserday at Brookland, where the Catholic University yearlings were stopped, 28-26.

There were only a few seconds to play when "Sleepy" Thompson, Johnnie rookie, sneaked in the shot that won. The effort gave him a total of 10 points for the game, easily high.

From the start it was a seesaw affair, though S.. John's was leading by 14-10 at intermission. Thompson and George Hughes, who accounted for eight points, were the big guns in the final two periods.

By the Associated Press

Punta Gorda, Fla., Jan. 20.—Louise Suggs, of Lithia Springs, Ga., proved her championship caliber today in winning the annual Punta Gorda Women's Golf Tournament for the second successive year.

She defeated plucky Ella Mae Williams, of Chicago, 1 up, in a thrill-packed 37-hole contest.

be willing to continue when Cochran was again able to play.

Cochran shared first place in the tournament prior to the match with Defending Champion Willie Hoppe, of New York, and Joe Chamaco, of Mexico City. Each had won four of five games.

Last year it was Hoppe who collapsed in a match and was forced to remain in bed for two weeks before coming back to win 17 of 18 matches and cop the three-cushion title for the second straight year.

In the second match of the afternoon, Earle Lookabaugh, of Chicago, edged out Arthur Thurnblad, of Kenosha, Wis., 50 to 47, in 47 innings. Thurnblad led, 26 to 23, at the intermission after 18 innings and the lead changed hands frequently from that point until the match was tied up at 47-all. Then Lookabaugh negotiated a run of three to register his third victory in eight games. It was Thurnblad's third defeat against a like number of victories.

Bethesda Five Upset, 30-16, By Weehoyas

A major upset went to the credit of Georgetown Prep's cagers yesterday when they routed Bethesda-Chevy Chase, 30-16, in a rough contest at Garrett Park.

Winners of only one of their five starts previously, the Little Hoyas were never headed as they stopped a Baron five which had won six times in ten games. At the various quarters they led, 8-4, 13-5 and 22-7.

A total of 28 fouls were called during hostilities, but only Bethesda's Al Sherline was forced out of action. An all-around performance by Prep's McAndrews was the feature.

Pastor Whips Villar Here

Ray Bowen much to the delight of the fans.

That last-round splurge by Villar gave the fans a fitting end to a well-received show, but it wasn't enough for a Villar victory.

With the crowd of 1171 yelling for a Villar knockout, Pastor was the complete master and the decision was unanimous in his favor. Pastor weighed 181, Villar 202. The gate was $1568.

The Preliminaries

In the opening preliminary, scheduled for four rounds, Jackie Cranford, 162, outslugged Kid Stribling, 157, to gain the nod in a hard-fought contest. Both boys are from Washington. Roy Dunn, 160, Washington, provided the fireworks in the night's second fight, a scheduled 6-rounder, when he knocked out Nickie Manfredo, 166½, Baltimore, in 2:07 of the second round. Manfredo was spilled to the deck twic in the abbreviated bout before succumbing.

Vince Truminello, 136½, Baltimore, gained a disputed 6-round decision over Wayne Stewart, 132, of Washington, in the third match. Stewart piled up an early lead, but tired. It could have gone either way.

In the final preliminary Eddie Finnazo, 160½, Baltimore, outpointed Buddy Holmes, 157½, Washington, in a slow 6-rounder. Finnazo wore down Holmes with body blows, despite clean shots landed by his foe.

Eagles Beaten By Skeeters, 8-2

Scrappy Paul Courteau, who was the Eagles' leading scorer until sidelined 13 days ago with a twisted leg, reappeared in the lineup, but retired after the first period. It was decided that his ailing limb needed further rest.

Rangers Whip Bruins, 4-2; Tie for Lead

By International News Service

Boston, Jan. 20.—The New York Rangers battled their way to a top-tie with the Boston Bruins in the National Hockey League standings tonight, putting on a three-goal rally in the final period to defeat the champions, 4 to 2, in a fast, rough contest witnessed by 14,900 fans.

Lynn Patrick pulled the Blue Shirts out of the doldrums with the hundredth goal of his Major League career at 2:33 of the third period. The tally evened the score and the Rangers went to town. Alex Shibickey and Phil Watson, taking advantage of Bruins' short-handedness, beat Frankie Brimsek at 13:56 and 18:47 to forge the winning margin.

Milt Schmidt scored both the Bruins goals in the first and second periods. Bryan Hextall counted in the second period by the Rangers.

The rough play of the contest was climaxed late in the final period when Dit Clapper of the Bruins and Art Coulter of the Rangers became involved in a fist fight. Clapper was given a major penalty. When the game ended the pair resumed their fight and were finally separated by officials.

In addition all college and high school baseball coaches have received bids, along with local sandlot managers and sponsors.

Springfield Tops Rockets by 7 to 1

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 20 (AP).—Springfield, top club in the Eastern division of the American Hockey League, received little opposition from last place Philadelphia tonight as they won, 7 to 1.

It was the nineteenth victory of the season for the Indians and it ended a disastrous two-week road trip for the Rockets, who failed to win a game during the tour.

The Tribe racked up one goal in the first period, two in the second and four in the third. Pete Kelly and Gus Marker were the only Indians who tallied more than once, each turning on the red light twice.

Robinson's Manager Demands Cochrane

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—Promoter Mike Jacobs today announced that Ray Robinson, sensational Harlem welterweight, had been signed to meet Maxie Berger, of Canada, in a 12-round bout at Madison Square Garden on February 20, but Robinson's manager, Curt Hoellman, promptly filed a challenge demanding a title bout with World Champion Freddie Cochrane.

Va. Senate Indorses Nation's War Entry

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Jan. 20.—Turning momentarily from the legislative routine, the Virginia State Senate unanimously adopted a joint resolution today indorsing the Nation's entry into the war against the Axis and pledging support in measures of defense and prosecution of the war effort.

The resolution sponsored by Senator Charles T. Moses, of Appomattox, also commended the leadership of Gov. James H. Price "in the preparation of this State for defense, both civil and military, and for his cooperation therein with Federal agencies," and expressed confidence in incoming Gov. Colgate W. Darden, jr., and Lieut.-Gov. William M. Tuck.

The declaration now goes to the House where it probably will be called up for consideration Thursday.

Highlights of Day

Other highlights of the day's fast-moving session of the legislature included:

Receipt from the Governor of reports from a three-member committee named to study the effects of alcoholic beverage taxation in Virginia, in which the 1940 State taxes were declared a success by Tax Commissioner C. H. Morrissett and Comptroller Leroy Hodges but which Chairman Hunter Miller of the State liquor board recommended be repealed.

Submission by the retiring Governor of 60 interim appointments of which 20 are subject to confirmation by both branches of the Assembly and 40 by the Senate alone. The lists were referred to the confirmations committee of the House and the nominations committee of the Senate without discussion, but there was talk among some members of strong opposition to confirmation of Col. W. M. Kemper, named by Gov. Price to the Unemployment Compensation Commission, and to Lee Long, of Dante, a Price appointee to the State highway commission.

Safety Bill Submitted

Introduction in the upper house by Senator Vivian L. Page, of Norfolk of measures providing for establishment of a State Department of public safety, recommended by the advisory legislative council; calling for free textbooks in the elementary schools, and providing for setting up a pardon board. Both the free textbooks plan and the pardon board have been recommended by Governor Price.

Introduction in the House of a bill by Delegate J. B. Boatwright, of Buckingham to apply the three per cent corporation income tax to the net income of labor unions.

A brief appearance by United States Senator Carter Glass before each House, where he received an ovation.

Announcement that the legislators would continue in sesion on Saturday to expedite the work in hand. Ordinarily Saturday sessions are a rarity until the latter portion of the 60-day legislative period.

Would Affect Police

The proposed safety department would be created by transfer of all the police functions of the present division of motor vehicles. This would have the effect of splitting the present division into two departments, leaving the finance and tax collection activities under one director and putting the police work under a separate head, appointed by the Governor, subject to Assembly confirmation. His salary would be $6000 a year.

A combined age of 176 years was represented on the Senate rostrum when Senator Glass, a former member of the body, was invited to speak by 92-year-old Senator Henry T. Wickham, of Hanover, the president pro tem.

"I sat for three years right over there in that seat, next to former Gov. Mann," Senator Glass said, "and they were three of the happiest years of my life. I hope you will enjoy it as much as I did and that none of you take my place yet in the United States Senate."

He offered similar remarks in the House. Senators John S. Battle, Harry Stuart and Carter Glass, jr., escorted the distinguished visitor to the platform.

Would Revise Virginia Code

Senators Hunsdon Gary, of Henrico, and William D. Medley, of Arlington, submitted a bill during the day to appropriate $50,000 for a complete revision of the Code of Virginia, a task not undertaken in the past 28 years. The State Supreme Court would nominate ten persons from whom the Governor would appoint five commissioners at salaries of $8000 each to handle the work.

Delegates Charles W. Moss, of Richmond; H. P. Spottswood, of Orange, and C. C. Louderback, of Page, offered a revised bill dealing with penalties for theft of automobile tires and tubes. The new measure providing penalties of 1 to 10 years or up to 12 months in jail and a fine up to $500 was in the nature of a substitute for the original bill providing a felony penalty of five to ten years in the penitentiary.

The Senate finance and House appropriations committees opened public hearings this afternoon on the budget bill, getting off to a much earlier start than usual in this tedious work.

Miss Lombard's Body Put on Train for Coast

By the Associated Press

Las Vegas, Nev., Jan. 20.—A coroner's jury tonight certified the death of Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peters, mother of Actress Carole Lombard, and Otto Winkler, the acress' publicity agent, who were killed in the crash of a T. W. A. airliner on a nearby mountain peak Friday night.

The two bodies, together with that of another man, were brought here tonight, last of 22 victims.

Identification was established from dental charts.

Lieut. William B. Hunt of the Air Corps Gunnery School at Las Vegas, who was in charge of the removal of the bodies from the scene, testified that so far as he knew, none remained there.

He said soldiers had been let down on ropes over the steep side of the mountain, and that at least parts of each body were brought to Las Vegas.

Arrangements were completed to place the bodies of Miss Lombard, her mother and Winkler aboard the Los Angeles Limited leaving here later tonight, the train is scheduled to arrive at Los Angeles at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Clark Gable, the actress' grief-stricken husband, and a party of friends will accompany them.

Removal of the last three of the boidies was delayed when a horse, carrying one of them, stumbled and fell over the edge of the snow-covered Table Mountain.

Other inquests were necessary before the bodies of Mrs. Lois Hamilton, of Detroit and other victims could be released. What sort of an inquiry the Army would make into the deaths of 15 of its ferry pilots remained undetermined.

Film Changes to Be Made

Hollywood, Jan. 20 (AP).—Minor changes will be made in "To Be or Not To Be," Carole Lombard's last picture, before it is released sometime next month, United Artists' Studio indicated today.

Scheduled for deletion are two lines of dialogue, referring to a woman on a plane.

Contract Bridge

A contributor, A. J., had a little trouble with a part-score hand. "Will you kindly tell me my correct call with the North cards on this hand?" he asks. "I won't bother telling you what my bid was, let it suffice to say that the result was bad."

S. A. J held these cards:

◇ Q 6 5
♣ Q J 9 8 6 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Dble	?	—

North's wisest move in this situation is to make a two-club overcall, offering an alternative suit at which the hand may be played. He need not fear that South will place him with a strong hand, as he did not redouble over the double.

War Forces N. Y. Zoo To Breed Own Animals

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—The New York Zoological Park today established a breeding station in a secluded section of the reservation to maintain a supply of animals which cannot be replaced because of the war.

Previously the zoo made no special attempt to raise certain animals because they could be purchased easily from collectors.

Jones' Family Of W. Va. Now Has 16th Boy

By the Associated Press

Narrows, Va., Jan. 20.—A nine-pound baby was born to Mr. and Mrs. Grover Jones, of Peterson, W. Va., at 1:15 a. m., today, and they weren't the least surprised to find it was a boy. Hadn't it always been that way, when the first 15 were born?

The Joneses gained Nationwide publicity when they went to the New York World's Fair in 1939 with Franklin D. Roosevelt Jones, the youngest at that time, and his 13 brothers.

A fifteenth son was born in 1940 and went unnamed for six months because, the parents said, "we had just about exhausted the list." No. 15 was named Leslie Howard Jones. It's still too early for the latest arrival to have a name.

The father, 50 years old, is a teacher in Giles County, Va., and one of his former pupils. Mother and child were reported doing well, and the father had gone about his teaching duties as usual. Dr. M. C Newton, of Narrows, officiated at the latest birth.

The 15 previous consecutive children, without a girl having been born to the couple, are William, Richard, Robert, Thomas, John, Pail, Woodrow, Tex Willard, Pete, Rufus, Grover jr., Buck and Franklin Delano.

Jean Tennyson, the soprano whose voice you hear in "Great Moments of Music" over WJSV every Wednesday night at 10:15, is a girl who gets around

She has been soloist at the Salzburg operatic festivals, where you had to be good to be same, and she has been a guest star of the concert stages in such remembered places as Budapest, Prague, Bruenn, Bucharest, Vienna, Graz and Belgrade—all of these, needless to say, before 1939.

But withal, she's just a Chicago girl who in the main was taught how to use her beautiful voice by another Chicago girl with a fine voice too, one Mary Garden by name.

Miss Tennyson started her study of voice in that city when she was 14, and when she was only 19 she come to New York and was good enough to get the leading lady role in the operetta, "Adrienne." With that as a start, and wanting something better, she continued her voice studies in Europe and made her Continental hit in grand opera in Venice.

The news of her success soon reached America—grand operatic America, that is—with the result that she was offered very pleasant jobs with the San Carlo and Chicago Civic Opera Companies. It's nice to report that she was able to accept both, singing alternately three years with each and winning high praise in such notable soprano roles as those of Mimi, Marguerite, Manon Thais, Nedda and Floria. She's also sung with the Los Angeles and Philadelphia Symphony Orchestras—and, all in all, she's made pretty good.

Listen!

with Glynn

Jean Tennyson, the soprano whose voice you hear in "Great Moments of Music" over WJSV every Wednesday night at 10:15, is a girl who gets around.

She has been soloist at the Salzburg operatic festivals, where you had to be good to be same, and she has been a guest star of the concert stages in such remembered places as Budapest, Prague, Bruenn, Bucharest, Vienna, Graz and Belgrade—all of these, needless to say, before 1939.

But withal, she's just a Chicago girl who in the main was taught how to use her beautiful voice by another Chicago girl with a fine voice too, one Mary Garden by name.

Miss Tennyson started her study of voice in that city when she was 14, and when she was only 19 she come to New York and was good enough to get the leading lady role in the operetta, "Adrienne." With that as a start, and wanting something better, she continued her voice studies in Europe and made her Continental hit in grand opera in Venice.

The news of her success soon reached America—grand operatic America, that is—with the result that she was offered very pleasant jobs with the San Carlo and Chicago Civic Opera Companies. It's nice to report that she was able to accept both, singing alternately three years with each and winning high praise in such notable soprano roles as those of Mimi, Marguerite, Manon Thais, Nedda and Floria. She's also sung with the Los Angeles and Philadelphia Symphony Orchestras—and, all in all, she's made pretty good.

Darden Takes Va. Oath Today Without Pomp

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Jan. 20.—Without any of the pomp and frills of the usual inauguration, Colgate W. Darden, jr., of Norfok, former Congressman and World War marine aviator, will take the oath as Governor of Virginia tomorrow, succeeding James H. Price, Richmond attorney.

His inaugural address—"Lasting no longer than 15 minutes"—will be delivered from the portico of the Capitol immediately after administration of the oath of Chief Justice Preston W. Campbell, of the supreme court of appeals at approximately 12:15 p. m.

William M. Tuck, of Halifax, the new Lieutenant Governor, will be sworn in just ahead of the Governor by Justice Edward W. Hudgins. Attorney General A. P. Staples, the third official on Virginia's short ballot, will receive the oath from Justice Herbert B. Gregory at noon in the hall of the House of Delegates before a joint session of the House and Senate.

Mrs. Darden, the former Miss Constance Dupont, and their three children, Colgate W. jr., 11, Pierre, 9, and Irene, 3, will be among the audience for the simple ceremonies.

Because of the war, there will be no parade and the traditional 19-gun salutes to the outgoing and incoming executives also will be dispensed with.

The preliminaries to the inauguration will get under way at 10:45 a. m. with the convening of the House and Senate in their respective chambers. At 11:15 the senators will file into the House wing and at 11:30 the joint Assembly will receive former Governors, members of Congress, judges, State officials and other distinguished guests. Administration of the oath to the attorney general will conclude the program in the House chamber.

In the meantime, Gov. Price and the inaugural committee will leave the executive mansion for Hotel Jefferson, where they will join the incoming Governor and his party. They will drive back to the Capital together and be escorted to the portico at 12:15 p. m. for the rest of the ceremonies. A loudspeaker system will carry the new Governor's words to those gathered on the Capitol Square lawn and three Richmond radio stations will relay them over the air.

Members of the U. S. House of Representatives' Naval Affairs Committee, on which Darden served while in Congress, will attend as the guests of the new Governor.

D. C. Area Works Out Water Precautions for Air Raids

PORTABLE PUMPER, five of which have been purchased for emergency work by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, is examined by Alfred O. Duckett

The District and nearby Maryland and Virginia areas have made plans for concerted action in protecting and maintaining water and sewage lines in case of a bombing attack, M. O. Leighton, chairman of the water and sewer group under the civilian defense setup, revealed yesterday.

"We have made fine progress," he declared. "In fact, if we should have a token air raid tonight, I'm convinced we are fully prepared to handle the situation."

Leighton said that in the District and the nearby areas more than 700 master and journeyman plumbers had volunteered to assist regular water and sewer department crews in case of an emergency. In addition, Leighton said, the water and sewer group has assembled supplies and equipment at strategic points and has compiled a complete inventory of privately owned supplies which may be used in repairing water and sewer main breaks.

Close Cooperation

Water and sewer department officials from the District, Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties in Maryland and Arlington County and the City of Alexandria, in Virginia, have been working in close cooperation since early in November, a month before the war started, according to Leighton.

He said the joint metropolitan area committee has proposed installing four more connections between the District water system and the Washington Suburban Sanitary District's water supply in nearby Maryland. Besides, Leighton said, three connections would be made between the Arlington and Alexandria systems.

Harry R. Hall, chief engineer of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, announced yesterday that five portable pumpers, operated by gasoline motors, had been purchased for emergency use.

Suitable for Drinking

Hall said the pumpers could be used to refill parts of the water system that might be cut off from the supply by the destruction of feed lines. The pumpers are equipped with hose so that the water might be drawn from creeks or wells. In addition, chlorinating devices have been attached, making it possible to purify water pumped from creeks so it would be suitable for drinking purposes.

"Of course," Hall said, "such water would not taste good, but it would supply the need of drinking water temporarily until emergency crews could make the necessary repairs."

The emergency pumpers, he explained, could pump at least 500 gallons per minute. Besides, he said, the pumpers were so maneuverable they could be rushed to almost any spot in either Montgomery or Prince Georges Counties where a break might occur.

Leighton said the District proposed to buy 30 of the pumpers, and that he understood other sections in the metropolitan area are planning to get some of the machines.

Dr. Thompson Is Given New Health Post

Dr. Lewis R. Thompson, director of the National Institute of Health and assistant surgeon general in charge of scientific research, has been appointed chief inspecting officer of the United States Public Health Service.

In announcing the appointment, Surgeon General Thomas Parran stated that Dr. Thompson would head the activities of the Public Health Service and of its liaison officers in the Army Corp areas presently consolidated because of the pressure of military and civilian defense. Thompson is resigning the post at the institute at his own request.

Dr. Rollo E. Dyer, assistant director of the National Institute of Health and also chief of the division of infectious diseases at the institute, will succeed Dr. Thompson as Assistant Surgean General and as director, effective February 1, 1942.

After graduating from the Louisville Medical College in 1905, Thompson served three years with the Philippine Constabulary as medical officer, where he gained valuable knowledge of health conditions in the islands.

In 1913, he resigned as assistant surgeon in the Public Health Service and devoted himself to the study of infantile paralysis in collaboration with Dr. Wade Hampton Frost, of Cincinnati.

eBtween 1917 and 1921, Dr. Thompson served again in the Philippines, resigning the post of chief quarantine officer to engage in industrial hygiene investigation under the Division of Scientific Research until 1930, when he became assistant surgeon general and director of the National Institute of Health.

During Thompson's administration of the national Institute, the National Cancer Institute, a Federally supported research program, was established, in addition to numerous scientific investigations conducted in the field of industral and child hygiene.

Amount of Her Wealth Just Deep Mystery to Doris Duke

By Corinne Hardesty
United Press Staff Writer

Somerville, N. J., Jan. 20.—Publicity-shy Doris Duke Cromwell, "richest girl in the world," got an unwelcome share of it today in a chancery hearing in which, among other things, she testified she didn't know how much money she had in the bank.

She also admitted she frequently signed papers without reading them.

All this was brought out in a preliminary hearing whereby Jersey hopes to chip some 14 million dollars in taxes off 220 million dollars' worth of Duke holdings.

The case hinges on whether or not she lives in New Jersey, but a curious prosecutor led the heiress through a full story of her honeymoon trip around the world, her husband's political ambitions, and even when she came of age

"In 1933."

A question about how much money she had in the bank in 1939 brought a startled:

"Who, me?"

She said she'd have to ask her business agent.

When she said her home was in Hawaii—"an ideal place"—instead of Duke Farms, her 2500-acre estate in Hillsborough Township, N. J., Attorney Harry Walberg brought out her application for a New Jersey driver's license. The nonresidence space had not been filled out.

Miss Duke said she signed the application without reading it.

"Are you in the habit of signing papers without reading them?" Walberg asked.

"Yes, I'm afraid so," she replied.

She said she first went to Hawaii on the last leg of her 'round-the-world honeymoon with James H. R. Cromwell in 1935. She said they began to build a home there in 1937 because "we were both so crazy about it, because we liked the air and"—pointedly—"we had some privacy."

Miss Duke said her husband's interest in Hawaii waned in 1938 because of political ambitions and that he then returned to the States.

"Naturally, I followed him," she said.

She disclosed that she and Cromwell, former United States minister to Canada, discussed a separation in 1940, later separating in May of that year. She returned to Hawaii.

This was the tenth chancery hearing on the case, although the first appearance for Miss Duke. There was no indication when a decision on the case will be reached.

Judge Cautions New Citizens At Md. Rites

Judge Stedman Prescott yesterday cautioned 21 new American citizens that their new status requires them to support and defend the laws of this country even "if it means the giving of your lives," at naturalization exercises in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockeville, Md.

The judge said that as citizens of this land they will have more liberty than is afforded by any other nation.

"You should not only be good citizens but you should participate in all elections and do all the duties that citizens of our great, free Nation should do," the judge told the class, which included 16 British subjects, two Frenchmen, two Russians and one Greek.

The British subjects included Mrs. Nettie MacPhail Rogers, of Silver Spring, who was secretary to County Commissioner Lacy Shaw from 1932 to 1934; William Collie, Rockville; Miss Margaret Ann Bruce, Chevy Chase; Mrs. Muriel Clare Elizabeth Sheller, Bethesda; Mrs. Clara Theresa Lewellyn, Silver Spring; Robert Inches, Laytonsville; Mrs Gertrude Blanche Magruder, Rockville; Mrs. Elizabeth MacKensie Cave, Silver Spring; Mrs. Dorothy Ann Brenchley Fournier, Westmoreland Hills; Mrs. Estelle Martin Broadhurst, Bethesda; Mrs. Olive Mary Elliott, Silver Spring; Edward H. F. Dickens, Bethesda; Mrs. Elizabeth Dempster Turnbull, Takoma Park; Mrs. Doris Coldrey Brooks, Chevy Chase; George W. Frid, Glen Echo, and Mrs. Jessie McNeil Baker, Silver Spring.

Others were Mrs. Gabrielle Kling, of Glen Echo Heights, and Mrs. Laura Helen Schmitter, of Bethesda, both of whom renounced French citizenship; Mrs. Luemella Nicholas Vassilieff, of Rockville and Mrs. Augusta Shaffer, of Crestview, both of whom were Russian born, and Mrs. Stacie Adonis Cocoris, Takoma Park, formerly of Greece.

Court Collections At Alexandria Set All-Time Record

An all-time record total of $42,352.29 was collected for the City of Alexandria and the State of Virginia in Alexandria's corporation and circuit courts during 1941, the annual report of Clerk Elliott F. Hoffman revealed Monday.

The sum of $39,779.58 collected for the State established a new record, Hoffman said, but the total of $2572.71 reported as receipts for the city was below the figures reported during the "boom years" of prohibition.

During the year the court disposed of 427 cases, as follows: Law, 66; chancery, 211; criminal prosecutions, 75, and misdemeanors, 75. The court received and recorded 4724 deeds and 35 charters, issued 1622 marriage licenses, 2638 hunting and fishing licenses, and probated 69 wills, the report showed.

Baxter Stresses Church's Chance To Serve Youth

The church has one of the greatest opportunities in its history to serve the world's youth, Dr. James Finney Baxter, president of Williams College, said last night.

With others, he spoke at a dinner of the Church Society for College Work, a function that drew many distinguished Episcopalians to the Sulgrave Club.

In stressing the need of greater religious activity on the campus, Dr. Baxter paid tribute to the Rev. Dr. C. Leslie Glenn, president of the society, who has been granted a leave of absence as rector of St. John's Episcopal Church to serve as Navy chaplain. Dr. Glenn, it was pointed out, helped organize the society, was its executive secretary for several years, and was for ten years rector of Christ Church, Cambridge, across the Common from Harvard Yard.

The Rev. Stephen Bayne, chaplain to Episcopal students at Smith College, and the Rev. William Laird, Episcopal chaplain at the University of Virginia, also spoke.
